pressure defense that denied the Raiders the ability to use their patented strong inside game (rebounding, post-play) and taking away scoring options not name Siobhan Carnell (27 points). Newton North ran away with the contest in the third quarter, pushing what had been an 18-18 game at halftime to double-digit advantage entering the final eight minutes of play. Last year, with many of the same players, North made it all the way into the South Sectional semifinals. There had been hope that it could occur again, but it was not to be.

"In the third quarter they found open corners and hit some huge three-pointers," said NQ head coach Michael Jorgenson. "Aside from that quarter, we played them close, but we did not have enough to make a late-game run. The first half was a defensive battle (both teams scored two points each in the second) and we were in it. Newton is a strong team. We got some good looks, but the shots were not falling.

"We had high expectations heading into the tournament, but the post season is a different beast. Newton did a nice job shutting down our offense and we just couldn't get back into the game at the end.

"It was a disappointing end to a very successful season."

Next year's team will have a different look. The Raiders will graduate eight seniors off the team, including several starters and key contributors. Players who wrapped up their high school careers against Newton North included Siobhan Carnell (1,000-point scorer, Patriot League all-star), Catherine O'Connell and Kathleen Lynch (league all-stars), Molly Clifford, Amy Carchedi, Kristina Anderson and Jessie Howlett.

This senior class finished the last two seasons with a combined 30-11 record, with two division titles in two separate leagues (Atlantic Coast, Patriot).

"This (class) had played with some great players and they learned from them," added Jorgenson. "They leave being very successful as a group. Their mark on the younger players should be a big plus for us next year. You want your seniors, when they leave, to have made a mark on your program and they did that.

"They will be missed moving forward."

Jeff Pereira Advances to NE Championships Quincy-NQ Track Excels At D1 Championships

Members of the boys and girls' combined Quincy-North Quincy winter indoor track team made waves at the Division 1 Championships and the All-State Championships, both held recently at the Reggie Lewis Track Center in Boston.

The biggest star was Jeff Pereira.

Jeff Pereira placed seventh in the long jump event with a jump of 20'09.75-feet. Pereira's accomplishment earned him an invitation to the All-States. The top-five from the four divisions (1,2,3 & 4), plus the next four best from all the divisions advance to the All-States. Pereira was officially the 12th best in the state.

At All-States, Pereira leaped a personal best 21'05", good enough for fifth overall and a mark that has qualified him for the New England States Championships, which will be held Friday night at the Reggie Lewis Center.

"Jeff was pumped for this meet (All-States), but he had a plan and concentrated on it all week," said Q-NQ head coach Geoff Hennessey, who was quick to give credit to others for the successful outcome. "He got some help from Tommy Campbell, the O'Bryant coach and former All-American from the University of Rhode Island, and Q-NQ assistant coach Jim Finn. They were instrumental in setting the table for this night. We are all proud of Jeff.

"(Jeff) is mulling over several offers from colleges. Confronted with having to run back and forth from the hurdles to the long jump and just coming off a mild leg injury, Jeff made a decision to forego the hurdles to concentrate on the jumping.

"He rolled the dice and came out a winner," Hennessey added. "We backed his decision, we weren't in it for the points, we wanted to maximize his performance and to improve from 12th to fifth is quite an accomplishment."

Other Q-NQ runners standing out at the D1 Championships included Matt McGroarty, who ran a 4:40.6 mile, which was his best time ever and was good enough for tenth place in the event.

On the girls' side, Alyssa Mullen broke the 12 minute mark in the two-mile, placing eighth and just missing the cut-off for All-States by two spots. Erica Brady ran a 5:31 in the mile to come in tenth overall and Jess Davis competed in the two-mile event.

Put Your Money Where Your Mouth Is

(ARA) - With the economy taking a nose dive, Americans are cutting back on spending -- from food and travel to even medical treatments. Both health care and dental care are taking a back seat to more urgent needs.

According to a recent survey by Cigna, a leading provider of health benefits, 41 percent of Americans are taking worse care of their health because of the economy. In fact, nearly half of Americans report that someone in their household has skipped necessary health care in the past year due to the cost, according to a recent Kaiser Foundation Poll. A recent study published in "Health Services Research" found that an increase in unemployment may be associated with fewer preventive care visits.

Even though times are tough, it is still important to take care of your body, particularly your oral health. With 92 percent of adults ages 20 to 64 experiencing dental caries -- which can lead to cavities -- in their permanent teeth at some point in their lives, proper oral care routines and preventive dental care visits are more essential than ever for achieving a cleaner, healthier mouth.

New York-based dentist Dr. Gregg Lituchy advises "include a fluoride rinse in your daily oral care routine to help protect your teeth against cavities. I recommend my patients use an anti-cavity fluoride rinse that delivers multiple benefits, such as Listerine Total Care Anticavity Mouthwash from the makers of Listerine Antiseptic, a product that has been trusted for more than 100 years and has more than 50 clinical studies supporting its safety and efficacy."

Dr. Lituchy offers four easy tips to help reduce the risk of oral care problems and maintain a beautiful smile -- without hurting your wallet:

* Multitask. Rinse your mouth with an anti-cavity mouthwash while you're washing your face.

* Avoid sticky situations. Foods that stick to your teeth create an environment for bacteria to thrive, so the best strategy is to brush your teeth after meals and snacks.

* Don't skip your dental check-ups. Visiting your dental professional at least twice a year is the best way to maintain good oral health and detect problems early on that could cause you more economic pain in the future.

* Technique matters. Learn the proper way to brush and floss. Ask your dental professional or visit the American Dental Association Web site, www.ada.org, which offers educational videos.

Boost 'Me Time' At Home

(ARA) - Just 19 minutes out of the 1,440 minutes in a day -- that's how much time the average American spends relaxing or thinking, according to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Is 19 minutes of relaxing "me time" really enough? Where can people go with-in their home to escape the stress that surrounds them? Personal spaces are becoming increasingly scarce with extended families and friends living together under one roof. As a result, some people find it more difficult than ever to create a tranquil environment where they can "get away from it all" and perhaps increase their essential "me" time.

"Relaxation is a significant antidote to stress and potential health problems. Although ongoing emotional upset around issues in one's life may not be the single root cause of an illness, there is now abundant evidence to prove that unresolved feelings and pressure can be a major contributor to bodily distress and most health-related issues," notes Dr. Harriet Haberman, practicing psychotherapist with over 30 years experience and author of Emotional Wisdom: A Compassionate Guide to the Messages Hidden in Your Feelings. "Personal and global economic events can easily create havoc with our health. This troubling reality emphasizes the importance of finding a safe place to allow oneself to feel nurtured," observes Haberman.

Quiet relaxation zones in backyards and bathrooms built around a water theme continue to provide a highly desired residential sanctuary. "Stressed out homeowners seek us out," says Anthony Pasquarelli of bath and backyard products company Jacuzzi Brands. "Americans are looking for ideas on how to create an escape from the chaos and pressure around them. They want a way to enjoy peace, comfort and solitude and warm water hydrotherapy is the centuries-old solution they desire."

According to Pasquarelli, homeowners are choosing jetted whirlpool bath tubs or air baths because of the transformative experience they deliver. Bathrooms are viewed as one of the last truly private spaces in the home and the one destination that people can count on to get away.

The backyard can be a great place to have a home spa retreat as well. Zen gardens and fountains are popular as are outdoor hot tubs that can be used all year long, even during cold months. Privacy is enhanced with creative landscaping for a discreet hot tub experience.

Having a backyard hot tub provides the opportunity to enjoy hydrotherapy in a controlled and convenient environment. Homeowners gain access to a private space where they can relax and be away from the rest of world. Unlike facilities at hotels or gyms, body-conscious individuals don't have to worry about who will see them.

Besides providing some private relaxation time, hot tubs deliver many health benefits. The heat from the hot tub improves circulation and speeds recovery in damaged tissue. The buoyancy of the water reduces pressure on joints and the spine. Finally, the massage elements relieve muscle tension and alleviate stress.

"It's important to increase those 19 minutes of personal time no matter how busy your household is," confirms Dr. Haberman.

Most Older People Have Diverticulosis

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am a 78-year-old female, active and in good health -- or so I thought. I eat right and never smoked or drank alcohol. Yesterday, a colonoscopy showed severe diverticulosis. The doctor prescribed Benefiber, then left and never returned.

I am stunned. What do I do now? Will I have this forever? Am I unhealthy? How does one develop diverticulosis? What the difference between "osis" and "itis"? -- S.K.

ANSWER: Your world isn't collapsing. You're healthy. You'll have diverticulosis forever. By age 60, half of the people in North America have it. By age 80, two-thirds have it. A diverticulum is a bulge of the inner colon lining through the colon's muscular wall to its outer surface. A diverticulum looks like a small soap bubble. It's only 1/5 to 2/5 inches (0.5 to 1 cm) in diameter. You can thank our diet for diverticulosis. We refine flour and throw away its bran -- the outer coat of grain.

In countries where whole grains (including the bran) are commonly used, diverticulosis is a rarity. Bran and other fiber hold water in undigested food. Without fiber, the food residue dries and becomes hard. The colon muscles have to generate a great deal of force to keep it moving. That force causes the colon lining to pop through the colon wall as a diverticulum. For most, diverticulosis is a silent condition that remains silent for life.

For a few, the diverticulum breaks and causes a local infection in the colon -- diverticulitis. The pain of a diverticulitis attack is usually felt in the lower left corner of the abdomen, and sometimes people have fever and chills along with the pain. The attack is treated by resting the tract and by giving antibiotics.

We're supposed to get 30 grams of fiber a day. Fruits (especially those with edible skins), many vegetables and whole-grain products are the source of dietary fiber. If people cannot get enough fiber in their diet, then commercial products like the one you're taking fill the gap. Metamucil, Perdiem, Citrucel and Fiberall are other examples.

The booklet on diverticulosis explains the ins and outs of this very common disorder. To order a copy, write: Dr. Donohue -- No. 502W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Canada with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

COMPUTER-AIDED CERAMIC RESTORATIONS

While most dental restorations require more than one visit to the dentist, CEREC (Chairside Economical Restoration of Esthetic Ceramics) technology makes tooth restoration possible in one visit. This CAD/CAM technology utilizes a camera, computer, and milling machine to fabricate a precise tooth-colored, single-tooth restoration. CEREC enables the dentist to create everything from veneers to full crowns in a single office visit without impressions or temporaries. This is accomplished by using a special camera to take a picture of the damaged tooth, the image of which is displayed on a screen. The dentist uses CAD (Computer Aided Design) technology to design a restoration, which is then milled from a ceramic material using CAM (Computer Aided Manufacturing) technology.

Could you smile benefit with CEREC restoration? We are a dental practice devoted to restoring and enhancing the natural beauty of your smile using conservative, state-of-the-art procedures that will result in a beautiful, long-lasting smile! We wish to serve you in the most caring, conscientious way possible. Our staff is committed to providing you and your loved ones with excellent dentistry. We are very proud of the quality of dentistry we provide and of the true value of dental care that we can give to our community. We are located at 44 Greenleaf Street. For further information, or to schedule an appointment, please call 617-479-6220. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. The tooth-colored ceramic material employed by CEREC restores teeth to their natural strength, beauty, and function because the material closely matches the composition of natural tooth structure.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Take time from your busy schedule to check out what's going on around you. You might find that someone has been secretly trying to pull the wool over those beautiful Sheep's eyes.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Once again, the Bovine's boldness pays off in uncovering the source of a disturbing workplace situation. Your personal life calls for patience, as a certain matter plays itself out.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Forget about going all out to impress someone in your personal life. Just being yourself is all that matters. A workplace decision will need more time. Don't rush into it.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Some suppersensitive Crabs might take offense at what they perceive as a slight. But a closer look points to a simple misunderstanding. The weekend holds a welcome surprise.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Sure, you can roar your head off over someone's failure to keep a promise. But the wiser course would be to ask why it happened. Be prepared for an answer that might well surprise you.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A developing relationship needs time to find its direction. So please be patient and resist pushing things along. A recently cooled-down workplace situation could heat up again.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Congratulations. Your well-thought-out proposal seems to be working. Someone who hasn't agreed with you on most things in the past could turn out to be one of your major supporters.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Things seem to be going well. However, you can still expect criticism -- some of it pretty heavy. But as long as you can back up your position, you'll be able to rise above it.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Getting together with people who care for you is a great way to get that ego boost you might feel you need at this time. Things start to look brighter by week's end.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You should be able to continue with your plans once you get past those temporary delays. Surprise, surprise. An offer to help comes from a most unlikely source.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Prioritizing your tasks is important this week because of all those demands you have to deal with. The pressure eases in time for you to enjoy the weekend.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Save your energy and stay focused on what has to be done, despite all those distractions you're likely to face. You should see some evidence of real progress by week's end.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are a generous, giving person who is always ready, willing and more than able to help others in need.

A THOUGHT
FOR THE WEEK

When was the last time you took "time off" to do nothing but think - reflect? Nothing to do but let the mind roam, sometimes without conscious direction...

There is a story told about a famous publisher of a well-known magazine. One of his junior editors had swung his office chair around, propped his heels on the window sill and was gazing out into space. The publisher stepped behind him, placed a hand on his shoulder and said quietly, "Don't let me disturb you. I just wanted to tell you that the most important thing you can do is just what you are doing now. Never forget the value of taking ten minutes out to think."

All of us are so pressed these days. Our days are filled with phones, meetings, chores to be done and responsibilities to be taken care of.

Our lives are so filled with doing things that too often we give immediate matters a shallow judgment and future problems little thought at all.

I'm all for taking a little "time off" ... Maybe we'd all be farther ahead if we took time off from getting ahead and gave more time to thinking ahead.

'Will Make Quincy And South Shore More Attractive' Business Community Hails Downtown Revitalization Plan

By TOM HENSHAW

The billion dollar plan to revive the sagging fortunes of downtown Quincy has been greeted with enthusiasm by the business community.

"I couldn't be more excited," said Peter Forman, president and CEO of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce.

"We see it as more than just Quincy Center. We see it as one of several large projects on the South Shore, a combination of new residential and commercial development."

"It will help make the whole South Shore more attractive to Boston professionals. It dovetails with other projects all the way to Plymouth. It's a great regional story."

Daniel Flynn, chairman of Daniel J. Flynn & Co. Inc., the real estate firm, also had high praise for the plan by Street-Works Development LLC of White Plains, N.Y., for the 42 acres.

"I'm personally excited," he said. "I've been waiting for this for many years."

"It's not without challenge in this economy. It won't happen overnight. Trying to finance it right now may be difficult. But it will grow as the economy rebounds.

"Personally, it will help the real estate business. We will see increased values downtown. Vacancies will disappear. Businesses will have to relocate."

Edward Keohane, chairman of the Keohane Funeral Home and president of Quincy 2000 Collaborative, called the plan "a shot in the arm that will bring back the pride in the city."

Finance Committee Also Scrutinizes Recreation Budget Library Services Could Be Cut

BY LAURA GRIFFIN

Branch libraries could be padlocked or Sunday hours slashed if the library's budget is cut in 2010, according to testimony presented Monday at the Finance Committee meeting.

Neither option is a good one, according to Library Director Ann McLaughlin, who said, "Library usage, locally and nationally, is the highest it's been in 100 years."

"Difficult economic times always bring increased usage at public libraries," said McLaughlin, adding that increases in all categories at all of Quincy's libraries are up 38% from last year to a total of 838,508 visits.

Several programs are funded by the Friends of the Library, which is "one of the largest in the state," according to McLaughlin.

McLaughlin and Barry Welch, director of the Recreation Department, outlined their programs and expenditures during the Finance Committee's first meeting on the 2010 fiscal year budget.

Committee Chairman John Keenan scheduled preliminary hearings with all city departments in preparation for reduced budgets for all or most departments next year.

When the final 2010 budget is submitted, councillors will review the exact figures and outlays again for each department.

This month, all department heads are being asked to review their programs, the department's personnel needs and costs, and outline their plans for a level-funded 2010 budget or budget cuts of 5% or 10%.

Under the law, the mayor submits his proposed budget in the spring and the City Council must approve or reduce the bottom line. While the council may recommend

Public Meetings On Downtown Planned

Mayor Thomas Koch announced a sweeping series of public meetings across Quincy over the next two months to discuss the $1 billion plan to redevelop Quincy Center and to answer questions from residents.

"This will be the largest private investment in our City's history, and by the same token, it will be the most extensive public process for any project in Quincy history," Koch said. "We are taking the show on the road, and it is truly exciting."

Mayor Koch and the team from Street-Works Development are now in the process of scheduling between 15 and 20 public meetings before the end of May. The schedule will be published by The

Governor Outlines Reasons For Proposed 19-Cent Gas Tax During Appearance At Library

Patrick Pitches Transportation Reforms At Visit Here

By ROBERT GOHL

For 90 minutes last Thursday, Gov. Deval Patrick was the center of attention at a public information forum held in the Atrium of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Some 200 Quincy residents and city and state officials listened as the governor discussed reforms to the state's transportation program. He also responded to two dozen questions from the audience concerning transportation issues, his proposed 19-cent gas tax, the condition of the economy and unemployment statistics.

"We have a profound backlog in terms of maintenance and upkeep of our roads, bridges and rail systems," Patrick said. "It is the result of a decade or more of neglect. The Transportation Finance Commission, which finished its work two years ago, estimates that a list of our deferred maintenance would be about $15 to $19 billion in the next 20 years."

"We have put off decisions for a very long time," the governor continued. "It has affected the quality of the roads we drive on. Massachusetts drivers spend $718 million on car repairs directly related to the shoddy quality of our roads.

"We have service issues both in terms of quality and reliability on the T and commuter rail. We have revenue needs from the Big Dig. Four billion dollars worth of debt has been stashed away at the Turnpike and the T which has placed those agencies in financial peril. We know we need reform and we know we need revenue."

Reform, Gov. Patrick said, "starts by taking the six different agencies that have responsibilities for different pieces of the transportation network and collapsing them into one."

The governor envisioned one entity with four divisions: The Highway Division, a Rail and Transit Division, an Airport and Aviation and Port Division and a Registry of Motor Vehicles Division.

"We would get some savings from that in terms of eliminating redundancies and duplications. We estimate that we can take 300 positions out of that combined organization."

Gov. Patrick also noted his office is proposing reform to the MBTA pension system. "The proposal has some health benefit changes to get some savings and to align Transportation Department employees with the state system."

The governor's proposal will put out to bid the service centers along the turnpike and use those funds to pay down transportation debts such as the Big Dig. Patrick estimates that over 20 years, these reforms would generate $2 to $3 billion which still is not enough to pay down the debt. He then explained the need for a 19-cent gas tax and where the funds would be used:

- 4 cents to roll back the toll increase on the Turnpike and Tunnels
- 6 cents to maintain existing MBTA services and avoid fare increases over the next few years
- 1.5 cents to Regional Transit Authorities
- 1.5 cents to targeted regional road projects
- 3 cents to southern, western and northern rail projects

- 1 cent for innovative gas and toll solutions, and
- 2 cents to begin to stop the costly practice of paying transportation personnel from capital funds.

According to Patrick, these projects will position the entire Commonwealth for strong economic growth and help revitalize major urban areas outside Route 128. Further, this tax would avoid cuts in service on ferries and commuter boats and fare increases would not be needed.

Greenbush commuter rail service would not be cut on weekends and evening hours not curtailed. Ferry service to Hingham would be curtailed.

The governor told of a report that in order to repair all the neglect of the past 20 years. That would cost an additional 73 cents on the gas tax.

Patrick then spent one hour listening and responding to questions from those attending the briefing. With paper and pen in hand, the governor responded to raised hands, listened to questions, concerns and personal stories and responded with detailed answers.

Many in attendance had recently lost their jobs, had staggering debt obligations such as student loans and medical situations and simply could not afford anymore taxes. Additional concerns were of unfinished bike trails, unsafe bridges and tunnels, inefficient workers at state offices, pollution levels and unemployment benefits. Patrick answered all questions asked despite their criticism of himself and his administration. He was candid and conversational with those in attendance and appeared moved by their conditions and said that he feels their pain, anguish and promised things would improve.

The session at the Thomas Crane Library was one of six regional meetings with the governor in an attempt to assist the public in understanding the complex financial conditions existing today in Massachusetts.

But: 'I Am Considering A Run,' Cahill Says

Lottery Plan No Step To Governor Campaign

By TOM HENSHAW

State Treasurer Tim Cahill has proposed a new and radically different way of attacking the budget problems that have left the state with an anticipated mid-year deficit of some $500 million.

He wants to license three slot machine parlors across the state and lease the State Lottery in a public/private relationship that could mean as much as a billion dollars upfront and $900 million a year.

But there are those on Beacon Hill who see Cahill's plan as the opening shot fired in an intra-party contest with Gov. Deval Patrick in the 2010 state Democratic primary election.

"I do not plan to run for governor now," Cahill told The Quincy Sun in a telephone interview. "If there is an open seat, I'm in; if not, I'll wait and see."

"You can say I'm considering it. I don't want to say that I won't run, but I'm not active. I'll say something later this year, after he (Patrick) does.

"Quincy is a good base for me. I'm strong on the South Shore so I would be starting with a strong base."

Cahill said he is fully cognizant of another Quincy boy, Frank Bellotti, the lieutenant governor who challenged and defeated his governor, Endicott Peabody, then lost to Republican John Volpe.

"I have no illusions," he said, "but the reason for this plan is to help with the financial problems of the state and see that people who want to play don't have to go out of Massachusetts."

Cahill outlined his proposal to the Boston Chamber of Commerce last week. It works like this:

"License three locations around the state... and provide each location with approximately 2,500 to 3,000 Video Lottery Terminals (slot machines) for a total of 7,000 to 9,000 machines."

"I propose that rather than have the state operate and own the machines, we

B.J.'s Team, City Council Meet March 30

City Council will hold a public hearing March 30 on a proposal for a B.J.'s Warehouse outlet at 200 Crown Colony Drive.

Councillors set the date after learning that QBJ Land Development LLC agreed to drop their claim for an automatic special permit or 'constructive grant' due to default.

The developers had proposed a 84,000 square foot retail center at the site of the former Patriot Ledger printing plant last August. They, originally, planned a November ground-breaking for the $20 million project.

However, the project's been detoured by legal challenges ever since.

In October, the Planning Board withheld site plan approval and legal challenges followed.

Following the Planning Board's 2-2 vote, developers sought relief in Land Court which, subsequently, sent the matter back to the Planning Board.

In October, QBJ filed a parallel application for a Special Permit from the City Council. When the council failed to set a date for a public hearing, QBJ claimed the Special Permit by default.

The developers charged that the City Council failed to hold a public hearing, as required, within 60 days of the application.

In response to that claim, City Solicitor James Timmins filed a civil suit in Dedham Superior Court on behalf of the city. Timmins challenged the developer's claim of a "constructive grant."

Timmins told councillors March 2 that QBJ had agreed to drop its claim of "constructive grant" or automatic Special Permit and will present its plans at the public hearing.

TROOP 42 BOY SCOUTS got a civics lesson at City Hall recently when they attended a recent City Council meeting and Councillor Joseph Finn described each portion of the meeting to the Scouts. Is your retirement account now less than your kid's weekly allowance?

Why not let a little laughter lift your spirits.

The Quincy Partnership will host its 11th annual St. Patrick's Day Celebration Friday, March 20 at the Quincy Lodge of Elks in the newly renovated Tirrell Room, 254 Quarry St., West Quincy. The traditional corned beef and cabbage fare will be served; but the long tables of seated guests will be replaced by round tables and plenty of space.

The fun and festivities featuring jokes, gags and assorted banter begin at 11:45 a.m. in the hall which has been expanded to accommodate about 300 patrons. Tickets are $50 per person and are available at the Mayor's Office, City Clerk's Office and the Best Western Adams Inn, 29 Hancock St.

As in past years, local politicians will trade barbs and topical jokes at one another all for a good cause. Proceeds from this year's luncheon will help defray costs of the Quincy Flag Day parade and ceremonies.

Businessman Daniel Flynn and City Clerk Joseph

Shea, both Partnership members, will team up as the program's emcees. They will also recreate their "Shea-Zak" routine which is a take-off on the "The Amazing Carnac" Tonight Show skit made famous by Johnny Carson and Ed McMahon.

"Joe's healthy again and he's looking forward to a great day for the city," says a smiling Flynn, noting the city clerk recently returned to work after undergoing surgery.

This year's luncheon is sure to help anyone escape the seemingly endless array of doom and gloom financial headlines.

"(The luncheon) is all in fun," Flynn says. "Pack your feelings at the door and come in and relax and we'll have a good laugh. In these times we all need a time to have a few light moments because the economy is so challenging. It's good to take a break and laugh for a while with our friends and neighbors."

Can't miss targets by the would-be jesters include the mayor's office carpet and wide-screen television as well as the West Quincy billboard; those subjects have generated many news stories since the last luncheon.

"I'm sure we'll be hearing about the mayor's carpet and big-screen TV amongst other things, some of them national news," Flynn points out.

Mayor Tom Koch knows he'll have a bulls-eye on his back at the luncheon. But he says he'll be ready to dish it back.

"I'm looking forward to the event. I'm thick-skinned and I have plenty of it. I'm looking forward to the banter with my colleagues in government and friends in the business and labor communities. I am sure there won't be any jokes about the TV and the carpet in my office," the mayor added, tongue planted firmly in cheek.

Koch, whose late father Richard Koch, Jr., was instrumental in running the city's Flag Day parade for years, knows the event is really for a good cause. "Flag Day is special to our city, and I am thankful that the Partnership is stepping to the plate, as it always does. We are a strong community because of groups like the Partnership that truly care about Quincy.

"I am more than willing to take a few lumps for a good cause," the mayor adds.

The marquee name of this year's scheduled performers is again the quick-witted Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti. "Mike is usually on his game and does a very good job," Flynn says. "He comes prepared with notes and he engages writers well in advanced but the funniest stuff he says is no where near his notes. When he's off-script, he's absolutely hilarious."

Other well-knowns who will be featured as part of the entertainment include Norfolk County Register of Probate Patrick McDermott who usually sings an Irish tune, Councillor Michael McFarland, and Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis.

State Treasurer and former city councillor Tim Cahill, another frequent performer at the luncheon, has been extended an invitation to participate. "Hopefully he will take advantage of it. He's usually very good about making an appearance," Flynn adds.

Sen. Michael Morrissey and Norfolk County District Attorney William Keating may also make an appearance.

Unlike some past St. Patrick's Day luncheons, there will not be a professional comedian this year.

"We have plenty of material - too much material in fact - so we don't need a professional this year," Flynn chuckles.

There is a process in assembling the jokes and other antics that dominate the day.

"Certain members of the Partnership meet and the follies of the day are usually left to certain writers," Flynn explains. "We allow a lot of people to do their own presentations. I personally try to involve the national news as well as some of the state-wide stuff and not just the same-old Quincy stuff. I like to keep the afternoon moving along and I think my role has always been to probably say things that some of the politicians may be thinking but certainly don't have the courage to say."

But, in a slightly more serious tone, he adds: "We try to be respectful and tactful. We're not looking to hurt anybody. But the reality is the truth is funnier than anything you could have imagined."

The event has become a rite of spring in Quincy.

"I think a lot of people look forward to it," Flynn says. "I know personally I do. It's great to get out and have a little fun. With the changes that have gone on and thank God the (new Quincy) high school's been built so we won't hear too many high school jokes. I do think the (West Quincy) billboard's going to be something and of course I did save the front page from the..."

Well, that's as far as that joke's going to go.

To hear the rest of it, and many others, plan on attending the Quincy Partnership's St. Patrick Day's Luncheon.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1919 real photo postcard view of the old Norfolk Downs railroad depot at the end of Billings Road. Holmes Street crosses where there appears to be a line on the road. This entire scene has changed today. The station was on the Newport Avenue side of the railroad tracks and is now the site of a Chipotle Mexican restaurant. The Pneumatic Scale Company built the building behind the station on the right when they moved here from Boston in 1906. That building was replaced in 1920 with a much larger white building that was in turn demolished to make room for today's Stop & Shop supermarket in the 1990s. The building on the left on the corner of Holmes Street was the Norfolk Theater and later was the Pay and Take Furniture store until it was destroyed by a fire in the 1970s. Since then that space has been a parking lot. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Still, Mr. Bosworth was compelled to show these interesting photos in future issues of The Sun.

Budget Almost Finished; Layoffs Could Reach 117

By FRANK McCAULEY

The city will likely lose 117 workers from the school, fire and police departments during the fiscal year 1991, which begins July 1, Mayor James A. Sheets said.

The layoffs represent nearly 6% of the city's 2,000-employee workforce.

The school department is planning to lay off 52 people including 40 teachers.

Acting Police Chief Paul Nestor said the 201-member force would be reduced to 194 through retirements. Five civilian jobs will also be cut. Fire Chief Paul O'Connell said his department would likely lose 21 men, including 15 to 18 firefighters.

The completed budget is expected to be $121 million.

Most city officials are blaming Gov. Michael Dukakis, who, they say, has mismanaged the state.

PROPERTY VALUATION FIGURE CERTIFIED

Real estate and personal property valuations for the city's fiscal year 1990 tax bills have been certified by the Commonwealth's Department of Revenue "as full and fair," this according to the Commissioners' certification standards.

Since the city was last certified by the DOR, as of January 1986, the city's assessments as of July 1, 1989 now satisfy FY90 requirements under state law.

Elmer (Mike) Fagerlund, chairman of the Board of Assessors, said the process would enable the city to set FY90 tax rates following a classification public hearing scheduled for March 19 at 7 p.m. in the City Council Chamber.

QUINCYISM

The Lincoln-Hancock Community School was offering scholarships to high school seniors who graduated from the school and were planning on attending college. Charles Ryder, owner of Ryder's of Quincy, was elected president of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association. He succeeds Robert Colman, of Colman's Sporting Goods Store. Other officers included Richard P. Barry, first vice-president, Beth Ann Strenger, second vice-president and Roger Perfetti, treasurer. QCTV Channel 3 presented a panel discussion on "Alzheimer's Disease."

Mayor Sheets named a number of city officials a Household Hazardous Waste Committee. The committee included Ward One Councillor Peter V. Kolson, Executive Secretary Thomas Koch and John Menz of the Fire Department. Quincy officials were on hand to open the Quincy Hospital's new Emergency Walk-In Center. Marie's Kitchen

Two Delicious Polenta Entrees

When I told some of my co-workers that I was going to put a couple of recipe with "polenta," they did not know what it was.

Polenta is a corn meal and when cooked it is similar to grits, so popular down South.

Today's recipes contains one in which I made a polenta lasagna, and the second one is from my daughter Ann Marie who made her entree with eggplant.

EGGPLANT, POLENTA LASAGNA

1 large or two medium sized eggplant
2-3 cups polenta (cooked)
1 quart tomato sauce grated Romano or Parmesan cheese shredded mozzarella
bread crumbs for coating eggplant 1 egg mixed with milk for coating
salt and pepper to taste

Cook the polenta according to instructions netting two cups or so. Slice eggplant about 1/4 inch thick. If you prefer, you can peel the skin off. Place the eggplant in the egg mixture and then the bread crumbs. Then bake on a greased cookie sheet in a 350 degree oven and bake until almost done.

In a slightly greased baking pan, place some tomato sauce on the bottom, then a layer of the eggplant, and spread the polenta over, another layer of sauce, and both cheeses. Then follow until top layer is topped with the two cheeses. Bake covered in a 350 degree oven for 30-35 minutes and then uncovered for the last five or ten minutes.

Cut in squares when cooled.

My recipe is a little simpler in that it is made with a tube polenta that can be purchased at most supermarkets. It all happened one day when I didn't know what to make and then noticed the polenta in the refrigerator, and decided to try something different. It turned out to be a family favorite and so simple to prepare.

POLENTA LASAGNA

1 tube polenta (I used about half of a tube)
3 cups tomato sauce
shredded mozzarella
grated romano cheese

In a slightly greased baking pan, place a layer of tomato sauce on the bottom. Cut polenta in half inch pieces. Place the polenta slices over the sauce and then the cheeses, another layer of sauce and continue until topped with sauce and cheese. Bake uncovered in a 350 degree oven for about 25 minutes or until bubbly.

Cupcake Baking Contest At Houghs Neck Congregational

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

When I was asked to be a judge at a cupcake baking contest, I was pleased because I enjoy cupcakes, especially chocolate.

When I arrived at the Houghs Neck Congregational Church, I was warmly greeted by Gail MacKay, chairman of programs for the Mother's Club, who had called me to ask to be a judge and other club members.

Sharing the judging with me was Jennifer Logue and Wendy Connor.

MacKay said this is the second contest held at the church, the first one was an essay contest held recently on "What I Like About Living in Houghs Neck." She said the contest was done for "something different to do for the neighborhood."

On a bright colored table, there were dozens of beautifully decorated cupcakes. The ones that we were to judge were numbered. So the other judges and I went on into the kitchen and tasted each cupcake and then selected numbers, added them up and picked winners first, second and third place.

The first prize was won by Mary Giggey, for her delicious spice zucchini raisin cupcake; the second prize went to Martha Chase for a sumptuous chocolate, devil's food coconut cupcake; and the third prize to Susan Rheault for a tasty lemon creme cupcake.

After the judging was over, MacKay invited everyone who attended a chance to decorate their own plain cupcake.

Patrol Officers Accept One-Year Wage Freeze

Quincy Police officers voted overwhelmingly to accept a one-year wage freeze, becoming the fourth union to accept Mayor Thomas Koch's request aimed at easing budget cuts and preserving jobs amid the fiscal crisis facing the city.

The Quincy Police Patrol Officers' Association, with about a 150 members, voted strongly in favor of Koch's proposal, Monday, which calls for extending the current contract and deferring negotiated raises for a year. Bruce Tait, president of the QPPOA, declined to disclose the exact tally of the vote, citing privacy reasons. But he said the margin was "overwhelming."

"Our officers sent an overwhelming message with this vote that they care about this city, the safety of its residents and their fellow officers on the job," Tait said. "This agreement will keep patrol officers on the street where they belong, and that is always our foremost priority."

Officers join firefighters, City Hall employees and school crossing guards in a group that have strongly endorsed the wage freeze to date. The savings entering the fiscal year that begins in July are now approaching $1 million. If all 2,400-city employees agree to the wage freeze, that number will top $5 million.

"I am proud and grateful that our officers have shown, as they do every day on the job, a willingness to make sacrifices for the city and its residents," Koch said. "This wage freeze, as well as the others we have negotiated to date, shows what happens when everyone is at the table working together in the best interest of the city. Our work is far from done, but we will keep at it."

The mayor has held open meetings with almost every city union to date to formally make his request and answer questions from workers. Talks are ongoing with the remaining unions, including Quincy public school teachers, and Koch said he is "Hopeful" that all unions will join together and recognize the seriousness of the situation the city faces.

"We will be facing budget cuts with or without the wage freeze, there is no getting around that," Koch said. "But this will undoubtedly make a substantial difference in job reduction and service cuts. We are actively pursuing every option to protect the city's future, and this is a critical piece this year."

The administration is currently writing the FY2009 budget, which will include a total of $6.8 million in state aid cuts over this year's original budget and declining revenue from other sources. Koch said he expects to have the budget in front of the City Council in April.

City Awarded $171,282 E-911 State Grant

Quincy's legislative delegation announces that the Executive Office of Public Safety and Security and the State 911 Department has awarded $171,282 in grants to the City of Quincy to support its 911 emergency dispatch communications center and enhance public safety.

According to State Senator Michael W. Morrissey (D-Quincy) and State Reps Ronald Mariano (D-Quincy), Bruce Ayers (D-Quincy) and A. Stephen Tobin (D-Quincy) the grant was drawn from a fund created last year by the Legislature and Governor Deval Patrick, who approved a law creating a State 911 Department and a single surcharge on each subscriber whose communication service is capable of accessing and utilizing the enhanced 911 system in the Commonwealth.

"The new law assured that citizens would be able to call for police, fire or emergency medical services whenever and from wherever needed," Morrissey said.

"Also with the fund public safety workers taking calls have been trained and have state of the art equipment to provide the needed help," Ayers added.

Customers pay a $0.75 surcharge per month that is used to pay for enhanced training, upgraded equipment, infrastructure and incentives to regionalize 911 operations. That surcharge provided $19.1 million in FY09 and approximately $21.5 million in FY10 directly to 911 answering centers to enhance training, upgrade equipment and support operating expenses.

So far this fiscal year, $14.1 million in grants has been awarded to support emergency dispatch communications centers to enhance public safety.

Key Link For Faxon Park On Preservation List

Faxon Park could tie or surpass Merrymount Park as the largest open space area in the city if the Community Preservation Committee votes to purchase a 2.9 acre lot on the park's border.

The lot would link the 57-acre Faxon Park to the 13-acre Avalon Estates parcel and adjoining open space of some 15-acres.

According to Kristen Powers, director of Parks, Forestry and Cemetery, Merrymount Park is currently listed at 80 acres and Faxon Park at 57 acres.

Powers said that the 28 to 30 acres of adjacent open space have not been officially added to Faxon Park.

In order to join the abutting properties to Faxon Park, Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond has sought the rezoning of the privately-owned 2.9 acres.

Raymond also wants the Community Preservation Committee (CPC) to purchase the small parcel as he describes the property as the major link joining Faxon Park to the adjoining open space areas.

Raymond, also, considers the lot critical to long-term planning for Faxon Park and recently made unsuccessful efforts to have the parcel rezoned to open space.

"The highest and best use of this (property) is open space," Raymond said last week, adding that the council made a "mistake in not moving (the rezoning) forward.

The 2.9 acre lot is listed on Circuit Street and is owned by the Bates Trust.

According to Raymond, the 2.9-acre lot is landlocked with no public roadways or access.

Jim Barrett, CPA, who is working on behalf of the Bates Trust, said that he recently filed the necessary application for community preservation in City Hall. "We're looking forward to it," Barrett said of the potential impact of the small lot on Faxon Park. "We're excited about it, too."

Barrett said that the owners of the Bates Trust were pleased with the prospect of their land expanding the Faxon Park access. "They know what's going on."

"The area is so wonderful," Raymond said, calling Faxon Park "one of the nicest parks in the City of Quincy."

Raymond said some 50 to 60 persons turned out recently to form Friends of Faxon Park and they are all eager to improve the park which, he said, needs a master plan.

The newly formed Friends of Faxon Park would score a major victory if the city purchases Bates property and could be a catalyst for added attention to the park.

At this time, much of Faxon Park is poorly marked and in need of an upgrade. A small non-descript sign marks the main entrance from the heavily trafficked Faxon Park Road.

Faxon Park does offer a tidy playground, tennis courts, a few walking trails along ancient stone walls, and a view from its crown that stretches beyond a condominium development to the ocean.

"It would create a circular route into the greater Faxon Park area," said Raymond of the Circuit Road lot which he considers the "critical link" for Faxon Park.

The 13-acre "Avalon" open space abutting Faxon Park was purchased for $3.3 million in 2007 under the city's Community Preservation (CPC) program.

An adjoining parcel of approximately 15 acres was purchased in the 1990's by the city as a potential location for a new high school.

Community Preservation purchases are financed by state funds and the city's motel and hotel tax.

The funds must be used for open space, historic preservation and affordable housing.

Councillors recently rejected Raymond's rezoning request after determining that the property owners have not filed any request for such a change.

"I applaud the idea of trying to get as much open space as possible," said Councillor John Keenan who said that rezoning the lot, without a request from the owner or owners, was premature.

On several occasions, Keenan warned that rezoning the parcel, at this time, would set a dangerous precedent, pre-empt the owners' rights and smacked of a land-taking.

The parcel is currently assessed at over $300,000.

Preservation Funds Dip; Requests Increase To 30

The nine-member Community Preservation Committee (CPC) faces a dip in funds this year as the state reduces financial support for local communities by more than 50%.

At the same time, the CPC is experiencing an increase in applications, according to Ward 3 City Councillor Kevin Coughlin.

As of this week, the committee received some 30 applications for local projects.

According to Steve Perdios, Chairman of the CPC, the committee expects to have approximately $500,000 in available funds for 2009 projects.

Perdios said that local funding is expected to reach $1.1 million with a 35% match from the state of $385,000. That brings this year's total CPA fund to about $1.5 million.

"However, keep in mind that we are first committed to pay down the bond we took two years ago.... I believe the payment is roughly $950,000," Perdios said in an e-mail outlining the funding estimates. This will be the second of four payments on the bond.

The city's preservation funds are raised through hotel and motel taxes. While that has remained fairly level, the state has reduced its contribution in each of the past two years.

The state provided a 100% match to municipal preservation funds from its inception in 2000 to 2007. Last year, the state's contribution was cut to 75% of the local funds.

This year, the state's match is expected to drop to 35% because the number of participating communities statewide has increased while the real estate market is suffering setbacks. The state funded the program through fees on real estate deeds.

Perdios heads the CPC with Vice-Chairman Kevin Coughlin and members, Maureen Mazzimas, Connie Driscoll, Tony Ricci, Paul Kodad, John Brennon, John Menz and P.J. Foley.

Residents Claim Promises Broken On Cliff Walk Plan

More than a dozen residents urged city councillors to reject an application for a 96-unit addition to the Cliff-Walk apartment complex on Willard Street during a public hearing March 2.

The residents claimed they'd been promised that the Willard Street lot would not be developed and now they may face additional rental units in their neighborhood on that same lot.

The opponents, also, presented petitions signed by over 400 persons protesting the development.

Prior to the residents' comments, Bryan Connolly, attorney for Corcoran Developers, outlined the benefits of the proposal, ranging from an additional $500,000 in taxes to a "quality project."

He stated that the one and two bedroom units would attract very few children for school purposes, require little policing, few city services, and have minimal impact on traffic.

Connolly said the plan had been modified repeatedly after neighborhood meetings from eight stories to four to five stories and the number of units reduced from 168 units to 96 units.

Councillors continued the public hearing and requested that Traffic Director Jack Gillon speak at the next meeting and provide a written report. No date was set.

The neighborhood speakers described traffic problems, conservation issues, potential flooding and overburdened sewage lines.

"It's like a Dead Zone over there," said one speaker, referring to an incomplete structure on Willard Street, halted apparently due to funding problems.

Residents cited pledges by the National Fire Protecsell them to a private operator/owner in the form of a 15-20 year concession.

"This plan as outlined, based on a conservative five to seven times cash flow multiple, could generate between $1.95 and $3.35 billion upfront for the state.

"In addition to the upfront payment, the state would see annual revenue from these machines of between $203 to $243 billion.

"The introduction of VLTs will have an impact on Lottery revenues.

"In order to solve that potential future problem, I suggest that we be open to the notion of creating a public/private partnership for the Lottery as well.

"What kind of concession could we obtain for the Lottery?"

"Quite possibly a guaranteed revenue stream that would continue to flow to cities and towns in excess of $900 million per year as well as an upfront payment of as much as $1 billion for a 50-year concession."

Chahill suggested that a third of the funding obtained from the public/private partnerships be assigned to the state's rainy day fund, part to a fund to pay unfunded retiree health benefits and part to an endowment for higher education.

Retiree health benefits, known as Other Post Employee Benefits, or OPEB, represent a potential $13 billion liability to the state.

Chahill called that "a debt that is likely even greater than that of the Big Dig -- one that could adversely impact our credit rating in the very near future."

Chahill said his proposal has met a mixed reaction.

"It depends on who you talk to," he said. "It could be a bridge to casinos in five or ten years."

Quincy's James McConville Promoted To Brigadier General

Colonel James C. McConville of Quincy has been promoted to Brigadier General and Deputy Commanding General (Support) 101st Airborne Division.

McConville, a 1977 graduate of Archbishop Williams High School, graduated from the U.S. Military Academy and was commissioned as an infantry officer in the Regular Army in 1981. He holds a bachelor of science degree in Economics from the U.S. Military Academy, a master of science degree in aerospace engineering from Georgia Institute of Technology, and was a National Security Fellow at Harvard University.

McConville's career awards and decorations include the Legion of Merit, the Bronze Star, the Defense Meritorious Service Medal, the Meritorious Service Medal, Air Medals, the Joint Service Commendation Medal, the Army Commendation Medal, the Army Achievement Medal, the Combat Action Badge, the Expert Infantryman's Badge, Master Army Aviator Badge, Air Assault Badge, Parachutist Badge and others.

Brigadier General McConville's wife Maria and their three children, Michael, Jessica and Ryan, participated in the promotion ceremony.

Archbishop Williams High School classmates Jim Welch '77, Maryann Welch

'77 and Kevin McCarthy '77 attended the ceremony.

"We congratulate Brigadier General McConville for his outstanding military career and we thank him and his family for the many sacrifices they have made in the name of freedom," said Dr. Carmen Mariano, president of the Catholic, co-educational, college preparatory high school.

"His leadership and character are sources of pride for all of us who hold Archbishop Williams High School close to our hearts. I am constantly impressed and inspired by the extraordinary legacy of our school. Jim is a very special part of that legacy."

tion Association (NFPA) not to develop the property.

Eileen Kelly of Woodcliff Rd. stated that "NFPA said they would not further develop" the property.

Another Woodcliff Rd. resident, Mike Casinelli called the project "a slap in the face" and said there are "too many apartments in this part of Quincy."

Robert Romeri of Willard St., along with a number of residents, repeated details of a NFPA agreement, "We met with NFPA," and they promised, "We will keep the rest of this area open."

Connolly, a former Ward 4 councillor, stated there are no agreements to prevent the development.

However, another former Ward 4 councillor Michael D'Amico informed the council through a letter that such "no-build zones" exist.

D'Amico represented the ward during the original development.

"I urge the neighbors and City Council to review all the previous PUD's relevant to the NFPA area," wrote D'Amico.

"You will find significant buffer zones and no build zones as part of those permits to protect the abutting neighbors.

"Local easements... running through the St. Moritz condos were closed and were not to be used for access to these or future developments.

D'Amico said the access would be a breach of the previous permits and urged the council to reject the application and "honor the hard work the community put into having these safeguards in place."

The letter concluded with the statement that both NFPA and the developer had promised "their last permit was their last..."

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

Commercial Kitchens

I'm in the office having just composed a flyer, which will be given to some of our restaurants by the health department during their inspections. During those inspections, if deficiencies are discovered in the areas of the fire department's concern, they will contact us to assist in gaining compliance. Meanwhile, I'd like to take this opportunity here, to focus on the issues designated within this flyer.

Kitchen hood and ductwork cleaning is a concern with us where grease accumulation can pose a serious fire hazard. Frequently, the fires we experience within restaurant kitchens within this city start as grease fires. They can easily extend beyond the confinement of the hood if the hood and ductwork are not frequently cleaned of grease. A fire extending beyond this confinement can lead to a far greater loss, and even death as we recently experienced in the West Roxbury fire.

Maintenance of the kitchen fire suppression system is of equal importance where an incipient fire can be easily contained or extinguished by these fixed systems before they extend beyond the confinement of the hood as well. Maintenance of these systems might initially appear as a financial burden for owners, while time and time again we have seen that neglect and not adhering to the required maintenance schedule can have its price as well. So let me review some of the applicable NFPA Standard #96 with you here.

"Hoods, grease removal devices, fans, ducts and other appurtenances shall be cleaned to bare metal prior to surfaces becoming heavily contaminated with grease and oily sludge.

If found to be contaminated with deposits from grease laden vapors, the entire exhaust system shall be cleaned by a properly trained, qualified and certified company... Systems serving high-volume cooking operations shall be cleaned quarterly; moderate volume cooking operations shall be conducted semi-annually."

As this code applies to kitchen suppression systems, for instance an Ansul System, it states: "An inspection and servicing of the fire-extinguishing system... shall be made every 6 months by properly trained and qualified persons."

These regulations most probably evolved over time as a result of actual fire experience, most code has. These systems are specifically engineered to contain and suppress fire, while they'll only work effectively if they're maintained as required. Extension of fire within some of our older buildings in particular, can be avoided with prudent adherence to these recommendations. We hope those of you who own restaurants agree as well.

We encourage you to maintain these systems as required while we are here to answer any questions you may have to help you maintain a safe premise. Thank you for doing so.

I also wish to thank the members of the health department for taking the lead in this collaborative effort while we are here to support their efforts in maintaining a safer community as well.

Houghs Neck Community Council Receives Funds For Renovations

Houghs Neck Community Council (HNCC) has been awarded a $15,000 Community Development Block Grant from the City of Quincy.

The building at 1193 Sea St., home to the HNCC and Manet Community Health Center, was built 30 years ago. While the community center has received some fresh coats of paint through the years, it is time for some major updates.

The community room is a multi-purpose use room used for many community groups, activities and for serving meals to the local seniors. Through the years the demands on the community room have grown and the space needs to be reorganized so that it can be better utilized.

The overall renovation project is estimated at $55,000.

Exterior improvements were recently completed by Eagle Scout Candidate Richie Kurtzman of Houghs Neck Boy Scout Troop 6. Kurtzman replaced the fence, refurbished the picnic table, and seeded the lawn area and mulched the planting beds.

In addition, he replaced the halyard on the flagpole, which now proudly flies an American Flag.

While 100 percent of Kurtzman's project was completed with donations and volunteer labor, the project cost was estimated at $10,000. The City recently replaced the three exterior doors to the Center as well.

The interior renovations - which are to begin this month - will be broken down into three phases to ensure continuous use of the room by the community.

First, a new kitchen and storage area will be built inside the community room. The need for a improved kitchen facilities was that the HNCC distributes 200 Meals on Wheels through South Shore Elder Services (SSES), also hosts meals daily for local seniors and the popular Kids in the Kitchen program.

The second phase will be the addition of cabinetry in the rear alcove and along the wall utilized by SSES.

The third phase includes replacing the ceiling and light fixtures.

The Houghs Neck Community Council Executive Board will contribute their time and talents to this extensive project in conjunction with skilled labor donated by trade professionals. Houghs Neck is lucky to have so many residents involved and committed to making our community center a pleasant environment, to continue as a social hub of our neighborhood.

ALEX SHAFFER, son of the late Dr. Bertrand Shaffer, thanks the Jewish War Veterans post for recognizing the service of his father.

Tom Stansbury Named Veterans Service Director

Veterans Registration Officer Thomas Stansbury has been named Veterans Services Director, an appointment by Mayor Thomas Koch that serves two purposes.

He fills the post vacated by the retirement of Henry "Hank" Bradley and he saves the city of Quincy $50,000 since the mayor has decided not to fill the graves registration officer position.

Stansbury's new job will combine the duties of both posts.

"We are continuing to review every facet of government and making cuts wherever possible as we confront this economic crisis," said Koch.

"This is just one small piece of the overall package of budget cuts that we will be delivering to the City Council next month. These cuts will be substantial and they will be real."

Stansbury, a Navy veteran who is past commander of both the Morrisette Legion Post and the Quincy Veterans Council, as worked for the city of Quincy for 37 years.

"I'm very pleased with the appointment," said Stansbury. "I'm familiar with all the veterans' issues, their families and the state organizations. It should be a smooth transition."

He began in 1972 as a cadet in the Police Department and has served the Youth Commission, the Council on Aging and the Atlantic Neighborhood Center and, for the past 15 years, with Veteran Services.

A graduate of Everett High School, he attended Benjamin Franklin Institute before joining the Navy in 1968. He was honorably discharged four years later as a radarman third class.

He is married to the former Nancy Sordillo and was honored as the Citizen of the Year by the Jewish War Veterans in 2006.

The decision to eliminate Stansbury's old job comes in the wake of a $6.8 million cut in state aid and a weakening revenue stream in other areas.

The city is awaiting word regarding potential revenue sources from other state and federal sources, but the mayor cautioned that there "is absolutely no magic pill" on the horizon.

He noted that $5 million in budget cuts in the current fiscal year coupled with other steps to right the financial ship will leave the city better prepared to face the storm.

The city expects to save $4 million in health care costs by enrolling employees in the state's Group Insurance Commission and a wage freeze for 2,400 employees could save $5 million.

Quincy is also saving money on a new trash collection contract, unfilled jobs, overtime restrictions and dramatic cuts in expenses.

"We are much better prepared to handle this crisis because of the action taken to date but many difficult decisions will still need to be made," said Koch. "We are ready to make these decisions."

"But I remain fully confident in Quincy's future."

Friendly Visitors Sought At Council On Aging

The COA is also seeking seniors who live alone and would like a friendly visitor themselves.

Lena Trough, the friendly visitor coordinator.

The Council is mandated by law to do background checks on all volunteers.

ARTS ON THE SHORE, a celebration of the 100th anniversary of Wollaston Beach last summer, was funded by a Better Beach Small Grants program. The program will continue this year through Save the Harbor/Save the Bay and a grant from The Boston Foundation.

Boston Foundation Awards Grants To Better Beaches Program

The Boston Foundation will fund the Better Beaches Small Grants Program announces Save the Harbor/Save the Bay.

The grants are designed to jumpstart public activities and events on Massachusetts public beaches from Nahant to Nantasket, including Wollaston Beach in Quincy.

Last year, the program supported Quincy's "Arts on the Shore," an event organized by the Friends of Wollaston Beach. The event featured amateur sandcastle competitions, a sidewalk chalk festival and art displays. More than 1,500 kids and adults attended the celebration which marked the beach's 100th birthday.

Other activities funded last year included beachfront concert series, kite festivals, sandcastle competitions, beachside art shows, swimming lessons, family fun nights and reading programs and neighborhood beach parties.

Organizers hope this year's grants — which range from $500 to 5,000 to non-profit organizations, community grounds, and less formal "friends" or neighborhood groups — will create more dynamic and engaging series of public programs and events on public beaches in the region.

In addition to the funds, Save the Harbor/Save the Bay is also offering technical and operating assistance for friends groups looking for ways to improve their beach.

Save the Harbor/Save the Bay will host an application workshop tonight (Thursday) from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. at their office at 212 Northern Ave., Suite 304W, Boston.

The application process will remain open until March 27, with funding decisions made by the end of April.

For more information, contact Janet Stalker at 617-451-2860.

Library Services May Be Cut

changes in the expenditures, the final decisions lie with the mayor and his department heads.

"As the nation and our state struggle with historical shortfalls, we are faced with extraordinary financial times," Mayor Thomas Koch said in a message delivered to the committee by his Chief of Staff Jim Fatseas.

Koch pledged to work closely with the council. "We are prepared to make the difficult decisions to get through this economy."

Unexpected costs can keno even the best budget plans and this year's snow and ice costs have now risen to over $3 million, according to Fatseas who said that deficit will be covered by Free Cash.

For councillors, discussions with Welch and McLaughlin only highlighted the difficult decisions ahead. Both have minuscule budgets in comparison to the large departments on the upcoming schedule.

Welch's budget is under $1 million and he outlined services to well over 1,000 city youngsters, including special needs youngsters, and senior citizens. Many of the recreation programs are self-supporting, as well.

In addition, Welch said his department is unique in that he has only two full-time employees and 195 part-time and seasonal staff. That eliminates overtime and sick leave.

Welch said the department has a "residents only hiring policy" so that all the salary funds stay in Quincy. In addition, all programs are evaluated and enlarged or reduced as needed.

No funding can be guaranteed as Welch described a state grant for recreation that was awarded and withdrawn due to lack of state funding twice. The grant was finally funded.

City Council President Jay Davis, Ward 4, suggested that Welch seek additional sponsors for programs.

Welch said he will request a revolving fund account which will reduce the department's budget figure. The fund will cover several of the department's self-supporting program.

"I think it's the way to go," said Keenan while Councillor Michael McFarland said the revolving funds have worked for the school department's food service and athletic funds.

McLaughlin outlined library services that are in ever-increasing demand. An average of over 1,000 visitors use the library during Sunday's five hour opening and nearly 2,000 on Saturdays, outstripping on an hourly basis the weekday use.

As for the branches, statistics show heavy use at North Quincy and increasing use at Wollaston and Adams Shore Branch Libraries. In the six months ending in December, Adams Shore registered 10,569 visitors a week, Wollaston, 9,139 a week and North Quincy, 29,354 a week.

McLaughlin's statistics showed significant increases in every category in the past 12 months which made recommendations for cuts difficult for councillors.

The library's current budget at $2,423,794 for the Main Library and $394,291 for the branches represents just over one percent of the total municipal budget.

Even without the recent surge in use, McLaughlin presented impressive statistics on the library's programs in 2008 when the Main Library registered the following on a budget of just over $2.4 million:

838,508 visits

690,409 items borrowed
754 programs that served
19,027 persons
13,608 children and
5,419 adults

52,447 reference questions

9044 hours computer use per week

12,819,538 website hits

McLaughlin said she would likely recommend eliminating Sunday hours if faced with a major budget cut but McFarland suggested she consider closing the Wollaston and Adams Shore library branches.

McFarland said the Main Library actually has more visitors on Sunday than the two branches each week.

McLaughlin said the branches serve residents and children who can not easily access the Main Library.

McFarland said closing on Sundays would be very upsetting. "We fought so hard to open seven days a week."

Ward 6 councillor Brian McNamee agreed. "We should consider the bang for the buck."

McLaughlin said library fines will be increased from 10 cents to 20 cents per day, and the library's meeting room will soon have a user fee.

The library's overdue fines, such as last year's $70,000, are deposited in the General Fund.

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin said the size of the library's budget pales in comparison to other budgets while the library "adds so much to the cultural value of our city."

Keenan said he knew it was difficult for McLaughlin to consider closing branches or reducing hours, "You make a great case for the library."

The Finance Committee will meet again tonight (Thursday) with the Police Department.

Business Community Hails Downtown Revitalization Plan

"I'm excited," he said. "It's been a long time coming. It will take an old and tired city and make it new and exciting."

"The quality of life will be improved for all residents. The appearance will be improved. It will be more interesting. It will benefit everybody."

Jeff Bertman of Rogers Jewelry, president of the Quincy Business Association, was "very, very excited" about the plan to enhance the area with office buildings, housing and retail shops.

"It's a little early to be official," he said. "I don't see any negatives at the moment but I haven't seen any specifics. All I've seen is an artist's vision."

"In the short run while construction is going on, it may hurt business. But in the long run, it will make business go. It will bring more people down to the Square."

Works found Quincy in a position to be selected as the site for a 10 or 15-year project.

"I'm optimistic that there is that level of interest," he said. "Times are difficult in real estate. We need a plan that we can get behind, one that balances the public cost with the public good."

"Street-Works is a good company. They have a comprehensive plan. We're probably looking at an increase in capital spending in our buildings in the Square. Financially, we will be supporting it."

Michael Flavin of Flavin & Flavin, the real estate firm, was another businessman who described himself as "very excited" about the plan that was announced last week by Mayor Thomas Koch.

"It was overdue," he said. "I'm happy it's going forward. It will bring great revenue and stores to the city. Quincy is a great location for this."

"There may be some concern by those impacted by the construction but in the long run the results will be good. More people will come to the city. More will be doing business."

Dean Rizzo, executive director of Quincy 2000 Collaborative, called it "very exciting" to see the proposal put forth by Street-Works in collaboration with the city of Quincy.

"The city has been planning for redevelopment for a long time," he said. "Street-Works has put forward a very aggressive plan but one that is the best opportunity for a long time."

"It's the type of forward change the city had needed."

Ron Affsa, a commercial property owner who has operated Hairplace One since 1972, echoed his excitement, adding, "We've talked about it for years; I'm glad we're doing something now."

"Hopefully, it will be good for my business. There'll be more parking, more foot traffic and a better class of people walking around."

Council Approves Grasso Park Land Swap

City Council finalized the Grasso Park land swap at their March 2 meeting.

The council's vote clears the way for the former Grasso Park to be incorporated into the Lowe's Home Improvement Center project planned for Burgin Parkway and Penn Street.

As part of the agreement, Lowe's will construct a new park on Penn Street on seven parcels of land the company transfers to the city.

City Council President

Jay Davis said the new park will also be named Grasso Park after Marine Lance Cpl. Paul V. Grasso who was killed during patrol duties in Vietnam in 1968.

The original Grasso Park contained approximately 26,000 square feet while the new park will total approximately 46,000 square feet. The agreement calls for the park to be landscaped and playground-equipped by Lowe's.

Lowe's is currently constructing a 151,000 square foot home improvement retail center on approximately 13 acres on Burgin Parkway. Penn Street and Columbia Street Egress will be from Burgin Parkway at Penn Streets in West Quincy.

The Park and Recreation Board approved the closing of Grasso Park last Spring. Subsequently, the state legislature approved the closure paving the way for the land swap.

Quincy Sun when dates have been finalized.

Last week, Street-Works unveiled its preliminary vision for an overhaul of Quincy Center into a vibrant mix of new offices, retail space and residential units in a program that will pump into the city at least $1 billion of investment, thousands of new jobs, and millions of dollars in new tax growth.

Plans are still in the early stages, and Street-Works Co-Founder Richard Heapes said the public process would be critical to developing a final plan, which is expected to be ready by the beginning of next year.

"We've started the conversation, and we need it to continue for the final plan to take shape," said Heapes. "A final plan can only happen through this conversation with Quincy residents. We are very much looking forward to it."

Meetings will be held with neighborhood groups across the city, and the mayor and ward councillors will co-host general public meetings in every ward of the city.

Sun. So send us your comments, questions or concerns to quincysunnews@verizon.net or to 1372 Hancock Street, Quincy Center, MA 02169, and the appropriate member of the city's team or the development team will address it in a subsequent issue of The Quincy Sun.

We hope this will be a positive way to continue the conversation on this important issue.

Ask The Sun On Downtown

The Quincy Sun knows your voice, our readers, will have plenty of thoughts and questions about the city's plans to redevelop Quincy Center.

The Mayor's Office and Street-Works Development have agreed to answer those questions, right here, in the

Correction

The current enrollment for Quincy College is 3,974. Due to a reporting error, the total enrollment published last week was inaccurate.

cords, the spring term 2009 enrollment includes students from 88 countries. Of that total, 74.2% or 2949 are from the United States.

FOOT NOTES
by Joel Chariton, D.P.M.
Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Surgery
Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Orthopedics

PRONATION

The foot is designed in such a way that it rolls and disperses any shock caused by walking or running. This called pronation. Those who have feet that roll inward too much are over-pronators. This happens when the foot continues to roll when it should be pushing off causing excessive movement of the foot and lower leg. This movement can cause pain to the foot, shin, and knee. When walking, shoes will tilt inward when they come into contact with a flat surface. Knock-knees and flat feet contribute to over-pronation. Under-pronation is called supination. Under-pronators have feet that don't roll enough after ground contact. Extra stretching of calves, hamstrings, and quads will allow for greater flexibility. I am one of only two podiatrists in this state who has completed the advanced training necessary to offer patients relief from pronation through the use of the HyProCure™ procedure, a titanium implant that prevents the abnormal motion of the ankle caused by this condition. If you're a pronator, or to discover if this problem is what is causing you pain and discomfort, find out if this minimally invasive long-lasting stabilizing procedure is right for you by scheduling an appointment at my office at QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER. Office hours are also available at 999 North Main St. in the Randolph Medical Building and Milton Medical Building in Suite 221. Please call 781-986-3668 for an appointment. P.S. The proper shoe or insole can help alleviate pain associated with pronation of the foot.

For Making A Difference Globally And Locally

JFK Library Honors Broad Meadows Students

Changing the world a little annually is all in a day's work for Quincy middle school students in Quincy.

The John F. Kennedy Presidential Library recently awarded "JFK Make a Difference Awards" to 30 active members of Broad Meadows Middle School's volunteer, after-school activism club known as Operation Day's Work-USA or ODW for short.

Students in 20 communities were recognized for service learning projects. Sixty-seven individual awards were presented but 30 awards went to the Quincy Broad Meadows Middle School students.

This is the 10th anniversary of Operation Day's Work whose motto is "Kids helping global kids to help themselves." Along with six other schools nationally, Broad Meadows students co-founded ODW ten years ago.

Thousands of children's lives on four continents have been changed for the better as a result. There are ten schools nationally with an ODW chapter. Most are in New England.

Each year, the ODW members nationally vote on a cause in a developing country and a partner in that country. The partner designs a meaningful, sustainable education or health care project essential to kids' health and effective in preventing those children from becoming child laborers.

The ODW members raise funds to make the design come true. Project designs have become: school programs and/or school buildings in Ethiopia, Nepal, Bangladesh, Rwanda and Vietnam; orphanages in Ethiopia and El Salvador; a community health center in Burundi.

This year's ODW project

GRADE 7 student spokesperson for Operation Day's Work, Julie Bloomer, addresses the audience during the award ceremony explaining this year's project to deliver free education to 2,000 children in hurricane ravaged Haiti and free health care for their families for a year.

is to partner with Partners in Health to restore schools in hurricane ravaged Haiti making it possible for 2,000 children to return to school FREE and to provide FREE health care to their families.

The goal of ODW is for each student to have a role in researching the current state of the world's children, nominating causes which harm children or make children more at-risk of becoming child laborers, debating strengths and weaknesses of project designs submitted by reputable non-governmental organizations, and voting to fund one of the designs.

Students are then challenged to design community service projects which will strengthen our city in a meaningful way. Thus, two communities benefit from ODW. Our own community is improved, and life for children in community far, far away is improved.

To raise funds for the annual ODW partnership project in a developing country, students use pledge sheets to gather sponsors who agree to pay minimum wage for an hour or more of "a day's work" on a student designed community service project such as planting flowers outside the windows of the Children's Room at the Thomas Crane Public Library, serving meals at senior centers, cleaning the grounds of historic sites, or volunteering at a local food pantry. The "day's pay" raised from the "day's work" is then donated to the annual project. Again, this year's project is to restore education to 2,000 Haitian children and free health care to their families.

It's amazing what youth can do in a day's work.

In recognition of ten years of ODW humanitarian aid projects, on March 1, 2009, the John F. Kennedy Presidential Library bestowed a JFK Library Make a Difference Award to each of the 30 students members of ODW. The awards were presented on March 1, because March 1 is the day that John F. Kennedy launched The Peace Corps.

Flooring 101: Selecting The Best Product For Your Home Style

(ARA) - Your home's flooring does more than provide you and your family with a comfortable surface. It's an extension of your personal style and taste. It says something about you and your home to everyone who walks in the door.

Selecting the right floor for your home isn't easy. Chances are if you've visited your local flooring retailer, you've found yourself wandering through a sea of options, evaluating different materials, designs and overall durability and function.

The question is: How do you choose when everything looks so good?

You need to consider a few factors, including your style, budget, where the flooring will be installed, traffic flow and performance concerns.

Cost is often a deciding factor. Set a price range and begin evaluating the features of products in that bracket. If you're not planning to install the floor yourself, don't forget to factor in the installation costs, which often are in addition to the square-foot cost.

Fashionable features

Appearance is the first factor to consider. The flooring you choose should blend with the style of your home, whether that style is contemporary, Victorian, eclectic or country. Also keep in mind the size of the room where you plan to install the flooring. Tiny tiles will be too busy in a large room, while large-scale products will overwhelm a smaller space.

While many homeowners immediately gravitate to such attractive natural materials as slate, stone, bamboo and hardwood, don't limit your options simply to those for mere aesthetics' sake. Modern flooring technology such as resilient and laminate offers the best of both worlds -- good looks, comfort, function and easy maintenance.

"Today's laminate and resilient flooring options offer many attractive features that rival, and even surpass, those of their natural counterparts," says Gary Finseth, Tarkett Residential marketing director. "Not only do laminate and resilient flooring cost less than wood and ceramic tile, they come in a wide range of colors and patterns that authentically mimic traditional wood grains, natural stone, ceramic and even metallics. There's something for every decor."

Beyond aesthetics, contemporary flooring options also hold up to the demands of everyday living comfortably. Comfort of flooring refers to how it feels underfoot. It also includes its insulation properties and whether or not it carries sound. Other products, such as resilient and laminate flooring, have been engineered to provide the best of both worlds.

FiberFloor resilient flooring from Tarkett, for example, features more than 200 distinctive colors and designs, including natural-looking wood grains like oak or exotic teak, rustic tiles and earthy stone looks, but also offers improved foam density for added performance and durability, as well as warmth, comfort and a quiet living space.

Defined durability

It's a given that hardwood or tile floors look great in most spaces, but too often, these floors don't hold up to the rigors of everyday traffic and living. Consider how the flooring you want to install will react to such factors as direct sunlight, water spills, furniture scrapes, tracked-in dirt and ongoing foot traffic and how they will hold up to cleaning, too.

For those who seek a true visual match to real wood, consider installing laminate flooring. In addition to providing high style, this flooring reflects the look of real wood yet holds up to extensive wear and tear.

Tarkett laminates feature an AC4-rating for the commercial wear layer, which means this flooring protects against wear, fading and stains 60 percent better than ordinary laminate flooring. The design layer replicates the beauty of natural wood grains, while the Americore layer, the inner core board manufactured with only cherry and oak chips, provides superior indentation resistance.

Other considerations

Some floors are easier to install than others. Hardwood and tile floors are among the most difficult to install and generally require professional expertise.

Spring's Top Home Decor Trends Draw Inspiration from Nature

(ARA) - It is time to pay tribute to the joy and jubilation of nature as the welcoming signs of spring arrive. The familiar will appear refreshingly new as we take in its splendor. This spring, the hottest trends in home decor reflect this breathtaking beauty as Mother Nature awakes from her slumber.

"Spring is such an exciting time of year," says Susan Atchison, manager of trend development for Jo-Ann Fabric and Craft Stores. "Nature inspires decorating trends that are simple, yet grand. What you might see on a stroll through your local park has become the backdrop for interior designers and do-it-yourself home decorators across the country."

Here are the top home decor trends for spring 2009:

1. Emulate outdoor serenity.

"Lush leaves and exquisite florals convey outdoor serenity," says Atchison. She notes that creating a peaceful element within your home might be as simple as adding a flower or greenery arrangement. "It's amazing what plant life can do to liven a room. A vase of flowers in the bathroom can make your morning routine more cheery, or a green centerpiece on the kitchen table might make dinner a mini-retreat from the long day at work."

Whether fresh or silk, use leaves and flowers to bring a touch of classic nature into your home. Bright colors have pick-me-up appeal, while earthy tones convey calmness. Match complementary options with the current color scheme of your home, or combine to celebrate the harmony of the season.

2. Make practical pretty.

The things you use on a regular basis in your home are often the things that don't have a lot of flair. But this spring, practical items are getting a stylistic boost with new designs and fresh ideas that make them stand out.

Take a flowerpot for example. You don't have to spend a lot of money to get a unique, beautiful pot.

"Flowerpots made of fabric are undoubtedly one of the freshest ideas for spring," says Atchison. She suggests creating your own by using durable yet breathable Sun N Shade outdoor fabrics to create fun yet functional pots. From bright, eye-catching colors, to earthy, subtle tones, choose fabrics that mimic your favorite theme, whether you plan to use these planters indoors or out. Plus, at the end of the season, you can fold for easy storage and use next year.

3. Refresh what you already have.

With the tight economy, many people have limited budgets for updating their home decor. Taking note from springtime renewal, an affordable, smart idea is to update what you already have in your home.

Atchison suggests using polymer clay to add spring-inspired designs to different glass items you have around your house. For example, take a set of wine glasses and use different shades of green clay to create leaves on the outside of the glass. Bake the glass with the new clay design for 30 minutes at 230 F and you'll have an entirely new glass set to toast the spring sunset. Consider updating other items in your home such as old vases, candy dishes and hand and lotion dispensers. According to Atchison, pretty much anything made of plain glass is a potential subject.

"As you walk through the woods or sit on a park bench in the city, note the sights and sounds of springtime," says Atchison. "This will inspire fresh home decor that is sure to make your home beautiful and leave a lasting impression on guests."

Budget Home Remodeling: It's All Done With Mirrors

(ARA) - With the housing crunch keeping more homeowners in homes they've outgrown, and the economy keeping renovation budgets tight, more homeowners are looking for smaller home improvement projects that offer big return on investment. While many homeowners may think of remodeling as heavy construction, it's possible to make a significant change in your home with projects that don't require any big structural changes.

In the past, if your bathroom was too small, you might tear it out, take space from here and there and not think twice about turning it into a huge master bath suite. The new twist is that homeowners will try to make it more livable with the smaller touches: more mirrors to add a sense of "space," new lighting, glass shower enclosures, and updated fixtures and hardware. Structurally, it's the same bathroom, but now it has an airier feel.

An interior "face-lift" allows you to use mirrors or glass to change the look of your environments relatively inexpensively, and recommit to your home, rather than sell it or simply undertake a big renovation. Not a do-it-yourselfer? The housing slow down also means good contractors may be able to take on these smaller projects that they passed on previously. Further, these contractors are more willing to negotiate a fair price, providing affordable opportunities to homeowners.

Mirrors are the leading tool in changing the way a room is perceived. Long seen as a "secret weapon" of interior designers, mirrors can change the look and feel of a room instantly, without a lot of effort or expense. They add light, create a sense of space and openness, and reflect interesting views. Mirrors are a simple way to change the look of a room and brighten up a space.

A recent study by a leading mirror manufacturer in the United States revealed that homeowners perceive a mirror as "cheap art," adding a focal point to a room that didn't have one before, at a cost far more attractive than a painting or expensively framed print. This option is creating a new era of interior design with mirrors. Interior decorators are discovering classy new ways to implement mirrors into the home environment with dramatic yet refined results.

"The new sense of design with mirrors has provided some groundbreaking interior aesthetic inside the home," says Randy Brooks of Gardner Glass Products. "New effects with mirror, including colored mirror, mirror with acid-etching, new custom sizes and beveling, etc., provide homeowners with a great design palette to add pizzazz to the home while fitting any design style."

Here are a few designer secrets for using mirrors or decorative glass to update your home:

In the Bath

- * A large mirror over a vanity can open up the space visually.

- * A framed mirror along with updated towels or hardware can update the space instantly.

- * Glass shower enclosures instead of a shower curtain make a small bathroom feel less crowded.

- * A mirrored wall can brighten up a small, under-staircase powder room.

Elsewhere in the Home

- * A mirrored or back-painted glass backsplash in the kitchen reflects light back into the room without costly electrical work.

- * Transparent or a semi-transparent decorative glass in the upper kitchen-cabinet doors is an easy way to change the look instantly.

- * In the den, a large framed mirror over a fireplace adds a warm focal point as well as reflected light.

- * In the foyer, a mirrored wall portion can make the entrance area feel larger.

- * Glass table makes a dining room or sunny kitchen nook feel less cramped and allows colorful rugs, cushions and centerpieces to add impact.

How long will these creative solutions last? The housing market could make a complete recovery, but it's doubtful in the short term. In the meantime, think creatively and add new sparkle to an existing space. For more information on using mirrors, plus some design ideas, visit the Web site of the Glass Association of North America's Mirror Division at www.mirrorlink.org.

The Dirt On Gorgeous Grass

(ARA) - Spring is nearly here and soon you'll toss your coat into the back of the closet, break out the Bermuda shorts and stride out onto your lawn ... which is even more thin and weedy than last year. You faithfully fertilize, seed, apply weed killer and water. What are you doing wrong?

Here's the real dirt on what makes a lawn lush -- it's what's under the grass that counts. Your lawn can't flourish without a foundation of healthy soil. If your lawn is sparse and weed-filled, the real issue might lie just below the root zone, in the soil.

So how do you achieve healthy soil? By tackling common soil issues like poor drainage, soil compaction, thatch buildup and poor pH. Grass can't thrive if its roots are waterlogged, struggling in dense or nutrient-poor soil, or smothered under a thick barrier of thatch, a layer of plant debris at the base of the grass blade.

Before wasting time and money on a no-win lawn care program, consider whether soil problems are standing between you and gorgeous grass.

*Poor drainage -- Water puddling on the surface after rain or irrigation means moisture isn't draining freely to deeper soil levels. Healthy soil is porous, allowing air and nutrients to reach plant roots. Roots can actually drown and rot away in waterlogged soil.

*Soil compaction -- Soil is easily compressed under constant foot traffic and by the heavy equipment used to care for lawns -- riding mowers and heavy wheelbarrows, for instance. Compacted soil keeps air and nutrients from reaching the root system, leaving it shallow and weak. Test for compaction by digging up a shovelful of turf and soil. If the ground is hard to pierce or the soil sample is dense and hard to break up, the lawn bed needs to be aerated.

*Thatch -- Take a second look at your test hole. If you've revealed a layer of debris thicker than half an inch, it may be time to remove the thatch. In ideal conditions, grass clippings, leaves, twig fragments and other debris that falls on the lawn break down, providing nutrients to the grass. But if the soil organisms responsible for decomposition aren't present, thatch builds up, creating a layer at the soil surface that sheds water and nutrients.

*pH -- Simply put, pH is a measure of how acidic or alkaline your soil is. If your soil's pH is out of balance, you can correct it by adding the proper amendments.

There are time-tested tactics to tackle these problems by mechanical means, and much newer, effective and easy treatments developed by soil scientists to improve conditions beneath the turf.

Mechanical core aerators, available for rent, pull up finger-sized cores from the lawn, leaving them on the surface to dissolve. The plugs will dissolve over time, but they're ugly until they do. Plus, mechanical aeration can bring up weed seeds from the soil bank. Renting an aerator or a power thatching mower can be expensive and the process is labor-intensive.

A Job Well Done

On Wednesday, Feb. 25, at approximately 1:25 p.m., Detective Brian Coen of the Quincy Police Department Drug Control Unit was northbound on Independence Ave in an unmarked police vehicle, when he observed a male cross Independence Ave and walk up Verchild Street. The male appeared to be looking for someone, as he kept turning his head. Det. Coen noted that the male had a gaunt look on his face and displayed the characteristics of a substance abuser, namely heroin and opiates.

LT. DAN MINTON

Det. Coen contacted Det. William O'Brien to assist in surveillance of the male to see what he was up to.

The male walked onto Pembroke St. from Verchild St., then turned left onto Lorton St. Det. Coen observed the male walk in the middle of the street and look left and right at the houses on the street. Once at the intersection of Lorton St. and High St., the male crossed High St., which turned into Washington St. in Braintree. The male then turned left of Holmes St. in Braintree and paused in the middle of the street. The male looked across Washington St. towards the other side of Holmes St. in Braintree, then proceeded to run across Washington St. to Holmes St.

The male then walked up to a home on Holmes St. and entered the enclosed porch, where he crouched down. At this time, the detectives believed that the male (now suspect) might be attempting to break into the residence, so the Braintree Police Department was notified and were informed that the detectives were watching the suspect.

The suspect then left the Holmes St. address without breaking into the home. Det. O'Brien observed the suspect walk back into Quincy, following him to Hughes St. Det. O'Brien watched as the suspect went up to the front porch of a Hughes St. home and ring the doorbell. The suspect waited for about 30 seconds before entering the front enclosed porch. Det. O'Brien kept the residence under surveillance for approximately one minute and then Det. Coen drove by the house. Det. Coen could not see the suspect on the front porch area and noticed the blinds to the front window appeared to be disturbed.

At this time, the detectives approached the home on foot, with Det. O'Brien finding that the front window inside the porch area had been broken. Additional units were dispatched to their location. Det. O'Brien peered inside the home and confronted the suspect as he walked around the corner from the bedroom into the living room. The detective ordered the suspect to "Show your hands."

Det. Coen heard the order and ran to Det. O'Brien's location at the front of the house. The detectives entered the home and placed the suspect, who was wearing gloves, in handcuffs. Officers Barry DeFranco, Ryan Donnelly and John Leuchte quickly arrived on scene and assisted. The residence was unoccupied. Det. O'Brien searched the suspect and located a silver ring with clear stones, a gold necklace and $28 in his front pocket of his sweat pants. Det. O'Brien also located a cell phone and a plastic cap containing a brown substance believed to be heroin residue from its appearance.

The suspect waived his Miranda Rights and the detectives questioned him. Det. O'Brien asked the suspect where he got the jewelry and he replied, "here," referring to the Hughes St. break-in. The suspect then admitted that he had a heroin addiction.

The suspect, a 29-year old Weymouth resident, was charged with "Breaking and Entering with the Intent to Commit a Felony, Malicious Damage to a Dwelling Over $250, and Possession Class A Substance. Subsequent Offense."

BCI Lieutenant Detective John Steele, Sergeant Detective Richard Lapper and Detective Dave Pacifico arrived on scene and assisted with processing the crime scene. Det. Pacifico took photographs of the residence, damaged front window and items recovered from the suspect's pockets. The pictures showed that the bedroom had been ransacked.

The home owner victim was contacted at her place of employment and was informed of the incident. She arrived home shortly thereafter and identified the jewelry and money ($28) as her property. She stated the jewelry and money were previously in her armoire located in her bedroom. The stolen money and jewelry were returned to her.

The MBTA Charlie Card and cell phone were placed into evidence because it is believed to be stolen property. BCI Detective Tom Cleary seized the suspect's sneakers because the suspect may be linked to other breaks with the same modus operandi. 'Nice Work.'

Survival Rates For Colorectal Cancer High When Found Early

As the nation marks National Colorectal Cancer Awareness Month this March, the American Cancer Society is encouraging Americans to get lifesaving screening tests that have been proven to reduce the risk of the third leading cause of cancer death in both men and women.

According to the recent Annual Report to the Nation on cancer, progress continues to be made in the fight against colorectal cancer (commonly referred to as colon cancer), with incidence and mortality rates continuing to experience a steady decline due in part to an increase in screening. From 1998 to 2005, colon cancer incidence dropped by 2.8% per year in men and 2.2% per year in women. Deaths rates have fallen by 4.3% in both men and women from 2002 to 2005. The American Cancer Society recommends routine screening for men and women starting at age 50, and earlier testing for those at higher than average risk. Regularly scheduled screening can not only detect cancer at an early and more treatable stage, but can also prevent cancer from developing by removing precancerous polyps before they become cancerous.

Despite evidence showing colorectal screening can save lives and the availability of several options for patients, only about half of the U.S. population aged 50 and older has been tested recently for colon cancer. Among those who have not been screened for colon cancer, reasons include lack of access to affordable care, and that clinicians are not recommending screening when they should. Other barriers include lack of knowledge of the importance of screening, of the treatability of colon cancer when detected early, and of available testing options. Screening is critical as more than half of all colon cancer deaths could be prevented if everyone who should get screened did so.

"Colon cancer is one of the only cancers that can be prevented through regular testing" said Durado Brooks, M.D., director of prostate and colorectal cancer, American Cancer Society. "The declines in incidence and mortality from colorectal cancer can be attributed to prevention and early detection of the disease through screening, as well as increasingly effective treatment."

In March 2008, the American Cancer Society, along with the American College of Radiology and the U.S. Multi-Society Task Force on Colorectal Cancer released the first-ever consensus guidelines for colorectal screening. The guidelines now include two new tests — stool DNA and CT colonography, also known as virtual colonoscopy. The guidelines also for the first time indicate a preference for screening tests that can not only detect cancer early but also detect precancerous polyps before they turn cancerous.

One major barrier to colon cancer screening is a lack of health insurance. Many studies show that people who are uninsured are substantially less likely to be screened for colon cancer — while nearly half (48.3 percent) of men and women ages 50 to 64 with private insurance had a recommended colon cancer screening test in the past 10 years, only one in five (18.8 percent) of those who lacked insurance had received recommended screening. In addition, insurance status strongly influences survival among those diagnosed with colon cancer — individuals with private insurance who are diagnosed with Stage II colon cancer have better survival outcomes than individuals who are uninsured or receive Medicaid and are diagnosed with Stage I.

The American Cancer Society Cancer Action Network (ACS CAN), the advocacy affiliate of the American Cancer Society, is working to pass the Colorectal Cancer Prevention, Early Detection and Treatment Act. This legislation establishes a program administered by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) that would provide vital colon cancer screenings, treatment and follow-up services to low-income, uninsured and underinsured men and women ages 50 to 64. Additionally, this program will support training for health providers based on research that has shown physician recommendation is a critical factor for patients in deciding to get screening tests, and will support public information and education programs for the prevention and detection of colon cancer and promoting the benefits of cancer screenings targeted both at the general public and medically underserved populations.

On the local level, the American Cancer Society will hold a Lobby Day at the State House in Boston, which will focus on passing a piece of legislation requiring all health insurers to cover colorectal screenings according to Society guidelines in Massachusetts. Currently 26 states have this requirement, in part for its cost effectiveness and also the law's ability to save lives. The Lobby Day will take place on March 31, 2009 at 10:30 a.m. in Nurses Hall at the State House in Boston, featuring legislative leaders such as Senate President Therese Murray and colorectal cancer survivors.

A number of lifestyle factors impact colon cancer risk. Studies indicate that men and women who are overweight are more likely to develop and die from colon cancer, and a diet high in red or processed meat is known to increase risk of developing the disease. Studies also show that high levels of physical activity may cut the risk of colon cancer in half. The American Cancer Society recommends engaging in moderate activity for at least 30 minutes on five or more days per week and substituting high consumption of red and processed meat with a healthy diet rich in plant sources, whole grains, and five or more servings of fruits and vegetables.

Age remains the most important risk factor for colon cancer. Risk increases with age, with more than 90 percent of cases diagnosed in individuals aged 50 and older. A personal or family history of the disease also increases risk. An estimated 148,810 cases of colorectal cancer were expected to occur in 2008, and 49,960 deaths were also expected.

Eat a Banana, Lower Your Blood Pressure

Could it really be that easy?

It might not be the whole answer, but it could help. Those of us with hypertension have to restrict our diets to limit salt, or sodium. Dozens of clinical trials show that potassium, as found in bananas and many other foods, can bring about a better potassium-sodium balance. Lowered blood pressure can be the result in many cases, especially when combined with the other standards of high blood pressure treatment, such as increased exercise.

The National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute, part of the National Institutes of Health, has a Web site full of information about high blood pressure and how to manage it, including a section on diet.

Go to www.nhlbi.nih.gov and put this in the search box: high blood pressure DASH. That will bring you to a number of articles about lowering blood pressure with diet.

What I appreciated in the pages on DASH (Dietary Approaches to Stop Hypertension) was the week's worth of menus, showing quantities to eat and indicating just how much sodium there is in each food. There's even a section on getting started gradually on a DASH diet. On another page, a chart shows just how much potassium is in dozens of different foods. Potatoes, lima beans, almonds, tomatoes, yogurt, tuna — they're all good sources of potassium.

If you have high blood pressure, ask your doctor if you will benefit from adding some potassium-rich foods to your diet. Don't try to make adjustments on your own, especially if you're on medication. Ask, because it's possible to get too much potassium, too. As in all things, there needs to be a balance.

ORAL INDICATIONS

Many people are not aware of the many ways in which oral health is linked with overall health. For instance, according to a survey recently conducted by the Academy of General Dentistry, nearly 60% of those surveyed did not know that a painful jaw is one warning sign that may indicate an impending heart attack. Thus, a visit to the dentist may be a patient's first sign of an impending heart attack. Thus, a visit to the dentist may be a patient's first sign of an impending dangerous heart event. In fact, research indicates that over 90% of systemic diseases have oral symptoms. With this in mind, careful dental examinations of patients with a history of heart disease (or other conditions) for signs of oral pain, infection, or inflammation is crucial to overall health. In some cases, the cause of jaw pain is from referred pain that comes from other areas surrounding the jaw. Any dental pain should be investigated since early treatment is almost always a good idea, especially if a dental infection is suspected. We are dedicated to our patients' good health and well being and you are more than welcome to join our family of patients. We offer comprehensive general and cosmetic dentistry. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where our goal is to make each visit to our office a comfortable and positive experience. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. Gout

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have gout in my big toe, and it's very, very painful. I have to walk in my socks. Are there any pills for gout? What food causes the pain? — L.K.

ANSWER: Gout results from too much uric acid in the blood. Uric acid is a byproduct of daily cell chemistry. When the uric acid level rises, crystals of it penetrate the joint. The joint swells, the skin over it turns red, and the joint feels warm. It hurts beyond words. Early on, gout comes in attacks, with the intervals between attacks being free of pain. As time passes, the joint can hurt all the time. The joint at the base of the big toe is often the first joint affected, but it might not be the only joint. The heel, ankle, knee, fingers, wrists and elbows also can be targets.

Doctors make the diagnosis of gout by examining the affected joint and finding a high blood uric acid. The most telling evidence lies in looking at joint fluid through a microscope and seeing uric acid crystals.

Are you positive it is gout that you have? Many conditions cause swollen, painful joints.

For acute gout attacks, nonsteroidal anti-inflammatory medicines like Indocin work well. Another time-honored gout medicine is colchicine. If neither of these works, cortisone drugs come to the rescue.

Zyloprim (allopurinol) turns off the production of uric acid and prevents gout attacks. Benemid (probenecid) facilitates the excretion of uric acid into the urine. It, too, prevents attacks.

Diet was the sole treatment of gout in the bad old days. Organ meats — liver, brain, sweetbreads and kidneys — are foods to avoid. Gravies are not good for those with gout. Beer should be restricted. Bing cherries can bring the blood level of uric acid down.

The gout pamphlet deals with this topic in greater detail. Readers can obtain a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue, No. 302W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order for $4.75 U.S./$6 Canada with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Sometimes you hear that people who have a heart or liver transplant take on the personality of the person who donated the organ. Is this true or not? — N.N.

ANSWER: That's fantasy, stuff of fictional literature. It doesn't happen.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Game Benefited The Bobby Harvey Memorial Fund

3rd Annual Charity Cup A Rousing Success

By SEAN BRENNAN

Members of the Quincy Fire and Police Departments took some time out from their busy schedules to give back to the community Saturday night at the Quincy Youth Arena.

The Third Annual Charity Cup, a hockey game between the two city departments, this year, benefited the Bobby Harvey Memorial Fund. Harvey, a native Quincy son, was the ironworker killed last August when a portion of the Goliath Crane collapsed at the Fore River Shipyard.

The two previous Charity Cups benefited the Officer Jamie Cochrane Scholarship Fund and DOVE.

"This year's event had a very good turnout and we raised (official figures not yet determined) close to $7,000 for the Harvey Memorial Fund," said Charity Cup organizer Kevin Ferent, QFD. "The Harvey Memorial Fund is planning on turning this money into scholarships at both high schools and giving the rest back to the community. All the money raised will go back to help Quincy in some way."

Ferent, who in the past had chosen which charity the game would benefit, had a easier time this year deciding which organization to support.

"I pay close attention to what is going on in the city and I have made the decision about which charity to support based on what is going on in Quincy the last two years," he added. "But this year as soon as it happened (Harvey's tragic death) I knew that we would be playing for them. I had phone call after phone call this fall from people hoping we would support this cause. This year it was an easy decision."

"Bobby had played hockey with many members of the Police and Fire Departments growing up in Quincy. So this game had special meaning for all of us."

The game itself was very competitive. In a well-played contest, the Quincy Police Department came out on top, 6-3.

"It was a well-played game and a lot of fun," said Ferent. "We had 14 members of the Police Department and 17 members of the Fire Department take part, but it really isn't about who wins and who loses, it is about reminding the community that we are here for them, not just in an emergency, but that we are behind them 100% all the time. It is all about giving back to Quincy any chance we can."

Ferent, who grew up in close-knit South Boston, moved to Quincy ten years ago and wanted to prove that Quincy is as close a community as the one he grew up in.

"I saw Quincy as a place that could be like South Boston, very close-knit and together. We want people to know that the QPD and QFD are here for them at all times. I think these Charity Cup games have helped to prove that."

"With the help of local businesses and the community, we have raised over $30,000 these last three years for great causes. And in these hard economic times, to raise over $7,000 this year is great. We thank Quincy for their continued support."

The event also featured a raffle supported by these local businesses. Prizes ranged from golf outings to restaurant gift certificates to a stay at the Quincy-Boston Marriott. One lucky fan had the chance to win a brand new Ford Fusion, donated by Dan Quirk, by attempting to shoot a puck through a target placed in front of one of the goals. The money shot just missed.

"When we first started this event three years ago, the thought of raising $7,000 was not something we considered," said Ferent. "But the purpose of the Charity Cup is to help the community and the community has responded. It was another very successful night."

Gerry Places Fifth At New England's Gerry, Reggiannini Shine At All-States

By SEAN BRENNAN

Two Quincy High School wrestlers made personal statements at the All-State Tournament held at Salem High School during the weekend of Feb. 28-29.

Senior Paul Reggiannini and junior Josh Gerry showed sportsmanship and flashed serious talent as both finished in the top-8 of their respective weight classes.

Gerry, who won the 125-pound MA State Championship at the Division II finals back on Feb. 21, finished second at the All-States. His second-place finish was marred by a last-second judgment call by the officials.

"Josh was down 5-1 in the finals but battled back to take a 6-5 lead," said QHS head coach Pat Lane. "His opponent tied the score at 6-6, but near the end of the match Josh made an aggressive move to gain two points; and we thought he had it but the official said otherwise."

"His opponent escaped from Josh's hold and when the match ended the officials decided to give him the two points and the win instead of letting the two of them decide the outcome in overtime."

"My solution in a situation like that is to let the kids decide it on the mat."

But Josh, who is a competitor first-and-foremost, took the loss in stride and moved on.

Gerry's opponent in the finals was Nick Flannery of Framingham HS. Flannery, who did not place in the New England's, won the match, 8-6.

Earlier in the All-State tournament, Gerry beat Christian McCarthy of Lowell HS and TJ Crabtree of St. John's Prep.

Gerry, as a result of his second-place finish at All-States, qualified for the New England Championships held March 6-7 in New Haven, Conn. He finished in fifth place at New England's and ended his year with a 44-5 overall record.

Gerry earned his fifth-place finish at New England's with wins over the state finalist from Maine and Connecticut. He dropped a 2-0 decision to Mike Myers of Rhode Island in the semifinals and lost 7-6 in the consolation bracket to George Wilson of Springfield Central but took fifth by defeating the state finalist from CT.

He finished the tournament at 3-2, just one spot from placing.

Reggiannini took to the mats at the All-States and finished in the top-8 out of 22 wrestlers in the 140-pound class. A strong showing for Quincy's senior captain.

"Paul wrestled very well at All-States," said Lane. "To finish in the top-8 in his weight class is impressive. He has been a great wrestler for Quincy during his high school career."

Reggiannini defeated CJ Venuto, 16-4, in his first match; lost to Walter Pope of Framingham HS in the second round; and knocked off Colin MacKenzie of Duxbury and Craig Ramsey of Malden to earn a spot in the fifth place match. In that match, Reggiannini lost to Aaron Blanco of Lawrence.

Presidents End Season On High Note

By SEAN BRENNAN

Quincy High School ended its 2008-09 basketball season with a thrilling 77-75 overtime victory over North Quincy High School in the consolation game of the annual Vin Moscardelli Tournament. The team's win over the Red Raiders pushed the season series between the two city high schools to 2-1 in favor of the Presidents.

Quincy won the first game, 81-68 (Jan. 9), and lost the middle game, 77-41 (Feb. 7), before dispatching of NQ in the third and final game between the two schools.

"This was a big win for our team to end the season," said QHS head coach David Parry. "It gives us the 'city championship' over NQ and it was a good way for my team to close out the season. We actually finished the year with the win over North and we had a huge upset win over Whitman-Hanson in one of our final regular season games."

Against North Quincy, three promising underclassmen showcased their skills and gave the fans of the team a glimpse of what the future could bring. Sophomores Brian Malger (12 points) and Kevin McDonagh (22 pts.) and freshman Robbie Bina (14 points) provided the lift needed to carry the Presidents over North.

"These young guys have seen a lot of time this season," added Parry. "Along with Bina, Malger and Mc-Donagh, players like Kenny Nguyen and Seth Pullum have really stepped up this year. We only had five seniors on the roster so these young guys were put into the fire early.

"The playing time these kids saw this year and they way we ended the season should give us a lift heading into next season."

Parry will have to deal with the graduation of five steady seniors. Playing in their final high school games against NQ were Anthony Raddatz, Andrew Papile, Victor Otoadese and John Parry (senior Doug Scott played his last game back in January).

"All five of these seniors will be continuing their education in college next year, and that is really what it is all about," said Parry. "They are a great group of kids and it will be bittersweet to see them go. But they have helped lay the foundation for the younger kids through their hard work and dedication and, though it will be tough without them, they leave the program in good shape."

The senior class made one final statement on their home court back on Feb. 10 against Whitman-Hanson HS. The game, which was held on Senior Night, was the last official boys' basketball game ever played at QHS' East Gym (the team will be playing elsewhere next season as the new gym is being constructed).

Quincy, behind an 18-point, 15-rebound effort from Raddatz, seven three-pointers from Parry (21 pts.) and a buzzer-beating lay-in from Papile that sent the game into overtime, upset W-H.

"Raddatz played his best game of the season," said Parry. "He held Noel James (one of the Patriot League's best players) to nine points and had a monster game himself."

"John really had it that night shooting the ball. We are looking into it, but those seven three-pointers may be a school record. And Andrew had that clutch lay-in to send the game into overtime."

"It was a great send-off for the seniors and it will be a game that we can build on a little bit moving forward."

With the year over, Parry has already moved forward to next fall. He has named junior Kenny Nguyen and sophomore Brian Malger as team captains; a move he hopes gives his young team some stability throughout the off-season.

"Instead of waiting till the fall to name captains, I have already chosen Nguyen and Malger as captains for next year," Parry said. "It gives them and the team a chance to get started right away. I loved what they both brought to the court. They are everything you want from high school players."

"They both lead by example and they do whatever is needed to help the team."

In a hard-fought championship game, Christ Church Quincy was able to hold off the Morrissey Senators, 25-20, to win the championship in Quincy Youth Basketball's Boys' Grade 3-5 division.

Leading the way for Christ Church Quincy were guards Anthony DeBello and Justin McGaffigan. Conor Pound, playing in the post with three fouls most of the game, provided solid defense all game.

Other players providing a scoring punch for Christ Church Quincy included Aidan Golden and Paul Ford. Kyle Boudreau, Nasir Cardoso, Ben Chen, Luke Marcheski, Ryan Tucker, and Jasiah Ortega supplied points and defense off the bench.

NQ Baseball On The Radio & Internet

The 2009 North Quincy Red Raiders' varsity baseball program is getting ready to start up their spring season at the end of the month; and at the same time the team is hoping for some community support in order to have their home games broadcast online through AM 1510 "The Zone."

The 2009 season is scheduled to open on March 30 against Brockton High School (Adams Field, 4 p.m.), with tryouts beginning next Monday (March 16). The team also has an opportunity to have its varsity games broadcast live on radio and via the Internet through www.1510thezone.com.

In order to make this happen, the team is looking for some sponsorship from local businesses and even fans that would want to give a shout out to their favorite player on the radio. If you are interested in helping out the 2009 Red Raiders, you can email or call Bob Bladd, who is the voice who would be broadcasting the games, at 508-259-8191 or by email at backtosports@rcn.com.

This potential for all games being broadcast online, according to NQ head coach John Fidalgo, would be a great way to get exposure for the team and program and is a great way for family and friends, that may not be from Quincy, to follow the games live on the Internet.

North Quincy, which opens the year on March 30, has home games scheduled for April 8 (Randolph), April 13 (Middleboro) and April 15 (Quincy). The team will host the NQ Baseball Tournament on April 21-23 at Adams Field.

examine your feelings to make sure you're being fair with both sides.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A family dispute creates mixed feelings about how you hope it will be ultimately resolved. Best advice: Stay out of it and let the involved parties work it through by themselves.

DON MCCARTHY
Managing Director

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Each of us is blessed with a unique personality. Some outgoing and imaginative. Others cautious and shrewd. But it is a rare personality that is well-liked by all his companions in his social and business life. "You can't please everyone"; traits that appeal to some people are irritating to others.

We all may benefit, however, from winning other's respect, good will, and, hopefully, friendships...

A well-developed personality depends first of all on the ability to be oneself. You may be a bit on the solemn side or you may be an extrovert and "back-slapper." Start from what you are. Don't try to be something you are not... Take a great and real interest in other people. Be sparing in your criticism. Try to find out everytime you come in contact with something novel and unusual just what it is that gives this situation its appeal. In other words, touch life at many points. Be generous and understanding.

Granted, this may seem like trite and obvious advice, but it is the kind of thing that develops rich, charming, overwhelming personalities...

Detailed Review Of City's Investigation

School Committee To Hear Honeywell Program Probe

Mayor Thomas Koch's administration was set to provide School Committee members last night (Wednesday) with a detailed review of the city's investigation to date into inflated billing, shoddy work and a loophole-ridden contract related to the $32.8 million Honeywell energy management program.

The administration's probe prompted the state Inspector General to begin an investigation into the 2007 Honeywell deal that is now underway. The program called for Honeywell to repair infrastructure in 40 city buildings, including schools, in a way that would ultimately save energy and money for the city.

But administration officials told school committee members that instead, the program has been riddled with serious problems. School Committee member Jo-Ann Bragg requested the public presentation. Other committee members also requested information on the Honeywell deal.

Administration officials detailed a number of examples at the heart of the city and Inspector General investigation, including a 2007 roof repair at the Snug Harbor School that Honeywell charged $752,800 to perform. In comparison, a larger roof repair at the Atlantic Middle School cost only $214,000 performed through the traditional public bidding process, a more than three-fold difference.

"This is just one of the outrageous examples that we have identified, and will continue to identify as we work to ensure that our taxpayers are protected," Koch said. "This boondoggle will not be tolerated, and we are prepared to use any means at our disposal to make the city whole."

noted that dramatically inflated costs were not isolated to school repairs, highlighting the roof at the Wollaston library branch that Honeywell charged $224,000 to perform. That cost equals $7,400 per square foot of construction compared to the Atlantic Middle School repair that cost $1,118 per square foot.

"We are working closely with the Inspector General, providing him information on a regular basis," said City Solicitor James Timmins.

Administration officials were to also review faulty work performed under the

Would Be Cut Through Attrition, Retirement 11 Police Positions Unfilled

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Police manpower will shrink by 11 officers over five percent next year as the department grapples with budget constraints, according to Police Chief Paul Keenan's current budget plan.

All 11 positions will be cut through attrition or retirement, according to Chief Keenan who said that anticipated openings for three lieutenants, one sergeant and seven patrol officers will not be filled.

"We are not filling 11 positions," Chief Keenan told members of the City Council's Finance Committee during a Fiscal Year 2010 preliminary budget review March 12.

"Although crime isn't down, we're down in the number police officers," the chief added.

Department training grants have almost completely disappeared according to Keenan's own calculations. Budget cuts of $1.1 million have been made since 2007.

"We don't want to start training new officers," Keenan said. "I think it's a sad situation. We're kind of in a bind. We don't train our officers."

The chief also cited a fleet of aging and over-worked patrol cars in need of replacement.

"I think we're going to get to the critical stage," Chief Keenan told Councilors Michael McFarland, Doug Guro, Brian McNamee and John Keenan, the Finance Committee chairman.

The reduction in force of

Police Chief Seeks Extra Security Cameras For Traffic, Schools

Cameras have been installed throughout the city for Homeland Security, according to Police Chief Paul Keenan who wants to expand real-time video to traffic signals and schools.

Last week, Keenan told Finance Committee members that Homeland Security cameras are being installed in critical areas of the city as the federal government broadens its security measures.

Keenan was mum as to the number and location of the cameras but he said the live video from all points is being fed directly to police headquarters. Homeland Security funds are covering the total cost of the program.

In the future, Keenan would like to tie the federal security system into "a citywide camera system," at traffic signals for enforcement purposes and at the high school for safety reasons.

Such a program is now in operation in Chicago where

Inspector General Also Cites Employee Issues Independent Appraisal Recommended For College

Independence Day for Quincy College was moved back a bit this week after State Inspector General Gregory Sullivan recommended an "arms-length valuation" of the college as well as a review of key issues in a proposed Home Rule Petition.

"Quincy College is a valuable public asset," wrote Sullivan in his review of the college's petition for independence which is currently being considered by city councillors.

"It is my strong recommendation that the City of Quincy contract with an independent appraiser to conduct a full valuation of the college to determine the fair market value of this public asset," wrote Sullivan in a March 16 letter addressed to City Council President Jay Davis.

City Clerk Joseph Shea read the letter at Monday's Ordinance Committee meeting chaired by Ward 5 City Councillor Douglas Gutro.

Sullivan also described two potential problems in the Home Rule Petition. He cited a section waiving provisions of the state's conflict of interest law and, also, a second provision, "allowing employees of a private entity" to join the state's health insurance program.

Sullivan reviewed the Home Rule Petition at the request of Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymonds who objected to those three issues in the college's proposal for independence.

Sullivan's letter was delivered to Gutro, Davis, Mayor Thomas Koch, and other city officials before Monday's Ordinance Committee meeting.

Gutro set an April 27 date for the next discussion of the Home Rule Petition after city councillors voted to seek an independent appraiser of the college assets and value at the college's expense.

More than 70 supporters of Quincy College independence, sporting "Campaign for Independence" stickers, filled City Council and Harris presented a petition signed by 543 persons.

"We're happy for the input," City Solicitor Jim Timmins said of Sullivan's recommendations. Timmins added that Koch "believes the separation of the college is the appropriate thing to do."

Koch submitted the petition to City Council. Once it is approved, the petition will be submitted to the state legislature.

College President M. Sue Harris, former State Sen. Warren Tolman, the college's legal counsel, and four members of the college's Board of Governors spoke, outlining the need for independence, 50 years of quality education, and responding to questions regarding the petition.

Gutro acknowledged the college's problem with having "public oversight without public money."

Jo-Anne Bragg, a member of the Board of Governors and the School Committee, described a "public/private model" proposal designed to allow the college's employees to remain in the state's insurance program and the city's pension plan.

Other members of the Board of Governors, Mark Bertman and Ed Brown described their pride in Quincy College, problems with long-range planning, and the difficulty of raising money for the college when it is a department of the city.

"All we can do is rely on the tuitions that those students pay," said Brown who echoed Berkman's statement, "It's very difficult to fundraise. People feel that the funds are part of the city."

Councillor John Keenan said, "The concept of an independent college is the right way to go. I hope this works and moves forward." However, Keenan also outlined complex issues, involving the employees' health insurance and pensions.

In addition to Sullivan's letter, and the petitions, councillors received information on the college's finances and enrollments as requested by Councillor Michael McFarland.

According to a report by municipal auditors, Powers and Sullivan, Quincy College's "net assets exceed liabilities by $12.1 million" as of last year. This includes the value of Saville Hall, as well as furnishings and leasehold improvements to its Newport Avenue campus.

Brockton Firm Awarded Concourse Construction Bid

A Brockton firm has won the bid for the second phase of construction for the Quincy Center Concourse that calls for the overhaul of McGrath Highway into a pedestrian friendly parkway.

According to Mayor Thomas Koch, the $4.3 million bid awarded to J. Derenzo Co. will mark one of the first tangible signs of construction for the long-anticipated roadway and one of the first major gears in a $1 billion plan to redevelop Quincy Center.

"This road is vital for two reasons: To ease traffic for folks trying to get through downtown from the Expressway and to spur the kind of historic private investment in Quincy Center that is now becoming a reality," said Koch.

The McGrath Highway portion of the project calls for complete reconstruction of the existing road between Washington Street and Southern Artery (Route 3A), and includes wider sidewalks, new traffic signals, bike lanes, new trees and plantings, and a medium strip. Utilities will be relocated underground as part of the project.

The project is being paid for by a $2 million state Public Works and Economic Development grant and through the city's existing District Improvement Financing program.

City officials are expected to schedule a public meeting on the project in coming weeks, with construction expected to begin in earnest this spring. The project is anticipated to take 18 months to complete.

The McGrath Highway reconstruction will set the stage for the key portion of the road, where it crosses Hancock Street and creates the full East-West connection through Quincy Center first envisioned more than 30 years ago. After crossing Hancock Street, the road will connect with the existing Paul Harold Bridge and Burgin Parkway.

The Hancock Street portion of the project will also move forward this spring with scheduled demolition work to make way for the roadwork.

The concourse is seen as critical to the plans now being discussed publicly to dramatically transform Quincy Center into a new center of retail, office and living spaces. Street-Works Development, LLC of White Plains, New York is currently negotiating plans with the Koch administration, and both will be beginning a series of about 20 public meetings on the long-term plan beginning next week. A full schedule of public meetings will be published in The Sun.

Officials and developers expect the project to create at least $1 billion in private investment, create thousands of new jobs, and spur millions of dollars in new tax growth. Koch has said that it will be the largest private investment in city history.

Meeting On Plumbing Supply Relocation March 23

Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis will host a neighborhood meeting regarding the proposed location of PV Sullivan Plumbing Supplies Monday, March 23 at 6 p.m. in the second floor conference room of City Hall.

The business is planning to relocate from its current location on Liberty Street to the former Lappen's Auto Parts building.

Neighbors will have an opportunity to meet and ask questions of representatives from PV Sullivan at the meeting.

Later Monday night, the City Council's Finance Committee will meet to discuss the Tax Incentive Financing (TIF) requested by PV Sullivan. TIF is a tax incentive program which encourages the use and renovation of business property in Quincy.

School Custodians, Maintenance Workers, Non-Unionized Administrators

More City Employees Accept Wage Freeze

School custodians, maintenance workers and non-unionized administrators are the latest groups to agree to Mayor Thomas Koch's request to freeze employee wages for one year to help the city weather the ongoing economic crisis.

Custodians and maintenance workers, two individual unions, agreed to the one-year delay on contracted raises, a move that will save more than $200,000 in the budget that begins July 1. School principals, School Superintendent Richard DeCristofaro and his staff, and other school administrators also voluntarily agreed not to take raises, saving another $250,000.

"Every one of our members recognizes the tough times in the city, and we are willing to do our part working with the mayor," said James Connors, president of the Quincy Public Schools Custodians Association.

Added Maintenance Workers Association President Sean Martin:

"It is the right thing to do in these difficult times. We understand that sacrifices are needed to help get the city through this crisis, and our hope is that this vote will help save jobs and ensure that our schools receive the maintenance they need."

The two school unions join several other city unions to accept the wage freeze. Firefighters, police patrolmen, City Hall office workers, City Hall supervisors and school crossing guards, have all voted by wide margins on Koch's proposal, bringing the tally of total savings to date to more than $1 million.

Planning Board Approves B.J.'s Warehouse Plan

It took a nudge from the judge to do it but BJ's Wholesale Club has finally gained the Planning Board's approval to site a store at the entrance to the Crown Colony Office Park in South Quincy.

The Board had rejected the proposal by a 2-2 vote in October but BJ's sued and a Land Court judge ruled that it did not have the authority to not give its approval for the 85,000 square foot store.

No one had stated any problems the developer couldn't handle, he said.

The City Council will now hold a public hearing Monday, March 30, on a special permit that is necessary to build a retail operation in an area zoned for industry.

The Planning Board's unanimous approval placed a number of conditions on the project.

For one thing, the developer, QBJ Land Development LLC, would provide pedestrian access by way of a 10-foot wide walkway to the site from the Quincy Adams T Station.

Also the developer would limit the direction that trucks travel from the site and help resolve traffic problems at Liberty and Water Streets.

Religious Order Drops Adams Street Home Plan

The Centers of Light religious organization has withdrawn its plan to purchase the opulent seven bedroom mansion at 301 Adams St., for a group home with 50-seat chapel.

The withdrawal came after a Zoning Board of Appeals hearing that was attended by more than 100 opponents of the plan, the third to be offered in the area in the past two years.

Ward 5 City Councillor Doug Gutro said the action was not a withdrawal as much as "they just decided not to go through with it" after the Board continued the case without a finding

"The board was prepared to deny the application for a variance," said Ward 3 City Councillor Kevin Coughlin, who shares the area with Gutro.

"The Zoning Board heard the message that elected officials and residents both saw the use as detrimental to the neighborhood."

The variance was needed because the area is zoned for residences only.

Earlier, neighborhood opposition forced withdrawal of plans for expansion of the William B. Rice Eventide Home and a Montessori School, which eventually moved in after filing suit.

The opponents to all three mostly came from the Hospital Hill Association and the Adams National Historical Park Neighborhood Association.

Is there any plan for further development in the area?

"I hope not," said Coughlin.

"Thankfully, no," said Gutro. "Most neighbors just want to peacefully exist."

Auditor Candidates Interviewed Today

An ad hoc committee of city three councillors will interview five candidates for the long vacant post of city auditor today (Thursday) from 4 to 6 p.m. in the council president's office at City Hall.

The duties of the office have been carried on by an acting auditor, Susan O'Connor, since the resignation of Rick Fitzpatrick in July.

The interviews will be conducted by Council President Jay Davis and Councillors Brian McNamee and Michael McFarland.

Davis said the long delay in choosing a new auditor was due to the restructuring of the city's financial system and a new job description for the auditor, who answers to the City Council.

The auditor's job is essentially one of reviewing and analyzing and otherwise keeping an eye on the mayor's financial moves for the Council.

He or she should be a certified public accountant (CPA) or have a master's degree in business administration, public finance or accounting and a minimum of five years experience in municipal finance.

The Jimmy McIntyre I Knew

How Henry Bosworth Remembered Jimmy McIntyre

- See Page 8 -

Twenty-five years – can it possibly be a quarter-century since the late James R. McIntyre – Quincy's 26th mayor and one of the most beloved public servants in the city's history – was laid to rest in Mount Wollaston Cemetery?

I vividly remember the day of his funeral, Monday, March 12, 1984. I was one of the 1,000 mourners who sat shoulder-to-shoulder in St. John the Baptist Church for the former mayor and state senator's funeral Mass which was celebrated five days after his sudden death on March 7. His passing – at the much-too-early age of 53 – shook the city to its core.

I was only 19 at the time, a freshman at the University of New Hampshire. It was the Friday before spring break and I had decided to come home for my semester recess. It was two days after Jimmy had died. I hadn't heard the news yet as I boarded a Trailways bus in Durham, N.H. to Boston's South Station and then hopped on the Red Line to the Quincy Center T station.

Reaching Quincy, I bounded down the steps of the T station -- which Jimmy was instrumental in bringing to the city -- and walked briskly past McIntyre Mall -- named for Jimmy's father, former Quincy Police Captain William F. McIntyre. I was headed to The Quincy Sun office to surprise my father since he was unaware I was stopping in Quincy enroute to our home in Braintree.

As I reached City Hall, I noticed the American flag flapped in the air at half-staff. "I'll ask Henry about that when I get to the Quincy Sun office," I thought to myself.

I reached the Sun office at 1372 Hancock St. and opened the glass door. There was a subtle tap-tap-tap of typewriters

(no computers back then) as the staff worked on news copy, mostly with their heads down. You could sense something was wrong.

I said hello to those I knew and headed straight for my father's office in the back of the street-level space.

Henry came out of the office, surprised to see me. I expected a hearty hello and a "Well, the college boy is back." Instead, there was profound sadness.

"Jimmy McIntyre died," he told me in a soft voice. "He had a heart attack after surgery the other day."

The news left me speechless -- and heart-broken.

I felt my father's pain in the passing of one of his best friends through the years; a bond formed long before the Quincy Sun's inception in 1968.

But I had lost someone, too.

Jimmy McIntyre was my godfather.

I can remember, as a youngster, going to the office with my father and occasionally running into Jimmy. Sometimes he stopped in to chat with Henry; other times my father and I stopped in to see him at his Quincy Center law office. He was a gentle soul, whose smile was always wide and his eyes warm and caring.

As the years passed, I seemed to see less and less of Jimmy and his wife, Sheila, my godmother. But if I needed something -- anything -- they were there for me.

In March of 1980, Jimmy agreed to be my sponsor when I received the Sacrament of Confirmation at St. John's Church. He had agreed to be my godfather at my baptism at St. Thomas More Church 15 years earlier.

I was all dressed up for my confirmation: a light blue pin-striped suit with a red carnation. I sat with my parents and grandmother but I grew anxious as Mass time neared.

Jimmy hadn't arrived yet.

"Don't worry, Bobby, he'll be here," my father reassured me. "He's a busy guy." And then, almost on cue, Jimmy was at the side of pew, ready to join me as the Mass began.

Bishop Joseph F. Maguire, the former pastor at St. John's Church, was the celebrant. As I got confirmed, Jimmy placed his right hand on my right shoulder. Unbeknownst to me, a Quincy Sun photographer was there taking pictures. On the front page of the next issue Henry placed a picture of my confirmation. It was taken from behind me so you couldn't really see who it was. But I knew it was me because of that suit!

After the ceremony, we took some family photos "for posterity" as my father liked to say. I still have them today.

That may have been the last time I saw Jimmy.

But he never stopped helping me.

A few years later, when it came time to start the college application process, I chose UNH as my first choice. I had my work cut out from me as an out-of-state applicant from a public high school and already there were four or five other Braintree High School classmates vying for a spot in the freshman class.

Well, I filled out all my college applications and mailed them. And, one by one, I was accepted to each one ... but I hadn't heard from UNH yet. It was April and I grew nervous.

The 'Heart And Soul' Of James McIntyre

Recently and rather unnoticed, March 7 marked the 25th anniversary of the passing of former Mayor and State Senator James R. McIntyre.

His death at age 53 shocked the City of Quincy. Under his political leadership, the Democratic Party became Quincy's dominant political party. His arrival on the political scene brought a new generation of Quincy politicians. Quincy's Irish-American base took over city politics.

While I did not move to Quincy until age 36 in 1984 – the same year he passed away – I had many Irish relatives living in Quincy. In Houghs Neck, I had a great aunt from Cork named Elizabeth Murphy. On Upland Road, I had my grandfather, uncle, aunt and cousin. My uncle George Harrington owned the Esso gas station by the Neponset Bridge. He was one of the those new Democrats who came of age politically with McIntyre.

When Grandpa Har-

ington died in 1966, I remember Mayor McIntyre and his wife, Sheila, came to his wake at Keohane's. When Mayor McIntyre passed away, I was at his wake at the same funeral parlor. I may look Italian but I have an Irish sense of duty. I remembered his kindness to my family back in 1966 and I returned the very same in 1984.

In the 1960s and 1970s, Quincy sat a crossroads. Mayor McIntyre had a long-term vision of where Quincy should be heading and he started the city down that road and never looked back.

As I look as the MBTA Red Line and its history and benefit to Quincy and as I look to the plans for a new Downtown Quincy today and tomorrow, I see the heart and soul of Jim McIntyre still inspiring Quincy's newest generation of political leadership. It all began some 50 years ago when one man decided on becoming an elected official. We can thank James McIntyre for his vision and determination to leave behind a better Quincy than the one he found.

Quincy Revaluation Delay Possible, Assessors Say

By FRANK MCCAULEY

New property valuations may not be put into effect for 1967 tax bills, the board of assessors disclosed today.

William J. Callahan, chairman of the Board of Assessors, attributed the possibility of a delay to a likely postponement of distribution of State Aid information and the need for time to review the valuation recommendation of Cole, Layer and Trumble.

In the same statement, Mr. Callahan said a board decision to postpone use of the new values until 1968 may not bring on court action to force 1967 use of the new figures. (Editor's note: The 100% valuations contained in the Cole, Layer and Trumble report were never used. Full, fair (100%) valuation of real and personal property was not implemented until FY1984.)

BELLOTTI CLEARED OF CONFLICT OF INTEREST CHARGES

A three-member special committee appointed by Attorney General Elliot Richardson cleared former Lt. Governor Francis X. Bellotti of conflict of interest charges leveled by Richardson during the November 1966 election campaign.

In a two-page report the committee stated that "By virtue and as a result of such an investigation, the committee is satisfied there is no evidence that Francis X. Bellotti performed any acts which were in violation of the conflict of interest sections of Chapter 268A of the General Laws."

Sunbeams

By Henry Bosworth

Quincy Will Never Be The Same

Below is the text of the Sunbeams column written by Henry W. Bosworth after the passing of longtime friend James R. McIntyre 25 years ago. The column appeared in the March 15, 1984 issue of The Quincy Sun.

Quincy will never quite be the same again without Jim McIntyre.

He was one of the brightest political stars in the city's history. He had intelligence wrapped in common sense. He moved with foresight and insight while others stumbled over hindsight.

He was as much at ease with a President as he was with a precinct level envelope stuffer.

He was witty, charming and compassionate. He had charisma by the pound and at his fighting weight that was a lot of charisma.

He was a good family man—a devoted son, husband and father.

He liked people and they liked him. He knew most of them by first name. And he was Jimmy or Jim to them.

He never lost the common touch.

He was also one of those rare individuals who could get along with just about anyone—even his political critics and enemies. He even found one enemy a job once-only to have him later turn on him.

Yes, he had enemies. Not many. But some. Any man with the political clout he carried over nearly three decades and with his popularity would have to pick up some resentment, jealousy and, of course, enemies along the way.

But those detractors and enemies respected him. They may have called him a few things but one thing they never called him was "stupid."

Some of them said he ran the "machine." Well, if there was a machine it at least had round wheels and moved Quincy forward.

One who liked to toss the word "machine" at him tried to get one of his own going. But it turned out to have square wheels and if it moved at all, it was backwards.

But that's the kind of man Jim McIntyre was. If someone needed a helping hand, he was there with two.

His political career was somewhat spectacular.

He was elected city councillor at age 25 in 1955 in his first bid for office while still in college. He was soon city council president, state representative, state senator and mayor.

He gave up the mayor's job to become counsel to the Massachusetts senate—a post he held at the time of his death last week.

That job took him out of the political spotlight but not out of politics. He remained a dominant political figure in the background.

JAMES MCINTYRE

Just about every young person thinking of running for office sought his advice first. And veteran office holders sought his counsel, too.

If he had remained in the political arena as a candidate there is no telling how far he would have gone. Many, some years back, were sure they saw a future governor in him.

What he really wanted to be politically, he never was. He wanted to be a Congressman and was long considered heir apparent to the 11th Congressional seat held by his close friend, Jim Burke. But by the time Burke retired, it was the wrong time for Jim McIntyre.

Most people remember him for his many political victories. I remember him fondly for his only political defeat. Because it showed me Jim McIntyre, the man and the McIntyre family.

He was only 29 years old when he challenged the old master, powerful incumbent Amelio Della Chiesa for mayor in 1959.

It was one of the hottest mayoral races in years with Della Chiesa winning 17,650 to 15,533—a slim 1,117 vote margin.

I walked into Jim's campaign headquarters election night as he was studying what he considered key early returns.

"I don't think we're going to make it," he said.

Later figures proved him right.

His wife, Sheila was there at his side. When they were sure it was not to be their night, Sheila went to a phone and put in a call to her mother in Niagara Falls, NY.

Falls, NY.

"Jimmy didn't make it," she told her mother. And she added: "But it's only an election. We lost something more important than that."

She was referring to the death not very long before of their infant son, William, named after Jim's father, Police Capt. William McIntyre.

Now it was getting late. James (Pete) Ricciuti, his longtime friend and adviser and Jim looked at one another. Both knew what they were going to do.

"Let's go," Jim said.

I went along with them as they walked across the street to City Hall and climbed the stairs to the mayor's office that had eluded them that night.

Della Chiesa was in his office after leaving his own campaign headquarters.

"Congratulations, Mel," Jim said, extending his hand. "You're still the mayor."

Della Chiesa grasped his hand and then, like a father, slipped his arm around Jim and said: "You're young, Jimmy. Your day will come."

Times were different back then.

The two men had campaigned hard against one another. Strong words had been thrown back and forth between the two political camps.

Now the heated battle was over. One had won, the other had lost. But they were still friends. There was no hatred. It would still be Mel and Jimmy.

The years passed.

Jim and Sheila adopted four children—Elizabeth, Sheila, William and Charles—giving them a good home filled with warmth and love.

Tragedy, as everyone knows, struck last December when the second William died of injuries suffered in a fall down an elevator shaft.

And now tragedy has struck again.

The death of Jimmy McIntyre at 53 is a tragedy not only to his family and friends but to the city he loved.

His day came as Della Chiesa said it would.

It's sad it ended so soon.

We'll miss you, Jim.

Quincy Planning Department Wins National Award

The City of Quincy was presented with the 2009 Audrey Nelson Community Development Achievement Award at a recent conference organized by the National Community Development Association.

The announcement was made by Mayor Thomas P. Koch and Planning Director Dennis E. Harrington.

The award recognizes exemplary uses of Community Development Block Grant funding, particularly projects and programs that address the needs of neighborhoods and families.

Quincy was selected to win this award for its partnership with the South Shore YMCA, State Street Bank, and the Germantown Neighborhood Council for the acquisition and rehabilitation of the former St. Boniface Church into the new Germantown Neighborhood Center on Palmer Street.

"Once again, we were able to submit a very strong application due to the support we received from Congressman William D. Delahunt and the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development regarding this project," Harrington said. "As always, we greatly appreciate the support of our federal officials."

"This is the third national award that our Department of Planning and Community Development has won in six months," Koch said.

"I could not be more proud of our staff in this department who continue to work hard in administering our community development programs."

Since 1975, the CDBG program has provided over $67 million to the City of Quincy for community development programs related to housing rehabilitation; first-time homebuyers; affordable housing; public facilities; public services; public works; economic development; and handicapped accessibility projects.

Sterling School Students Honored With 'Make A Difference' Award

Sterling Middle School eighth grade students, Sarah Spargo and Jackson Li, were recently honored at the John F. Kennedy Library for their service to the community.

Spargo and Li received the "Make A Difference Award" which honors middle school students who make a difference in their community through service projects.

Sarah and Jackson are involved in various community programs including the Helping Hands Youth Council, "The Green Team" and Operation Smile. It was their work with Sterling's Student Council Community Food Drive, the De-

Paulo Drive and Quincy recycling efforts that yielded them this presidential awards.

Through their community services, Sarah and Jackson have distinguished themselves as model members of their school and city community.

Quincy Girl Scouts Earn National, Local Honors

Three North Quincy High School sophomores recently received the Silver Award, the second highest award in Girl Scouting. The award is recognized nationally.

The three Girl Scouts are Abigail Egan, Montana McBirney and Nicole Regal of Girl Scout Troop 4157. All three have been members of Quincy Girl Scouts for over ten years and participated in the community service project, "Literacy Learning With Lily."

The project required research, writing and organizational skills and culminated in the citywide distribution of literacy packets to every student in Quincy public pre-school and kindergarten classes.

The packets contain a 20-page storybook with companion CD created, written, illustrated and recorded by the girls.

The goals of the project were to promote sharing, independent learning and literacy for both visual and auditory learners.

In addition, 13 Quincy Girl Scouts earned their Bronze awards which is the highest award that a Junior Girl Scout can earn. The Scouts and their projects are described below.

Eileen Skudris of Troop 4172 established a program to collect children's clothing to be sent to soldiers in Iraq. The soldiers requested the clothing and distributed the items as needed.

Krystina Stoker of Troop 4172 who volunteers at the Germantown Community Center planned and ran a dance camp for the center's children and volunteered in the summer to organize fun and safe activities for the children.

Nicole Sullivan and Cassandra Dineen of Troop 4109 earned their Bronze Awards through their campaign to educate their peers about the underprivileged families and their struggles in Sierra Leone.

Through their aid, they outfitted a poor community with two bales of mosquito nets to prevent malaria as well as much-needed books and school supplies.

The awards were presented to Troop 4107 members: Kelly Dooling, Amanda Flores, Stacey Gallagher, Lauren Gambon, Julia Goyette, Leann McColgan, Kaitlin Morrill, Cecilia Theberge and Sara Tran.

The project's goal was to teach young city girls the benefit of camping and the basics of first aid, outdoor cooking, and fire safety. The project concluded with the Brownies' first overnight camping trip.

Quincy High's Diamela Kodra Awarded Third Place In Essay Contest

Diamela Kodra, sophomore at Quincy High, won third place in an essay contest sponsored by Harvard's Program for International Education (HPIE).

HPIE brings global awareness to high school classes in Quincy, Boston and surrounding communities.

For eight weeks (one social studies class per week), Harvard undergrads delivered detailed lessons using the Presidential Election of 2008 as the backdrop for U.S. and global responses to minimum wage, unemployment, education and healthcare. The culmination of the program was a field trip which included a tour of Harvard Yard, a lecture, poetry and dance. The day ended with Quincy High

Paul Phillips To Seek QEA Re-election

Paul Phillips, who announced his plans to step down after 12 years as president of the 940-member Quincy Education Association last September, has changed his mind.

Rather than return to teaching, he'll run for another term at the head of the union.

"Since that time (September)," he said, "the economy has tanked and layoffs are imminent."

"Add to that the possibility that my return might add a layoff to the high school English departments, and the repeated urging of many of my colleagues that I 'stick around' to help us through these troubled times, and my intentions seem rather selfish at a time like this

"I realize that I can still teach later, even after retirement, if necessary."

Phillips said he plans to run for another one-year term as president of the QEA in May, "subject to the vote of my 940 colleagues. I've been honored to serve them for a dozen years, and if they approve, I'll make it a baker's dozen."

contract, including a burst pipe at the Broad Meadows Middle School that destroyed a computer lab.

The city entered into the contract with Honeywell in 2007, when much of the work was also completed. The agreement, allowed by recent state legislation, was based on a "energy performance contract," meaning Honeywell charged the city upfront for repairs but the cost was supposed to be paid back by energy savings accumulated over 20 years. The legislation and contract allowed Honeywell to hire subcontractors without using the public bid process.

$30,000 For Cemeteries

The City Council Monday night approved a transfer of $30,000 from the sale of lots in the city's six cemeteries to the improvement account.

The funds will be used for loam, seed, wood panels, fertilizer and other items used in the operation and maintenance of the graveyards.

The historic burial places maintained by the city include the Hancock, Snug Harbor and Sailors' Home Cemeteries; the active ones are Mount Wollaston, Pine Hill and Hall.

The cost of a lot ranges from $850 for a single to $10,000 for a spot in a mausoleum.

Distributed To The Sick And Shut-In St. Chrysostom's Begins Prayer Shawl Ministry

Early last year, Muriel Burnhauser, a parishioner of St. Chrysostom's Episcopal Church in Wollaston, now living near Atlanta, GA, sent a parcel to The Rev. David Hefling, rector at St. Chrysostom's, filled with hand-knit shawls.

Included was a letter explaining them and a special blessing prayer. Burnhauser wanted them to be distributed to the sick and shut-in in her hometown.

At about the same time, Quincy Medical Center began its "Palliative Care Cart" program, which Rev. Hefling learned about from The Rev. Esther Bowen of the Pastoral Care Department.

And thus, a new ministry has been born at St. Chrysostom's Church located on the corner of Linden and Hancock Streets in Wollaston.

Parishioner Sheila MacDonald starting knitting the shawls herself and between she and Burnhauser, boxes of them were going to QMC on a regular basis. As they were blessed on Sundays and sent out, more people became interested in making them.

Now, MacDonald runs knitting classes every Sunday for those who want to make this part of their own spiritual journey and reach out to others.

Rev. Bowen has been to St. Chrysostom's to personally thank those involved for their interest and to express how appreciative recipients are.

"We can't keep them on the carts," Bowen told the parish.

Ideas are popping up for other knitting ministries, including scarves and mittens for the homeless at the Common Cathedral in Boston and small blankets for the Quincy Humane Society, where several parishioners volunteer.

About a dozen people are knitting away, from beginners to "old timers." Even the Rector, the Rev. Hefling, is trying his hand at a newly acquired skill.

School Department will join all of the mayor's appointments, a total of more than 100 non-union employees, that will not receive raises in the upcoming fiscal year.

Talks are ongoing with several unions, including teachers, regarding the wage freeze. No union to date has rejected the proposal, which could save as much as $5 million if all workers agree to it.

"I continue to be grateful for the cooperation and commitment to our city's future shown by all of our employees and their union leadership," said Koch. "We are working collaboratively through this crisis, and the steps we are taking now will not eliminate tough decisions ahead, but will go a long way to ensuring our stability."

The wage proposal is the second major collaboration between city unions and the Koch administration over the last several months. In the fall, unions agreed to enroll in the state-run Group Insurance Commission, a move that will save at least $4 million in health care costs in the first year alone.

Regardless of how the entire wage-freeze package plays out, substantial budget cuts will still be necessary within the city, which is facing a $6.8 million total cut in state aid and declining revenue in other areas. Koch expects to deliver his budget proposal to the City Council next month.

Three students from the Sterling Middle School have won honorable mention and a prize of $250 in C-SPAN's national "Student Cam" video competition for 2009.

Emily Xie, Griffin Curran and Ingrid Andrade produced the video "Environment Eagles Take Flight," a documentary about the environment.

The contest, now in its fifth year, drew more than 1,900 entries from middle and high school students in 41 states, the District of Columbia and Guam.

There were 75 student and 11 teacher awards given, including two first prizes, eight seconds, 16 thirds and 48 honorable mentions.

Students were asked to focus their documentaries on the topic "A message to the new president: What is the most urgent issue for the new president to address after taking office and why?"

The top five issues with students across the country in order were the economy, education, alternative energy, climate change and the Iraq War/the War on Terror/

National security issues.

Fire Prevention: Smoke Detectors

I'm in the process of updating my household smoke detectors. It's recommended we do so after 10 years of use. I'm now attempting to do as much homework as I can before I commit to a certain type and brand. Here's why:

The preferred combination smoke detector and carbon monoxide detector is a detector, which uses a photoelectric sensor as the detecting mechanism for smoke. It's actually a code requirement while the technology has been slow to catch up with the State requirements. These combination detectors are out there though. However, many combinations available now use the ionization method of smoke detection, which is not preferred over the former. Here's why:

The ionization detector is quicker to sense the small, invisible particles, which would be more prevalent in an immediately flaming fire. The photoelectric detector is quicker to sense the larger, visible smoke particulates which are more prevalent

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau

in a slowly developing, smoldering fire such as that found in the incipient stages of a fire in upholstered furniture. This latter type of fire is more prevalent within a home, which is why a photoelectric smoke detector is preferred within a home. That being said, either detector is obviously preferable over no detector.

In every study I have read on the differences in detection sensors, there is agreement, the final conclusion is always the same, either detector is preferred over no detector in a home. Therefore, no one should conclude from studies or this article that the differences in sensors justifies not having them or not maintaining them. Studies indicate working smoke detectors in your home can double your chances of survival. Since the early 70's when smoke alarms were first marketed, fire deaths have been cut in half. 50% of the fire deaths that occur each year take place in the 5% of homes without smoke alarms.

I am writing to convey that you have a choice in what type of detector you prefer to use within your home. Where it's time for me to update my detectors, and having read this study, I've concluded I prefer to now use photoelectric smoke detectors. At this time, I am also going to opt for combination smoke and CO detection on two levels of my home. That will eliminate the need for additional individual plug in or battery operated CO detection. At the same time, I want to make certain the combination detector includes photoelectric smoke sensors.

I believe in the months and years to come, more will be written on this subject. Changes in the State Building Code alone indicate the trend toward photoelectric smoke detection use. While it appears the industry is slow to adapt to these studies, the technology is available.

You might consider the differences if it is time to change and update your detectors as well. Meanwhile, remember, we recommend they be tested monthly, and change the batteries yearly if applicable. Thank you for doing so.

Life, Works Of Architect Richardson Topic At Crane Library March 25

Henry Hobson Richardson, known as the "First American Architect," will be the focus on a free illustrated talk by Allan Galper Wednesday, March 25 at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy Center.

Richardson, the designer of Trinity Church in Boston and Quincy's own Crane Memorial Library, changed the face of American architecture as well as the public landscape of greater Boston. His buildings are still studied today.

Born in 1838 in Louisiana, H.H. Richardson popularized an architectural style known as Richardsonian Romanesque. Among his major works, Richardson designed a series of small public library buildings, including the Crane Library in Quincy.

Considered to be the best of his five libraries, the Crane exemplifies the Richardsonian Romanesque style and was designated a National Historic Landmark in 1987.

Galper, an architectural historian, lectures about H.H. Richardson's life and architecture. He is the co-founder of the Committee to Save the H.H. Richardson House in Brookline and a member of the Board of Directors of the New England Chapter of the Society of Architectural Historians.

Galper works as an attorney at McCarter & English, LLP in Boston.

This program is the first of a series called Built in Quincy that explores Quincy's architectural heritage.

The talk is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

For more information, call 617-376-1301 or visit thomascranelibrary.org

In addition to writing The Naked Quaker, she is a regular columnist in New England Ancestors, the journal of the New England Historical Genealogical Society and has also published

A Job Well Done

On Monday, March 9, 2009, at approximately 8:15 a.m., Officer Harry Breen interviewed a female victim of domestic violence at the police station.

The victim stated that last night she went to visit a friend and came home later than expected. Her husband was angry because she was late and accused her of having an affair. She said that he yelled and swore at her, then grabbed the thick chain necklace around her neck, using it to slam her against the walls and refrigerator.

Her husband/suspect then grabbed her by the hair and forced her to the ground as he threatened to kill her. The victim was able to escape to the bathroom and lock the door and started to call the police, but after listening to her husband's pleas not to call, along with promises that he would stop, the victim did not make the call and came out after her husband calmed down.

In the morning, the victim told her husband that she was going to the library to do some work and he said that he would go with her. As the victim drove with her husband and three year old daughter in the car, she turned into the parking lot of Police Headquarters. Her husband asked her not to go in and then as she got out, he locked the doors so that she could not get their daughter out of the car. At this time, the victim hit the alarm button on her keys and he then unlocked the doors.

The victim and her daughter came into Police Headquarters and initiated action against her husband.

After listening to the victim's statement, Officer Breen went out to the parking lot to looking for the suspect but he was gone. A description of the suspect was given out and that he was wanted on criminal charges.

A short time later, Officer Robert Pearson found the suspect walking on Sea Street. The suspect was placed into custody and transported to Police Headquarters. At the station, Officer Breen noted that the victim had some scratches on her neck and a bruise on her shoulder, but she declined medical attention. Photographs of the injuries were taken for evidence purposes.

The victim said that she would seek a restraining order. Officer Breen filed an additional report to the Division of Family Services because the child witnessed the assault.

The suspect, a 36-year-old Quincy resident, was charged with "Domestic Violence Assault and Battery."

Nice Work!

A JOB WELL DONE: On Saturday, March 7, 2009 at approximately 3:45 p.m., Officers Daniel Francis and Joseph McGunigle were dispatched to the Water Street Bridge for a report of an individual attempting to kill himself by jumping off the bridge.

Quincy Police Communications updated responding units that the male had scaled the (suicide) fence and appeared to be contemplating jumping onto Burgin Parkway below. The distance from the Water Street Bridge to the four lane Burgin Parkway below is approximately forty feet and was heavily traveled, with most vehicles traveling between thirty-five to forty-five miles per hour and trains going much faster.

Upon arrival, Officer Francis observed a male standing on the steel guardrail in the middle of the bridge. He had his hands covering his face and was making crying/wimpering sounds. The officer observed a forty-ounce bottle of malt liquor and a pint of vodka located in close proximity to the male. Both containers were more than half empty.

Officer Francis immediately engaged the male in conversation and within a short time was able to convince him to step from the guardrail back onto the sidewalk. The male displayed obvious signs of distress (i.e. red faced and crying) and stated that he had lost his job and was no longer able to provide for his family. He added that he had been drinking alcohol in an attempt to dull his pain to no avail.

Officer Francis contacted communications and requested EMTs to respond to the bridge to evaluate the male and after a brief assessment, the male was convinced to go to Quincy Medical Center to speak with someone regarding his suicidal ideation.

Police Department Will Not Fill 11 Positions

11 officers represents potential savings of $1,162,000 on the salary line, according to Chief Keenan.

The major portion of the department's budget is for salaries totaling $20,910,728 after the mid-year cuts.

Currently, the department has 199 staff officer positions, including the chief. There are two current openings and nine anticipated openings.

With the reductions, the force will operate at 188 in 2009.

Just a decade ago, the department staffed 217 officers which included 167 patrol officers in contrast to the 150 patrol officers this year and the 143 patrol officers planned in next year's budget.

During the same years between 2000 and 2009, the number of captains dropped from six to four. Next year, the lieutenant slots will decrease from 16 to 13 and sergeant positions from 29 to 27.

"If all goes well, we'll keep 143 patrol officers," Chief Keenan said, before outlining police officer assignments, such as patrol, detective, investigative, drug unit, DARE, and community policing.

Chief Keenan discussed his budget plans with four members of the Finance Committee last week during a fact-finding session scheduled by Chairman John Keenan.

The Committee has scheduled meetings with all city department heads as officials brace for a barebones 2010 budget.

Chief Keenan also reviewed the city's crime statistics, the work of department units, vehicle needs, and police patrol coverage.

On the bright side, Chief Keenan said that funds from 11 grants awarded to the city totaling $464,803 have allowed many programs to continue.

Chief Keenan, also, hopes the city will qualify for federal stimulus funding aimed at retaining police officers.

Committee questioning focused on the department's patrol coverage, its unique Harbor Unit, and employee pay differentials.

Chief Keenan provided statistics indicating that the number of police service calls have decreased or remained consistent during the past five years while arrests have increased by an average of 2.1% in each of the past five years with a 10% increase since 2000.

The department registered 64,244 service calls in 2008 and 66,355 in 2007, a drop of over 2,000 in 12 months. However, reports of major crimes, such as assault and battery or drug possession, have either remained steady or increased in the past five years.

Other crimes, like identity theft that were barely on the radar previously have doubled in five years with 43 reported in 2004 and 108 in 2008.

In the past two years, police arrests increased from 1,987 in 2007 to 2,021 in 2008, according to department data provided to the Committee.

Councillors questioned the chief on police sector coverage.

McFarland asked whether cuts in State Police Units would affect state properties within the city, "Is that going to be a concern for us?"

Chairman Keenan said, "I know their ranks have been going down" and noted that State Police have been consolidating barracks.

Chief Keenan said he has not been informed of any changes. The state currently patrols such areas as Quincy Shore Drive, Wollaston Beach, Blue Hills and Squantum Point Park, often in conjunction with the city.

Chief Keenan, also, described the department's organization, duties of the four captains, police patrols, and community policing.

In addition, Chief Keenan outlined various special units, such as the Harbor Unit and the DARE program which educates youngsters on drugs and alcohol.

"The DARE program has been a shining star for two generations," said Chief Keenan.

Despite the cuts, Chief Keenan said the city is safe.

"We have coverage in every area of the city, 24/7," Chief Keenan provided a breakdown on calls, assignments for each of the city's four patrol sectors, and explained that geographical areas expand and contract as needed.

"They back each other up," Chief Keenan said that the number of on-duty patrol cars on the overnight shift ranges from 10 to 13:

"We may go down to ten cars. Then, areas would expand. It's not ideal. No area goes uncovered."

McNamee asked whether a low crime area such as Ward 6 is neglected when patrols are moved out. He, also, sought assurance that activity in Marina Bay would be monitored in warmer weather.

"We've had a shooting out there," McNamee said, adding that closing time often becomes loud on the boardwalk.

Chief Keenan said police are aware of the boardwalk and respond when needed and that Squantum is covered.

As for Marina Bay, the boardwalk is privately owned and patrolled by details and police respond to all calls.

Councillors asked how the Harbor Unit operated and whether other waterfront communities operate such units.

Chief Keenan described the unit as fairly unique, said the three-officer unit will not be in operation until May this year due to budget concerns.

The department, also, sponsors a Dive Team which responds to mutual aid calls on 'comp' time.

In return, Chief Keenan said the city has access to the bomb squads and swat teams of other departments, through mutual aid.

Gutro asked if the Harbor Unit will be monitoring new laws on harbor discharge and Chief Keenan said that is part of their duties.

Salaries account for over $20 million of the police budget, but the breakdown can be confusing, according to Chairman Keenan.

Chairman Keenan said he had no particular objection to payments but their application to salaries is confusing. He sought some clarity in the description and breakdown of such payments.

According to the current police budget, there are at least a dozen salary boosts for police personnel with the largest expenditure, $2.7 million under the Quinn Bill.

The Quinn Bill provides increases for relevant education credits. Of that sum, the city pays approximately $1.2 million, according to Chief Keenan.

The second highest payout is the shift differential accounting for some $1.5 million.

Among the other salary increments listed in the budget are Longevity and Enhanced Longevity, Reading Time, Uniform Allowance, and Training Time.

The Finance Committee will meet again with Chief Keenan when the mayor's 2009-2010 budget is finalized and submitted to the City Council.

Police Chief Seeks Extra Security Cameras

$6 million in surveillance cameras were installed throughout the city in an effort to stop crime.

According to a Chicago Sun Times report, police officers love the new system called "Operation Virtual Shield" and have been able to identify traffic scofflaws.

Correction

The Community Preservation account (CPA) is funded by a surcharge on the real estate tax bill.

For the person owning average home valued at $347,200, the surcharge this year was $31.15, according to Assessor Marion Fantucchio.

Fantucchio said the first $100,000 value is exempted and the taxpayer is billed 1% of the balance.

A report last week incorrectly stated that the hotel and motel tax covered CPA. In Fiscal 2008, the hotel and motel tax totaled $956,513, according to Acting Auditor Susan O'Connor. Those funds were used to pay down debt service.

Give Your Dryer a Good Cleaning

Q. I share a laundry room with the upstairs tenants, and the washer and dryer get heavy use. The only annoying thing is that the upstairs folks never clean out the lint screen, so after they are done drying several loads I end up removing half-inch-thick (or more) collections of lint. Lately, I have noticed that my clothes don't seem to dry as well and that they sometimes have little lint balls stuck to them. Does the dryer need cleaning? — Nate in New Hampshire

A. I'd definitely say yes. The parts of the dryer that remove lint need to be inspected and cleaned.

Are you both tenants? If so, and the landlord supplies the washer and dryer, inform him or her right away that there is a lint (and drying) problem and that the dryer needs cleaning. Excess lint is a fire hazard, so prompt attention should be paid.

If you're the owner or you offer to fix the problem in return for a break on the rent (some landlords are grateful for the extra help), here's how to clean collected and trapped lint from the dryer and vents.

1) Unplug the dryer and detach the vent hose from the back.

2) With a helper, maneuver the dryer out from the wall.

3) Check the lint trap inside the dryer first: use a flexible brush (like a soft bottle brush) to catch larger lint clusters and remove them. Vacuum out the space using the extension attachment on your vacuum cleaner.

4) Wipe or scrub away any buildup of gunk around or inside the lint trap, using water and a little detergent.

5) Wipe the interior drum clean.

6) Get behind the dryer and inspect the exit chute to which the dryer vent was attached. Use your hand or the brush to sweep out big clumps of lint; vacuum out the chute.

7) Inspect the dryer vent and clean the same way. Also inspect and clean the outside exhaust vent. If you want to clean the entire vent run, a duct cleaning tool is available at home-improvement stores in 10- and 20-foot lengths.

This is about the most you can do to reduce lint buildup in the dryer. Lint also might be building up behind the drum, but it's generally not recommended that you disassemble the dryer -- have an appliance repair person come and do that. Still, just this little maintenance effort, done twice a year, will significantly improve the efficiency of your dryer and reduce the risk of a lint fire.

HOME TIP: Never allow lint to build up on dryer screens -- clean the screen after every drying cycle. Lint can block the flow of air, cause excessive heat buildup and even result in a fire in some dryers.

Send questions or home-repair tips to homeguru2000@hotmail.com, or write This Is a Hammer, c/o King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

(ARA) - Is your spring cleaning really as clean as you think it is? Spring cleaning is supposed to be a ritual of purging the accumulated dirt, germs and odor from a winter-weary home to create a clean and healthy living space. Unfortunately, the often caustic and toxic ingredients used in most conventional cleaning products can be just as harmful as the dirt and germs they are meant to eliminate.

Even some so-called natural cleansers can contain these same or similar nasty ingredients. And you would know this only if the manufacturer practices full disclosure of ingredients on its labels, which is not required on home care products.

Think about it -- when was the last time you saw a full ingredient listing on your spray cleaner?

The best way to make sure your living space is clean and healthy is to use safe, natural cleaning products you create yourself, using natural and inexpensive ingredients you can pick up at any natural grocery store. It's cost-effective, not difficult and, like the task of spring cleaning itself, it's satisfying and rewarding. You can craft your own, homespun versions of everything from carpet cleaner to furniture dusting polish -- and have the satisfying assurance that you really are keeping your home green and clean.

Whether you're shopping for prepared natural cleaning solutions or making your own, keep in mind that the word "aromatherapy" is now being applied to everything scented -- from dishwashing liquid to laundry detergent. The true practice of aromatherapy relies on using pure essential oils extracted from plants. According to Tom Havran, aromatherapy product developer at Aura Cacia, "These natural plant essences nurture us on mental, emotional, physical and even spiritual levels." He adds, "While house cleaning isn't exactly a spiritual exercise, adding the effects and properties of essential oils to your homemade household products can enhance the experience and the effectiveness of your task."

Essential oils have potent antimicrobial effects along with their clean, pleasant natural aromas. Here are a few "classic" homecare essential oils suggested by

Mr. Havran: lemon (clean, sweet, uplifting scent; deodorizing), peppermint (minty, fresh; air purifier; mild pest repellent), and eucalyptus and tea tree (air and surface sanitizers; fresh, therapeutic aromas).

Tom also has a shopping list of key ingredients for making your own homecare products:

- * Baking soda (sodium bicarbonate) -- Gently abrasive scouring powder, odor absorber and an excellent base for making your own cleaning preparations.

- * Washing soda (sodium carbonate)

- * Borax (sodium borate) -- Natural mineral compound, laundry booster, multipurpose cleanser, fungicide/insecticide

- * White distilled vinegar (acetic acid)

- * Liquid soap (sodium hydroxide) -- Choose from vegetable oil-based soaps such as olive oil or sweet almond.

- * Distilled water -- Clean, distilled water acts as a better carrier and dirt solvent. Tap water will often contain salts and minerals that can lead to spotting and buildup.

- * Essential oils
- * Spray bottles
- * Natural bristle scrubbing brushes

- * Squeeze bottles
- * Cotton dusting cloth
- * Hemp or jute fiber scrubbing cloth

- * Tote to put it all in Follow these simple recipes for making your own basic homecare products:

Basic Spray Cleaner
2 cups water
1/2 teaspoon sodium borate

1/4 teaspoon liquid soap
36 drops essential oil
Gentle Scouring Cream
1/2 cup baking soda
Liquid soap

18 drops essential oil
Add essential oils to baking soda and blend. Next, incorporate the liquid soap, several drops at a time, until a creamy paste forms.

Window Cleaner
2 cups water
3 tablespoons vinegar
1/4 teaspoon liquid soap
36 drops essential oil
Wooden Furniture Polishing Oil

3 tablespoons vinegar
1/2 teaspoon jojoba oil
10 drops lemon essential oil

Carpet Deodorizing Powder
1 cup baking soda
18 drops essential oil

Madelene Semeria Earns LMC Designation

Madelene Semeria of CENTURY 21 Abigail Adams, Quincy, has successfully completed the Massachusetts Association of Realtors Loss Mitigation Certification Course (LMC) offered by the Plymouth and South Shore Association of Realtors.

This comprehensive one-day course was developed to educate Realtors on the intricate issues and problems associated with transactions involving foreclosures, short sales, properties being sold by auction, and bank-owned (REO) real estate.

The course is taught by national and local industry experts in loss mitigation and is designed to equip Realtors with the tools and knowledge needed to deal with short sales on both the buying and listing side; the process, ethics, laws, contracts and credit issues involved and how best to work with lenders.

The course addresses the human element of these transactions as consumers face losing their homes. "These transactions can be hugely complicated with many players, let alone the emotional component," said Semeria.

"I feel better equipped to advocate and advise my clients with the knowledge gained from this course," she added.

Upon completion of the Loss Mitigation Certification Course, participants earn lifetime usage of the LMC designation and continuing education credits necessary for real estate license renewal.

(ARA) - In bad economic times, it's understandable for people to worry more about the security of their homes and families. With police departments across the country being forced to cut their budgets, homeowners may feel anxious about the safety in their community.

"With so many people out of work, many Americans are worrying about a possible increase in burglaries, home invasions and other types of crimes that target the safety of their homes," says Charles Hemphill, a home security products expert for Montgomery Ward. "People are spending less discretionary income and more time in the home. Yet few families have the budget to install a high-tech security system and pay the monthly subscription fee to protect their peace of mind."

Improving your home's security doesn't have to be an expensive job left to professionals. With a few simple and affordable do-it-yourself improvements, you can improve security and address your anxiety over possible risks to your home and family.

Make Your Home Look Unattractive to Burglar

Burglars commonly look for homes that appear unoccupied, or offer concealment for their crime, such as overgrown bushes or shrubs that block the view of the front door from the road. If you're going away on vacation for a few days, be sure to suspend mail and newspaper delivery; an overflowing mailbox or multiple papers lying on the driveway alert thieves that you're not at home.

Ensure the exterior of your home is well-lit. Always leave the front porch light on at night -- all night -- and install time-activated sensors to turn lights on when you're away. If you prefer not to have lights on outside all night, consider installing motion-activated lights that will switch on when someone approaches your home. Motion-activated LED Lights, available online at Montgomery Ward, mount easily on steps, porches, balconies, gates and decks. The lights are waterproof and a passive infrared motion sensor detects movement in the dark and shines five bright, white LED lights for 12 seconds -- long enough to scare off potential intruders. Or, for battery-free operation, try motion-activated solar-powered lights.

Don't Make Access Easy

The front door and the garage door are the two most common access points for thieves. Never leave either unlocked and be sure your front door has a deadbolt lock -- the kind that can only be opened with a key from either side. If your garage is attached and offers direct access into your house, never leave the garage door open for an extended period of time and always lock -- again, with a deadbolt -- the door that leads from the garage into your house.

If you must leave your car sitting on your driveway overnight, always lock it and never leave a spare key or garage door opener inside the car. Thieves know that by breaking into your car, they may find a way to access your home.

Beef Up Security with Cost-effective Devices

"There are many simple-to-install, economical devices that can help enhance your home's security," says Hemphill. Here are a few items, all available online from Montgomery Ward, which can improve your home security in just a few minutes:

- * Telespy Intrusion Detector - The detector looks and functions like a normal telephone, but when you're away you can set its special motion detector sensor to alert you when the device detects motion inside your home. The device calls a number you preprogram into it -- a cell, office phone or friend's home phone -- and allows you to listen to what's going on inside your house for up to 30 seconds.

- * Replace your garage door opener remotes with a Keyless Entry System on the outside of the garage. The system reads your fingerprint to identify you as someone authorized to enter the garage. You can program the system to recognize up to 10 people's fingerprints. Don't want to get out of the car to open the garage door? Mount the system on a post beside the driveway so that you can reach it from the driver's side window.

- * Still want a home security system, but hesitant to take on the costs associated with professional installation? It's possible to create your own low-cost security system, tailored to your needs, with programmable components that interface with one another. Start with a command center, available for less than $35 and add components to monitor doors, windows and garage entries for around $20 per component.

- * Find things to laugh about. Like exercise, laughter releases endorphins.

- * Bring out the old-fashioned board games. Dig out your old music and play it loud.

- * Scour the entertainment section of the newspaper for free activities, and make a list.

- * Go through the library's magazine archive and pick out a few with topics that are new to you. Thumb through the magazines at breakfast instead of the daily paper.

- * Get started on a vegetable garden. No matter what space you have, you can grow something. If you end up with surplus, donate it to the local food bank.

- * Do something for others whenever you can. No matter your situation, there's someone whose situation is worse.

- * Build rewards into your week for both you and your family, whether it's splurging on a cake mix or going to an event from your list of free and low-cost activities.

- * Look closely at what you can and cannot control in your life. While you can't control the whole economy, you can control your little part of it and how you react to it.

Tips Toward Sprinkler Season Smarts

(NAPS) - You might be able to save money and protect the environment simply by giving your in-ground sprinkler system an annual checkup.

Here are some tips:

- * Get with the program. Check your irrigation controls and programs. Make sure your settings are appropriate for expected seasonal rainfall.

- * Clear your heads. Look for rocks, dirt, sand and other debris that may block the even flow of water from sprinkler heads; uneven distribution can lead to too much water in some areas and not enough in others.

- * Conduct a "can test" for even watering. Place open, empty tin cans or paper cups every 10 to 15 feet throughout your yard and begin watering. Compare the level of water in each receptacle. If the water levels differ significantly, adjust the flow and spray pattern of the sprinklers as needed.

- * Out with old, in with the new. Replace cracked, chipped or worn plastic nozzles. A broken sprinkler can wreak havoc on lawns and water bills.

- * Don't be deceived by warm air temperatures. That may not mean increased ground temperature. Use a small shovel to make sure the ground below the lawn and garden is frost-free to a full 12 inches. Irrigating while the ground is frozen may result in a burst pipe.

- * Follow the rule of six (inches). Water enough to saturate the soil six inches deep. Poke a screwdriver into the soil to see how deep the water is being absorbed. If the screwdriver meets resistance caused by dry-hardened soil less than six inches from the surface, adjust watering times to increase soil saturation.

- * Flush it out. Twist two sprinkler heads completely off and then turn on the sprinkler system for two or three minutes. This should flush out any debris and relieve air pressure in underground pipes.

- * Value your valves. A leaky valve will waste water. Inspect each valve to make sure it is operating properly. Overly wet areas on the lawn, resulting in muddy patches, may be a sign of a leaky valve.

Hard Work In The Classroom And The Gym Team's Success Extends Beyond The Mats

By SEAN BRENNAN

Wrestling is a sport in which individual greatness guarantees team success. This winter's Quincy High School wrestling team is proof that this statement is truth.

Behind a dedicated and determined senior class, a strong and talented junior class and up-and-coming sophomore and freshmen classes, the Presidents finished their first season in the Patriot League's Keenan Division as title-holders, capturing the division championship on the strength of an impressive team record of 4-0-1 overall. This team success came about because of the willingness of Quincy's top-wrestlers to work hard at their craft on the mats (in-season and off), but maybe more importantly, carrying this hard work, professionalism and sportsmanship back into the classrooms and hallways of QHS.

"The overarching theme to this team is that they all worked so hard and are all very dedicated to the sport," said QHS head coach Patrick Lane. "They are all active athletically, with many playing two or three sports, and to do so they have to be academically eligible, and rightfully so, they way the high schools accomplish this is they have the grades come out before the season. And it is either hit-or-miss with these standards, but with these kids and the work they put in every day at practice and in the classrooms is impressive. We did not have a problem academically with any of them all season long."

and at the same time, keeping school at the forefront. Leading the way was senior captain Paul Reggiannini.

Reggiannini, whose individual achievements in 2008-09 included a 25-5 regular season record in the 140-pound class, a second-place finish at the Weymouth Tournament, a fifth-place finish at the Lowell Invitational, a third-place finish at the Division II States and a top-6 finish at the All-States, is also active in the QHS band (percussion), the NQHS-QHS combined band and is a high-achieving student-athlete. And, according to him, it is the sport of wrestling that has helped him to be able to balance all aspects of high school life.

"It is the discipline of the sport and how much time you have to put into it that is the biggest factor for me," said Reggiannini. "You have to learn how to manage your time. It keeps me busy. I go from school to practice to back home to do my homework. There really isn't any time to be lazy."

"You never stop living the wrestling lifestyle. I know that sounds corny but you really never do and it has helped me be a better student."

Reggiannini, who will be graduating from QHS in June, is preparing himself for the next stage of his life. He is currently looking at UMass-Dartmouth and Western New England College, and although he loves the sport, it will not be the biggest factor in his college decision.

"At Western NE I could wrestle, but it doesn't really matter to me," he added. "I don't know yet what I want to do, but I am thinking I may like to be an elementary school teacher. But I am going to keep my options open.

"I loved high school. It went by too fast but it was a great experience."

Reggiannini was one of twelve seniors on the Keenan Division championship team. He witnessed fellow seniors Zack Manning (22-5 overall), Dan Quinn (16-2), Scott Griffin (23-6), Tyler Balcum (17-12), Liam Keogh (14-12), Steve Kamb, Taylor Radcliffe, James Wilbur, Steve Shattuck and Mike Brown take care of business and help the team in every match this season. He also wrestled with Salma Goummih, the only female on the team.

Goummih, a National Honor Society member and a varsity tennis player, took to wrestling this season to help her stay focused in the winter and to prepare herself for the spring sports season.

"I chose to wrestle to get myself ready for tennis, but I ended up really liking it," Goummih said. "Before a match I would get a little nervous knowing I would have to wrestle a guy, but once it started it was all about getting points for the team."

"This is my last year at QHS and I wanted to do something different. That is why I chose to wrestle. This winter helped me get more mentally tough and prepared for school and tennis. The whole experience was worth it and the team treated me no differently than they would anyone else."

Goummih, who is looking at Tufts University, Suffolk University, Suffolk University and Northeastern and plans on majoring in the sciences, will graduate in June.

With so much talent graduating, you would think that the Presidents would struggle to have similar success next winter. The only problem with that line of thought is that junior Josh Gerry, the team's best wrestler, will be back for one more go-around. Gerry finished this year on fire. Wrestling at 125-pounds, Gerry finished fifth at New England, second at All-States, first at the Division II finals and first at the DII Metro Sectionals.

His first place finish at the DII tournament marked the first individual state championship for QHS since 2002.

And like Reggiannini, Goummih and the rest of the team, Gerry is also a standout in the classroom. A National Honor Society member, he carries a 4.01 GPA into the spring semester. He is also a member of the golf team, several clubs and wrestles year-round with the Dungeon Wrestling Center (Quincy) and the Harvard Gold Medal Club.

"I just kept going at him (Joe Pronk) in the DII state finals," said Gerry about his state championship win over Joe Pronk of Marshfield High School. "I worked hard all year and it all came out in the states. It was something I wanted and I went out and got it and losing in the All-States in a controversial ending will definitely push me this off-season and I'll come back even better next year. The team is losing some great wrestlers, but we will do our best to be successful."

For Gerry, wrestling is what pushes him to always be prepared for whatever life throws at him, especially in school.

"The discipline of it is what drives me," he said. "Knowing that if you work hard you will have the ability to succeed. Work hard in wrestling and good things come and if you work hard in a class in which you are struggling things will work out. Wrestling allows me to stay focused on the task at hand. I wrestle all year and it really helps to keep my life in balance. It is a great sport."

Returning next year for Quincy will be juniors Joe Spargo, Sang Do, Mike Kneeland and Lance Petersen, sophomores Jacob Hynes, Michael Meng, Thotsawat Sangsit and Ryan Boyle and freshmen CJ Brooks, Greg Lewis, Jaleek Leary and Anthony Janeiro.

"I think based on how strenuous this sport can be with the two and a half hour practices and then going home and doing their homework, these kids are working so hard all season long," said Lane about his team's success in the gym and at school. "We didn't lose anybody to eligibility and that makes my job easier. These kids know what it takes. It speaks volumes about their maturity and ability, both academically and personally, that they understand what it takes and is needed on the mat and off to be a well rounded student and human being. This team was very special."

Dedicated, hard-working and prepared in the gym and in the classroom, the 2008-09 Quincy Presidents are not only champions both as a team and as individuals on the mat, but they are collectively, champions as student athletes.

Quincy's Dave Jaehnig Leaves Legacy at Westfield State

Hard work, passion, consistency, versatility.

These qualities are all part of the makeup of an exceptional athlete. Basketball player Dave Jaehnig, a Quincy resident, exhibited all of these qualities during his four years at Westfield State.

Westfield State head basketball coach Rich Sutter has seen many standout players emerge during his 11 years at the helm of the Owls basketball program. However, Jaehnig's four years have been played at another level.

"The best, without question," said Sutter, when asked to compare Jaehnig to others who have passed through his program. "And I think he will end up among the best in school history."

Jaehnig ranks eighth on the Owls' all-time scoring list with 1,310 career points. It is not just his scoring ability that made the 6-4 guard one of Westfield State's all-time best. As he grew as a player, so did his versatility. During his senior season, Jaehnig led Westfield State in scoring (14.9 points per game), rebounding (6.8), steals and assists.

"He shows up in so many categories. Rebounding, steals, assists. Dave takes charges, dives for loose balls, basically whatever it takes to win," said Sutter. "A good basketball player knows what needs to get done. He does a tremendous amount of things in a lot of areas."

Westfield State senior, Matt Badjo, played enough with Jaehnig to realize how much of an impact he can have on a team.

"It is his overall court presence. He is the backbone of this team. When the game is on the line, you know he can get the job done," said Badjo.

Jaehnig also knows the importance of being able to adapt to the team's needs. This was especially true when an injury to Badjo, the starting center and low-post scoring threat, went down with an ankle injury during the Bahamas Classic in January. After dropping both of their games in the Bahamas, Jaehnig poured in 25 points to go along with six steals, five rebounds and four assists in a huge conference opening win at Bridgewater State.

"I felt like the scoring needed to be picked up. It was just a matter of adjusting to what we needed," said Jaehnig, a graduate of Boston College High School in Dorchester.

During his four years at Westfield State, Jaehnig earned numerous individual awards, including MASCAC Rookie of the Year and All-Conference honors during his junior and senior seasons. More importantly, the team enjoyed great success under his direction, winning more games (72) with him in uniform than any other four-year span in school history.

It was that kind of leadership that caught the attention of both his head coach and teammates.

"It is his leadership on the floor. Dave is consistent and works hard. He provides a good role model for the younger players. He lets his performance speak for itself," said senior point guard Chris Kinback.

Sutter added: "Intensity is what you look for in an athlete. And he has that."

The Westfield State basketball program, clearly, has been fortunate to have a player like Dave Jaehnig putting on an Owls jersey over the past four seasons and a big part of his decision to come to Westfield was his brother, Pat, a former captain of the Westfield State basketball team.

"He was definitely an influence," said Jaehnig of his brother. "I would also say that the new gym (Woodward Center) and knowing some of the recruits were also factors in my decision to come here. I knew I could come here and help the team out. I realized I could make an impact."

Another Jaehnig family member has also had a huge influence on him—his father, Mark.

"My dad, from a young age helped instill both my love of basketball and the fundamentals of the game," added Jaehnig.

It is that love of the game that shows still today with Dave Jaehnig. He often returns to his hometown of Quincy to give back to the basketball program that gave him his start.

"I like to go back home and hang around the gym and help out refereeing at the youth games. It is nice to help teach and instill the fundamentals that I received at that age," he said.

This passion has enabled Dave Jaehnig to put a significant stamp on the Westfield State program. His all-around play, his ability to play any position and his desire to win, have made him one of the best players in school history.

Coach Sutter is proud and not surprised with the way Jaehnig's collegiate career evolved.

"I told him I felt like he could become one of the first players to make it to the (Westfield State) Hall of Fame under my tenure. And I think when it is all said and done, he will."

Lexington Christian Academy Sends Local Senior to All-Star Game

Quincy resident Matt Gibson will play in the 1st Annual New England Prep School All-Star Men's Basketball Game, to be held at Springfield College on March 22nd. Gibson will join 21 other top-caliber independent-school players from throughout New England in the showcase game. "It's an honor to be recognized, and great to know that all the hard work has paid off," said Gibson, who plans on playing basketball in college next year. "It's a great way to finish my career."

Gibson, who came to LCA at the start of his junior year, led the team in scoring and assists this year by averaging 16.8 points and 4.5 assists per game while also placing second on the team with 4.5 rebounds per contest. He connected on 32 three-point field goals this season while starting in all 21 of the team's games. "I've only been here at LCA for two years, but have had great opportunities to refine my game and play with great teammates and coaches," said Gibson, who was a 1st-Team All-League player for the second consecutive year at LCA. "To have a chance to represent LCA in the game will be a lot of fun."

The 5-10 Senior Point Guard honed his skills on the hardwood playing on the AAU circuit since the age of ten. Matt under the tutelage of his father/AAU coach, has performed at five consecutive Division One National Championships for the Bay State Magic/Boston Soldiers. His AAU career culminated with a 17 and Under Massachusetts State Championship and a 14th place finish at the Division One Nationals.

Cholesterol Tests Keep Multiplying

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My husband had blood work for a cholesterol study. It included something called lipoprotein (a), something we never heard of. It was over the normal value. I called my doctor, but he was on vacation, so I left word for the covering doctor. A phone call came from his secretary, who said: "He didn't say anything, so I guess it's OK." I want answers. Will you explain this to me? — F.

ANSWER: Lipoprotein (a), spoken as "lipoprotein little a," is another cholesterol fraction that is an independent risk for artery clogging and heart attacks. It's different from LDL cholesterol (bad cholesterol) and HDL cholesterol (good cholesterol).

Frankly, at the present, doctors find it hard to counsel patients about lipoprotein (a), so most don't order it.

Now emphasis is placed on lowering LDL cholesterol (your husband's value is very good) and raising HDL cholesterol (again your husband's was very good). I will trade places with him if he wishes, and I'll take his lipoprotein (a) reading to boot.

I can tell you what lowers lipoprotein (a). Niacin does. There is no proof, however, that lowering it lowers the risk of a heart attack. Daily exercise of 30 minutes also brings it down, if the doctor approves of exercise for a person. As does losing weight if that applies. A low-fat diet high in vegetables, fruits and grains is another way of reducing lipoprotein (a). From his other cholesterol values, I'd say he must be doing some of this anyway. All of this, except for niacin, is the much-preached recipe for heart health regardless of lipoprotein (a). Until told otherwise, put lipoprotein (a) on a back burner.

out the year.

The booklet on cholesterol explains this topic that is talked about to excess. Readers can obtain a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue -- No. 201W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Canada with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: None of my 21 grandchildren has had their tonsils out. All of my seven children did. Is this no longer done? I wish doctors would make up their minds about these things. — B.B.

ANSWER: When your children were young, it was almost standard practice to remove tonsils as a way to protect against strep throat. We now know this isn't necessary, and we now have antibiotics to treat strep throat.

Children who have repeated strep throat infections still have their tonsils removed, but the operation is no longer done for prevention.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I work out at home on an exercise bike and a treadmill. On days my knees are bothering me, I don't do either. One doctor suggests that I cease the exercise bike but use the treadmill. The other says just the opposite. They both can't be right. Who is? — R.G.

ANSWER: You can answer this one for yourself. Which hurts your knees? I find that bike pedaling is harder on my knees. Others find running a bigger source of pain.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustlin, D.M.D.

LOW-CARB DIET MAY SACRIFICE FRESH BREATH

If you are eating a diet that is low in carbohydrates to lose weight, you may have a problem with bad breath. It is estimated that nearly 63% of people on low-carb diets suffer from halitosis. The reason for this rests with the fact that a certain amount of carbohydrates is necessary for the body to effectively burn fat. Without these needed carbs, the body must modify the way it burns fat by producing "ketones," which are the chemicals that impart a bad odor to breath. If you are a fan of diets such as the South Beach or the Atkins Diet, you may want to brush more often, drink more water, and chew more sugarless gum.

Bad breath can be the result of a wide variety of causes. Although dental disease (gum disease and/or tooth decay) is a frequent culprit, there is no shortage of other potential sources. If the onset of your bad breath was after your last dental checkup, it would be a good idea to have another dental exam, if only to rule out the usual suspects. We keep abreast of all the new techniques that are available in today's world of dentistry. Call 617-479-6220 today and schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we are currently accepting new patients. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Another effective way to fight halitosis is to scrape the tongue daily, from back to front.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Although you tend to bore easily and leave others to finish what you start, this is one time when you'd be wise to complete things on your own. Then you can move on to something new.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your indecision about a personal situation might come out of those mixed signals you're getting. Best not to make any commitments until you have a better sense of how things are going.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A dispute appears to be getting out of hand. But you should be able to step in and bring it all under control soon. Be patient. News about a potential career move might be delayed.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Career obligations could interfere with important personal plans. But using a combination of common sense and compromise helps resolve the dilemma to everyone's satisfaction.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A stressful situation drains some of your energy reserves. But you soon bounce back in time to finish your tasks and enjoy a well-deserved weekend getaway.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) This is a good time to throw a party for friends and colleagues and surprise them with your dazzling domestic skills. You might also want to reconsider that career move you put on hold.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A sudden change of mind by someone you relied on could cause a delay in moving ahead with your plans. But those whom you've helped out before are prepared to return the favor.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You start the week feeling too shy to speak up in front of others. However, your self-assurance soon takes over, giving you the confidence you need to make yourself heard.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) One way to deal with a pesky personal dilemma this week is to meet it head-on. Insist on an explanation of why the situation reached this point and what can be done to change it.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) The creative Capricorn finds several outlets for her or his talents this week. Also note that while a romantic connection looks promising, remember to allow it to develop on its own.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You stand out this week as the best friend a friend can have. But be careful that you don't take too many bows, or you might see gratitude replaced with resentment.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) What seems to be an ideal investment should be checked out thoroughly before you snap at the offer and find yourself hooked by an expensive scam.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your wisdom is matched by your generosity. You are a person who people know they can rely on.

A THOUGHT
FOR THE WEEK

Someone once said, "A ship in a harbor is safe, but that is not what ships are built for." ... No ship ever left its harbor, but what its mariners were taking a chance - a chance that their skills were more potent than the stormy waves.

For that matter, we would never have had a country if there had not been brave, adventurous souls who were willing to take a chance to see if there really was "a pot of gold at the rainbow's foot." In taking this chance... using their opportunities... they founded and helped make a nation... Charles F. Kettering put it this way - "There will always be a frontier where there is an open mind and a willing hand."

What do you want most out of life? Take a chance on going after it. "Set sail gallantly." And make the most out of your life and your talents and your opportunities. You are at the helm of the ship of your life... and only by taking a chance - well-thought out in advance - can you make "port at the rainbow's foot."

"There is no security on this earth. There is only opportunity." - General Douglas MacArthur

Additional $1.4M In Stimulus Funds State Aid For Schools May Increase By $4M

By LAURA GRIFFIN

School Supt. Richard DeCristofaro announced Monday that the school department may qualify for an additional $4 million in Chapter 70 funds next year through the State's Fiscal Stabilization Fund grants.

The school system, also, qualifies for approximately $1.4 million in federal stimulus funds, officially the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act.

However, federal stimulus grants must fund new and sustainable programs and can not be used to address budget deficiencies.

In contrast, decisions on the state's grants under Chapter 70 are left to local school officials. The $4 million district grant will bring Quincy's Chapter 70 funds to roughly $20 million.

DeCristofaro and Business Director James Millaney presented an overview of school programs and budget projections at this week's City Council Finance Committee meeting.

According to DeCristofaro, the 2010 school budget will increase by $4.8 million to a projected $86 million due to anticipated employee raises and a $300 annual salary bonus awarded to all

City Wants Crackdown On Milton Trash Scofflaws

Taxpayers are footing the bill for Milton trash slipped across the city's border, but, apparently there's little to no risk for the offenders.

"People from Milton come over and drop off their trash bags," City Council President Jay Davis said last week, then described a weekly routine underway along the Milton-Quincy line.

On trash days, some Milton residents drop their trash bags across the border and stack them alongside legal trash to save the $3 a bag sticker charge in Milton, according to Davis.

Davis described the weekly ritual March 18 as Finance Committee members reviewed the $15.4 million Department of Public Works (DPW) budget and discussed proposals to trim the DPW's $1.5 million budget, which includes the cost of bag stickers on illegal pickup piles.

"Milton residents come over and drop off their trash bags and stack them alongside legal trash to save the $3 a bag sticker charge in Milton, according to Davis. The bags are then picked up by the DPW as curbside trash, dumped in Quincy, Davis

Classmates Seek To Name QHS Hallway For Anthoney

By TOM HENSHAW

They called him "Boo Boo" and they started a petition to name a hallway in the new Quincy High School for him.

"You may not be able to roam the hallways anymore but you should have a place in them forever," said the petition.

It was the farewell from heart broken classmates to Anthony Wilkerson, who died Saturday when the Jeep in which he was riding over turned on Interstate 89 in Hopkinton, N.H.

ANTHONEY WILKERSON

It was a tragic loss to the entire Quincy High School community, said Principal Frank Santoro. He had many friends, especially on the R.H.C.

"He was made of good people, said one of his friends, and played sports with his family.

The driver of the Jeep, Michael Richards, 38, and Anthony's mother, Angela Carro, 35, a front seat passenger in the vehicle, escaped injury.

Anthony, who was 19 years old and a junior at Quincy High School, and others were in New Hampshire, checking out college for the teen, who was sitting in the back seat.

Rattlesnakes Preventing Expansion

Pine Hill Cemetery Low On Gravesites

By LAURA GRIFFIN

If you're not ready or near ready to fill a grave at Pine Hill Cemetery, you can't buy one.

That's because the city's available gravesites are dwindling fast and rattlesnakes are preventing expansion.

As a result, gravesites are now being sold on an "as needed basis only," according to Kristen Powers, Executive Director of the Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments.

At this time, there are only 288 single lots available at Pine Hill and 76 double lots, according to Powers. Single lots actually are double occupancy while double lots can hold four persons.

Powers said that the city owns 15 to 20 acres at Pine Hill Cemetery but those same acres are a habitat for a species of endangered rattlesnakes and the city can't expand.

To date, the city has not gained clearance for expansion from the Massachusetts Natural Heritage and Endangered Species Program, the state agency protecting the snakes.

"We hit a snag with the endangered species rattlesnakes," Powers told Finance Committee members, but added, "We are still pursuing the expansion."

are, also, some wetland concerns. McNeice said some 800 to 1,000 graves could be sited on a cemetery acre.

"Everybody's running into the same problem across the country," said McNeice of the shortage of cemetery expansion spaces.

McNeice said the board is considering such ideas as cremation garden areas and the possibility of closing off several streets in Mount Wollaston Cemetery with a view to creating new lots.

Powers and her staff provided an overview and cost estimates to the Finance Committee during last week's preliminary budget discussion.

Chairman John Keenan suggested that the cemetery funds should be separated into an enterprise account and the department should be self-supporting.

Keenan questioned whether cities and towns should be in the cemetery business as the city's department required a $90,000 boost from taxpayers.

"It doesn't seem as if the revenue is there," said Powers who also cited the value of having a city-owned cemetery with reasonable rates for all citizens in contrast to the higher cost at private cemeteries.

"It warrants a look," said Keenan, suggesting leasing cemeteries to a for-profit company. "We're operating at a loss. We're going to have to look at those types of opportunities."

New Legal Opinion Backs Faxon Track

Mayor Hails Decision But McCarthy Says Administration 'Not Looking For Best Location'

By TOM HENSHAW

Yet another voice has been heard in the continuing battle between Faxon Field and Pageant Field over the siting of a track facility, this one on the side of Mayor Tom Koch at the expense of the School Committee.

Stephen J. Finnegan, general counsel for the Massachusetts Association of School Committees, rendered the opinion that the city of Quincy, therefore the mayor, controls enough of Faxon Field to permit construction of the track.

He noted that Faxon Field contains three parcels of land with the former Center for Technical Training occupying one and school use of the other two limited to fall football practice, the rest subject to Park Department permit authority.

"Indeed," he wrote in a letter to the School Committee, "the installation of the track on the portion of Faxon Field for park and playground purposes is similar to the prior construction and installation of tennis courts, by the city, on said property and under its control, which use has long been compatible with the adjacent school property."

"Committee control is circumscribed by state law and the city of Quincy charter to the extent of the school buildings and grounds connected therewith."

THOMAS KOCH

DAVID MCCARTHY

"It is my opinion that the grounds connected with the school building do not extend to the park and playground area of Faxon Field, a portion of which contains wetlands."

"For the reasons above referenced it is my opinion that the city of Quincy has control over Faxon Field land not otherwise used for school purposes, sufficient to allow for the installation of a track on said land without consent of the Committee."

Dave McCarthy, vice chairman of the School Committee and an advocate of Pageant Field as the site of the track, was quick to respond.

"To ask for the School Committee opinion or vote and ignore the vote after receiving a 'no' answer did not surprise me," he said.

"The area known as Faxon Field has been designated as a school area or resource for Quincy High School for over 40 years, for school buildings, student parking, football practices and scrimmage games.

"The vote against placing the track on Faxon Field was executed for two reasons, first the safety of hundreds of children and families present at a track event would overwhelm that area. Traffic would become a tremendous problem as well as parking."

"The administration is not looking for the best location for the track but simply a location to say 'a track is in place' protecting Pageant Field, which in my opinion would be well-served as a track location."

Koch, who is chairman of the School Committee by virtue of his position as mayor, hailed Finnegan's opinion.

"I have said from Day One that we are going to build a first class facility that the entire community

Patrick Toland White: Heroes Are Honoring His Memory

The word evokes images of gifted athletes, war-winning generals and inspiring Presidents.

But not all heroes throw the game-winning touchdown in a Super Bowl or lead battle-tested troops to victory.

Sometimes, a hero is a student who volunteers to make their community a better place. Or a youngster who has become a role model to his or her peers by overcoming a physical disability.

These are the types of local kids who in their own unique way make Quincy a better place.

And they deserve to be called heroes. Or junior heroes - an honor bestowed by the Kiwanis Club of Quincy.

A few years ago, Quincy Kiwanians started recognizing local students who excel not only in the classroom but outside it. Some volunteer for worthy causes. Some are simply good neighbors. And others are acknowledged for fighting daily struggles that the rest of us take for granted.

At a recent breakfast, Quincy Kiwanis inducted another 15 youngsters into its Junior Heroes Honor Roll. (See related story on Page 16.)

It is a prestigious honor, in part, because of the name of the award itself.

Officially - and fittingly - the honor is known as the Patrick Toland White Junior Hero Award. Patrick - a very personable, outgoing and quick-witted kid who loved baseball as much as he did just chilling with his buddies - died Nov. 30, 2005 at the tender age of 15 after a courageous battle with rhabdomyosarcoma, a form of tissue cancer.

"Whitey" was a freshman at North Quincy High School at the time of his passing. He would have graduated this spring.

"Patrick liked to make his friends happy, he liked it when everybody was upbeat," recalls his father, Paul.

"He always had a smile on his face. He didn't want anyone to feel sorry for himself - no sympathy whatsoever," his mom, Barbara, adds.

It was because of this positive attitude and upbeat personality the Kiwanis Club dedicated the award in Patrick's memory.

"We were honored to have Quincy Kiwanis name the award after Patrick," says Barbara, 47, who works as an OR nurse at Tufts Medical Center. "I think we felt embarrassed and honored at the same time."

"We were very proud," adds Paul, also 47, who is employed as a mailer at The Boston Globe. "In the beginning, we weren't really sure what the award really was. But then we got to the ceremony and saw what these amazing kids do, it's unreal."

While Patrick would have been honored and probably a little embarrassed by the award that bears his name, his parents agree their son definitely would have appreciated it, too.

"He was very gracious and thankful of all the things that people did for him," Barbara says, noting the special relationships that Patrick formed with the medical staff who cared for him at the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. "They still talk about Patrick to this day."

And why not? Patrick was the type of kid you couldn't forget. That feeling, indeed, was mutual.

"Every person who Patrick met was impressed by the fact that he could look at them right in eye and listen to what they had to say and talk back and act like he was interested with what they were saying," Paul explains.

"And it wasn't phony; it was legit. I'm not sure if it was because when he was little he was exposed to so many doctors and nurses and adults but he could have a conversation with adults and have a smile on his face."

Certainly the Little League community in Quincy remembers Patrick who was first diagnosed with cancer when he was 9. When he underwent chemotherapy treatments at the Dana-Farber, he insisted nurses put his IV lines in his left arm because he was a right-handed pitcher in Little League. It was not uncommon for Patrick to vomit between innings, and then return to the pitcher's mound and fire a few more strikes.

In Patrick's honor, Quincy Youth Baseball started a Jimmy Fund tournament in his honor. The event has raised thousands of dollars for the Jimmy Fund while recalling Whitey's all-too-brief but shining life every August when the games are played at Adams Field.

The Junior Hero Award also perpetuates Patrick's memory because of the outstanding character, leadership and resolve the recipients exhibit.

"It makes you think that people haven't forgotten him," Barbara says of the award. "That's always the thing you think about - so he's gone - but he's always in our and other people's thoughts." His father adds, "It's nice to know that he made an impression on people."

The junior heroes, in turn, continue to impress the Whites year after year.

"These kids are un-be-liev-able," Barbara says emphasizing each syllable. "Credit to them and their parents and their family. All these kids are so giving and thinking outside the box."

"They help people they don't even know," Paul adds.

And what would Patrick think of these junior heroes?

"I can hear him now - 'are you kidding me, Mom?' I can't believe these kids, they're unbelievable," Barbara says.

The Junior Hero award has become a family affair for the Whites. Not only was Patrick one of the first recipients, his 14-year-old twin sisters - Katie and Meghan who are eighth graders at Central Middle School - received the honor a few years ago for raising money for victims of Hurricane Katrina as well as the foundation named for their brother.

The Whites don't necessarily consider their son - who had hoped to work in the medical field helping sick kids or be a baseball broadcaster - a hero. Instead, they prefer to think of Patrick as a special boy who strived to live a normal life under the most difficult of circumstances.

"What made him special was how he was able to be normal. He never once said 'woe is me' or 'I feel sorry for myself,'" Paul says, his eyes reddening.

In fact, he was more concerned with the health of others than his own.

"When he was undergoing treatments, Patrick used to say to me, 'I'm not having a bad day, look at that little baby over there - that baby's having a bad day. That's not fair Mom for a little baby to be sick,'" Barbara says.

"I think the one thing that we'll always remember about Patrick is that he always had a smile on his face - no matter what. I think that's what a lot of the kids would say, too. Even if he was having a bad day, he'd have a smile on his face."

"In six years, he never said life's not fair," Paul continues. "The funny thing is, he wouldn't have changed any of it. Because he knows that because he got sick he got to meet some very special people and got to do some wonderful things." Among them: becoming friends with former Red Sox outfielder Trot Nixon; getting VIP treatment at Disney World and Red Sox spring training; and riding with his family on a float in the Sox's 2004 championship rolling rally through Boston.

"Patrick wanted to live and he wanted to be here, no question about it, but he wouldn't have changed anything," he father says, his voice softening with emotion. "He loved the people at the Dana-Farber Clinic - that was really special to him that he got to be friends with the nurses, the doctors and the other patients that he met."

"His doctor said he did the best with the hand he was dealt."

Sounds like a hero to me.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1959 real photo postcard reproduction showing the first stage of construction of the present seawall along Wollaston Beach. The wall was built with 20-to-30 foot-long interlocking sheet-steel-pilings driven into the ground forming a 1 1/4-mile long corrugated bulkhead. The top of the bulkhead was then capped with the concrete wall that remains there today. The steel pilings are shown in this view as they were delivered. Spread out side-by-side along the roadway visible just over the top of the sign. The building in the top center was a bowling alley on the corner of Vassal Street. To the left of it was Elsie's Cafe. Since before the Boulevard was built in 1908, the bowling alley site had been home to Stuart's boat yard at the mouth of Sachem's Brook. After a fire destroyed Stuart's building the Merry Mount Dance Hall was built here in 1925. It attracted rowdy crowds from Boston and beyond. Faced with fierce neighborhood outrage the city rescinded the dance hall's license and it was converted into a roller skating rink, which after a few years also burned to the ground. Then, in 1940, O'Lindy's Boulevard Bowling Alleys with 18 candlepin-bowling lanes were built here. It later became known as the Wollaston Boulevard Bowladrome and a second floor was added for ten-pin bowling after this picture was taken. Today, residential condominiums are on this corner. READERS FORUM

Commends Councillor Brian McNamee's Hard Work

Having recently received a public notice regarding the proposal to have the Fiesta Shows Carnival relocated to Squantum Point Park, and reading of Councillor Brian McNamee's opposition to a proposed burlesque dance academy on Billings Road, I feel compelled to offer a response as a concerned resident in support of Councillor McNamee's position regarding these proposed venues.

As a former officer of the Marina Bay Civic Association, member of the Seaside Gardeners, and community activist, I have come to know Councillor McNamee as a vocal, pro-active and sincere advocate for the residents and issues of Ward 6. Particularly, he has always lobbied to protect the integrity of the neighborhoods he represents...often in a "less than sly" manner, which I have come to appreciate.

From my own personal standpoint, I am increasingly becoming frustrated by recent decisions in Quincy that have not been resident friendly and contribute to further erode the integrity of the neighborhoods of Quincy. Specifically, the breakdown of communication that led to the installation of a giant billboard in West

Quincy, the establishment of the monolithic Highpoint development, the relocated Montessori school in the Hospital Hill neighborhood and countless other pro-developer and quick revenue producing decisions around the city. Often times, these decisions have forced residents to become adversarial to protect their neighborhoods, property values, and quality of life.

At this time, I wish to extend "a heartfelt thank you" to Councillor McNamee for his unabashed support of Ward 6 residents and neighborhoods. I respectfully suggest to the Mayor, the Quincy City Council and members of the License and Zoning Boards that they follow this cue and support future decisions, which support the integrity of Quincy's neighborhoods. As a satisfied homeowner for the past 29 years in Quincy, I hope to look forward to many more. Future decisions by the above people will determine if this is to be for my family, as well as others throughout the city that may share similar concerns regarding the growing signs of urban blight evidenced throughout Quincy.

A 'Thank You' From The Harvey Family

We would like to thank the Quincy Police Department and the Quincy Fire Department for honoring our son, Bobby Harvey, at the Third Annual Charity Cup Hockey game earlier this month at the Quincy Youth Arena. There are so many to thank. We were overwhelmed by the turnout.

Thank you all for the love and compassion you all have shown during this difficult time. To all the volunteers who helped organize the event, firefighter Kevin Ferent, the businesses who donated gifts for the raffle, the Quincy Youth Arena, Local Access TV, Quirk Auto and to all the players from both clubs. Thank you all.

The Bobby Harvey Memorial Scholarship was founded to keep Bobby's spirit alive. Bobby was a kind and giving young man, and through Bobby's Fund we will continue to help our community with scholarships for our students and help our youth with after-school programs and sponsoring youth athletics.

Thank You,

Quincy's Yesterdays

25, 10 Cent MBTA Fares On Off-Hours

By FRANK McCAULEY

Fares on the MBTA South Shore Red Line are going down (April 2), but only at off-peak hours and only for 90 days, and in one direction, the reduction is less than in the other.

If that sounds complicated, listen a moment while MBTA General Manager Joseph C. Kelly explains:

"The plan is simplicity in itself," he said "Monday through Friday, between 10 a.m. and 1 p.m., the fare will be 10 cents, instead of the usual 25 cents. The reduced fares must be paid at the collector's booth. The only exception to the 10-cent fare will be for people boarding at the three Quincy stations and riding into town. Here the basic fare of 50 cents will be reduced to 25 cents."

USS Salem Easter Egg Hunt April 11

The USS Salem and Naval Shipyard Museum will hold its annual Easter Egg Hunt Saturday, April 11, from 12 noon to 3 p.m. aboard the ship moored at the old Fore River Shipyard.

"Our volunteers love this event," said Michael Condon, the executive director. "In years past we have hidden as many as 3,000 Easter Eggs. This year our goal is 4,000 eggs."

The yearly event is one of several major fund raisers for the museum, which receives no city, state or federal funds for its support.

"We try to do unusual and fun events like the Easter Egg Hunt and Haunted Ship to attract people to the ship who may not ordinarily think of visiting the Naval Museum," said Condon.

In addition to the Egg Hunt, there are many other activities for the youngsters, including egg and cupcake decorating, face painting and a treasure hunt.

"We organize the event so every child gets and a chance to hunt for Easter Eggs in addition to having a fun afternoon of activities aboard the ship," said Frank Campbell, coordinator of volunteers.

Isabella Falco Serves As Mock Delegate To United Nations

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Isabella Falco, daughter of Suzanne and Anthony Falco of Quincy, recently served as a mock delegate to the United Nations in New York and observed parliamentary procedure in action.

Isabella, 12 years old, is a student at the Thatcher Montessori School in Milton and was chosen along with 15 other Thatcher students ages nine to 15 who participated in subjects ranging from the UN Security Council to the International Atomic Energy Association to Human Rights Council.

Isabella addressed the UN and spoke about water and energy problems in Angola, Africa, which she said was the largest producers of oil, and a significant source of oil to the US.

She also spoke about water problems in Angola, and how women have to walk miles a day to procure 7-8 liters of water.

Also that Angola uses hydro-electric energy as an alternative.

Students debated issues ranging from nuclear weapons proliferation to child slavery.

About 600 students from Montessori elementary and middle schools from United States and other countries prepared for a year and participated in the Montessori Model United Nations. (MMUN)

The MMUN provides a venue for the children to put their natural inclinations to work in a sophisticated peace education environment.

According to the MMUN, student delegates will develop a better understanding of the need for active efforts to create peace, and learn about other cultures, governments, and peoples of all nations.

The students came from around the USA, Canada, Austria, Germany Mexico, South Africa, The Virgin Islands and Haiti.

Isabella's dad Anthony Falco, was one of four chaperones accompanying the group.

Rita's Perfect Corn Bread

No matter when I have a corn muffin or corn bread it's usually too sweet for my taste. But my daughter Rita gave me this great recipe for corn bread that is just perfect in texture and the taste.

CORN BREAD

Preheat oven to 400 degrees.

Grease an 8 x 8 square pan

1 1/2 cups flour

1 cup corn meal

2 teaspoons baking powder

1/4 teaspoon baking soda

3/4 teaspoon salt

1 cup buttermilk (or a cup of milk with

1 teaspoons lemon juice. Let stand for ten minutes.

3/4 cup of corn niblets

1/4 cup brown sugar

2 large eggs

8 tablespoons melted unsalted butter (cooled)

Whisk the dry ingredients together in a medium sized bowl and make a well in the center.

Now in a food processor add the butter-milk, corn and brown sugar Process for 30 seconds, and then add the eggs, and process for 15 seconds. Mixture will be lumpy. Now add to the dry ingredients and mix slightly. At the end, add the butter and mix until just combined.

Bake for 30-35 minutes or until knife or toothpick in the center comes out clean. This is great in the morning with coffee, or enjoyed anytime.

DOVE Director Reacts To Singer Rihanna's Abuse

The plight of singer Rihanna has caught the attention of DOVE, the domestic violence agency, not so much for her beating at the hands of boyfriend Chris Brown, but for teen reaction to it.

The Boston Public Health Commission surveyed 200 kids ages 12 to 19 and found that 46 percent thought Rihanna responsible and 52 percent said they thought both were to blame.

"It is shocking that teens are living in a reality whereby a brutal beating is considered an acceptable response to anything," said Jessica Carner, acting executive director of DOVE.

"Perhaps more importantly, this small survey points out that kids are thinking about violence as an acceptable way of resolving conflict in dating relationships.

"Let's not forget that there is only one person to blame for Rihanna's scars. Lately, the public seems to be so focused on her actions that we're starting to overlook his."

Carner noted that abusive relationships begin like all others with mutual attraction, trust and love. Those who choose to abuse their partners do so intentionally.

"An abuser's apologies and promises to change are tactics used to keep their partners in the relationship and to continue the cycle of dominance and aggression," she said.

"Even a woman like Rihanna, who seems to 'have it all,' can be a victim of abuse by a person she loves and trusts."

Public condemnation does nothing to get at the root of the problem, said Carner.

"It is a trying and difficult process for a victim to leave, as emotional, physical and financial obstacles and threats are often in the way," she said.

"Many victims are isolated from former support systems and may feel they have few options. Victims need support, encouragement and resources to aid them through the transition.

"We need to transcend the urge to take sides, place blame and make assumptions about private relationships.

"Instead, we should gather our collective energy and outrage and channel it into breaking down the widely held constructs about relationships and violence.

"By reinforcing the concept that violence is never an appropriate response to any argument; by understanding the effect that words can have on an individual and the importance of self-esteem and self-worth; by working with local agencies to provide education and information about dating violence and domestic violence; by supporting those who are transitioning out of violent relationships, and understanding that any breakup is difficult, regardless of the circumstances.

"We owe it to our children to provide them with opportunities to explore and question the development of healthy dating relationships.

"Taking this side benefits us all. Keeping families safe and violence-free leads to stronger communities and healthier individuals."

BJ's Wholesale Hearing Monday

The City Council will hold a public hearing Monday, March 30, at 6 p.m. on a revived application by QBJ Land Development LLC for a special permit to build a BJ's Wholesale Club at 200 Crown Colony.

The plan was rejected by the Planning Board last October but BJ's sued and a Land Court judge overturned that ruling and the Planning Board gave its unanimous approval with conditions.

The Council hearing is designed to give residents an opportunity to review the proposal and share their thoughts with councillors.

save $3.

"If I saw someone pull up and drop a bag of trash, I'd call the police," DPW Director Larry Prendeville said this week when discussing the issue.

Police will respond to such calls, according to Police Captain John Dougan who said the police would order the offender to take their trash back.

According to Assistant City Clerk Maureen Hallen, there are two anti-littering ordinances on the city's books.

One deals with "refuse disposal" on city beaches and in city waterways and warns of $20 fines.

The second ordinance, Section 12.08.060, deals with "rubbish" in city streets, describes the proper disposal of ashes, and prohibits putting barrels out more than 15 hours before 7 a.m. on a collection day.

However, the anti-littering ordinance listed as Section 12.08.060, does not specify any fines or punishment.

City Clerk Joseph Shea did cite a state statute which could allow the city to issue a fine as high as $500.

Enjoying Life at Allerton House

THE ALLERTON WAY

Allerton House at Hancock Park, Quincy, MA
by Kelly Richards

Theresa Webber's children surprised her two years ago when they came to her Dorchester home and simply said that they wanted to take her somewhere. Webber says, "As it turned out, the final destination of our mystery ride was Allerton House at Hancock Park. After taking a tour and meeting some of the residents and staff, I knew I would love living here." She credits her daughter and three sons for doing their research, knowing her needs and personality, wanting to make life easier, and finding her a perfect home. "It was the first place I looked at," she says. "I didn't need to look any further."

the meals are great. Now I just do what I want to do."

Webber's engaging personality touches everyone she meets. "I believe we all just need to keep going and stay involved," she says. And stay involved she does. You may find her at the Bingo game at Allerton House three or four times a week, joining other residents on a road trip for lunch at a local restaurant, or socializing in the residence's elegant dining room. One of the first friends she made when she moved in now lives at Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group's skilled nursing center in Hingham, and Webber makes it a point to visit her often. "We both enjoy catching up during our visits."

According to Webber, one of the best things about living at Allerton House at Hancock Park is the opportunity to be around truly nice people. "I know everybody here," she says, and "everybody is wonderful. Moving here was the best thing!"

DPW Officials Tackle Workplace Abuses

step is a verbal warning, the second a written warning, then a one-day suspension, three-day suspension and five-day suspension.

All steps must be followed before an employee is fired, according to Prendeville who said that employees could be fired immediately for such offenses as alcohol use or stealing.

Generally, all firings are contested, said Prendeville. Only one employee, caught stealing gasoline, has been fired recently.

Even charging an employee with alcohol use can be difficult, according to Prendeville who said that the union contract only allows random testing for those with commercial vehicle licenses, or after an incident or accident.

However, Prendeville has instituted several changes, such as required letters from doctors documenting a sick day by an employee.

"That was out of control," said Coffey who also described instances where city vehicles were deliberately damaged.

Now, he said all vehicles must be checked on the way in and out and employees are docked for arriving late and leaving early.

Just hours after Coffey addressed the Finance Committee, Channel 4's I-Team unveiled what was billed as an "expose" on the Quincy DPW. Much of the video was more than three months old.

The 'investigation,' light by Channel 4 standards, caught DPW workers, at $43 an hour, waiting in a truck on the sidelines of the Thanksgiving Day parade. The investigator noted they were earning holiday pay for doing nothing.

Prendeville said he cut down on the parade coverage but needs crews on-duty for an emergency, such as a float falling apart.

Cameras, also, zeroed in on DPW workers on regular workdays, doing banking, picking up pastries and flowers in city trucks and driving a vehicle home.

Coffey and city councilors discussed the I-Team report before it was aired.

City Council President Jay Davis was skeptical about I-Team investigations, describing a report on a judge whom he described as one of the best jurists in the state.

"I'm very concerned about how this plays into the worse caricature of a public employee," said Councillor Joseph Finn.

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin echoed Finn's concerns, stating such abuses cast "a wide brush across everyone in public service, besmirching everyone else."

Councillor Brian McNamee, Ward 6, asked how overtime was assigned. Coffey said the director must approve all overtime.

After the report was aired, Prendeville said, "We're doing an internal investigation and we'll be taking appropriate action."

Christopher Walker, Mayor Thomas Koch's Policy Director, provided the mayor's response to the I-Team report:

"The Mayor has made it abundantly clear that he expects a full day's work for a full day's pay."

"When he ran the Park Department for 12 years, he had a solid reputation of running a very tight ship and he expects the same from his team of department heads and managers today."

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On March 29, 1806, the Great National Pike, also known as the Cumberland Road, becomes the first highway funded by the national treasury. The initial appropriation of $30,000 was made by congressional act and covered the first leg from Cumberland, Md., through the Appalachian Mountains to Wheeling in western Virginia on the Ohio River.

• On March 28, 1915, the first American is killed in the eight-month-old European conflict that would become known as the First World War. • On March 25, 1933, President Herbert Hoover accepts the newly commissioned USS Sequoia as the official presidential yacht. Before it was commissioned as the presidential yacht, the Department of Commerce used the Sequoia as a decoy to catch Prohibition law-breakers.

• On March 24, 1958, Elvis Presley is inducted into the U.S. Army. Although he had been drafted the previous December, the Army granted him a deferral so he could finish shooting the film "King Creole."

• On March 27, 1964, the strongest earthquake in U.S. history, measuring 8.4 on the Richter scale, slams southern Alaska, creating a deadly tsunami. Some 125 people were killed and thousands injured. The tidal wave, which measured over 100 feet at points, devastated towns along the Gulf of Alaska and caused carnage in British Columbia, Canada; Hawaii; and the West Coast of the United States.

will be proud of and we are moving forward in that position," he said.

The School Committee asked Finnegan for an opinion after turning down the mayor request to site the track on Faxon Field and Koch, armed with a legal opinion from City Solicitor James Timmins, went ahead with the project in spite of it.

"My opinion was based on the facts and the facts will continue to reinforce that this is an appropriate site for a track," said Timmins.

The School Committee's request to Finnegan sought answers to three questions:

- Does Faxon Field fall under the jurisdiction of the Quincy School Committee?
- Does the mayor of the city of Quincy have the authority to build the track and athletic field on Faxon Field without the approval of the Quincy School Committee?
- Does the building of a track at Faxon Field violate the performance standards set forth in the WPA Regulations for "Bordering Vegetated Wetlands," or any other DEP regulation concerning this site?

Finnegan's opinion also cited the use of tennis courts near Faxon Field that have been controlled by the Park Board as well as its annual votes to permit a carnival on the site.

"It is my information and belief," he wrote, "that the tennis courts are controlled and maintained by the Board of Parks and Recreation."

"It is my understanding that the carnival has been held in Faxon Field for many years pursuant to approval by the Board."

"Although Quincy High School students have traditionally used Faxon Field for fall football practice this usage may have been by the acquiescence of the Board, and of itself, does not diminish the significant control exercised over this property by the city of Quincy."

Finnegan declined to render an opinion on the wetlands issue, saying "I do not have sufficient knowledge of the underlying lawsuit (by Ross Edwards) and this matter is well beyond the scope of my opinion."

And, he added, "my opinion is advisory and the courts provide a final and binding mechanism, perhaps through a declaratory judgment, to resolve the dispute over which party has jurisdiction over Faxon Field."

PREVENT ACHILLES TENDONITIS

The Achilles tendon runs down the back of the leg and goes straight into the heel. When someone irritates the tendon, it can become inflamed and painful. This is called Achilles tendonitis. Symptoms of the condition include a pain that runs down the back of the ankle, and it can be quite severe. People with the condition most often complain that their first step out of bed in the morning or after sitting for a long-period is particularly uncomfortable. Causes of Achilles tendonitis include wearing ill-fitting shoes, not stretching before exercise, and overpronation (flat feet). Keep tendons healthy by buying good shoes, stretching, and seeing the podiatrist about any foot problems.

Podiatrists are specially trained to care for foot tendons, muscles, tissues, and bones, and we are skilled at making a diagnosis and establishing an appropriate treatment plan. We strive to decrease your pain and other symptoms, protect your injury so it can heal, and prepare you for a return to activity. Our state-of-the-art footcare facilities offer relief from the painful condition of hyperpronation through HyProCure™, a stabilizing procedure that eliminates the discomfort of excessive motion of the foot and ankle. We're conveniently located at QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER, with office hours also available at 999 North Main St., in the Randolph Medical Building, and Milton Medical Building in Suite 221. You can reach us at 781-986-3668.

P.S. People with short Achilles tendons are more likely to get tendonitis.

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

Child Fire Deaths Drop 66% Since S.A.F.E.

I believe in the impact of fire safety education otherwise I wouldn't be so motivated to write these articles. It's a great way to impact more people beyond the scope of doing so while we implement and enforce code and regulations. Presenting examples in particular is an awesome tool toward conveying fire safe behavior while success with our proactive efforts at preventing fires present fewer opportunities to learn from. That being said, and based upon my inclination that you are embracing what we convey, our efforts towards education will continue no matter what form it takes.

Much of our efforts at present focus on conveying our message to school age children through our S.A.F.E. Program. The S.A.F.E. Program is a statewide initiative to offer school age children the opportunity to receive formal fire safety education throughout their presence in the system. The acronym stands for Safety Awareness of Fire Education. The program began in 1995. This city adopted it soon afterwards while the chief at the time, Chief Gorman, saw the long-term benefit of this program for children. My pestering at that time might have helped as well.

I recently received a handout from the state fire marshal's office, which included some statistics on the impact of the S.A.F.E. Program statewide since its inception. They're quite impressive. Child fire deaths have dropped 66% since it began in 1995. The average annual number of fire deaths of children under the age of 18 has fallen by two-thirds since the start of the S.A.F.E. Program. During the 12 full years that the S.A.F.E. Program has been in effect, from 1996 to 2007, the average number of childhood fire deaths is 6.3. In the twelve years prior to this program, 1983-1994, the average number of childhood fire deaths per year was 18.7.

Fire safety education works! I'm particularly grateful for this update on this program where it statistically confirms my own impression on its impact. Meanwhile here are a few specific examples given in this flyer on the impact of this program on the behavior of children during actual fire incidents:

A 9-year old leads a 4-year old brother to the family meeting place during a fire incident.

An 8-year old makes family develop and practice escape plan as part of S.A.F.E. Program homework. The family uses the escape plan to safely evacuate their home a few weeks later.

A 7 year old saves a grandmother by helping her to "stop, drop and roll".

A 12-year old boy blocks smoke by closing the door and covering the crack with a blanket to save four younger siblings and himself.

A girl leads her brother to safety by crawling low under smoke in the house to the outdoors.

How many more learned safety procedures have been used by children and not documented? How many incidents have been avoided in our own city through education of all forms?

Thank you for embracing the message.

RECENT SCAM: beware of a telephone solicitation from a company called, "Warranty Services", with a number of 973 804 0196. The call begins as a recording, stating that the warranty on your vehicle is running out and that you need to speak to one of the call takers. I spoke with an employee, who identified the name of the company and then asked for my zip code. I gave her that and then she asked for the make and model of my car. I told her that I have two and she should tell me which one has the warranty running out since she called me. At that point, she said that she would put me on the "Do Not Call" list and hung up. Two days later, I received the call again. Amazingly, they were calling me at my office at the Police Station, which is where I uncover these type of calls. A Job Well Done

On Saturday, March 14, 2009, at approximately 5 p.m., Officer Matt Patten responded to the area of the Southern Artery and Field Street on the report of a male who appeared to have been assaulted and was crying. The caller stated they also observed what appeared to be blood on this individual's mouth.

As the officer, neared the area, he located a male matching the description in the parking lot of Quirk Ford. The officer recognized the victim as he is well known to the Police through various positive settings.

Officer Patten noted in his report that it is immediately obvious when you meet the victim that he is a middle aged mentally retarded individual, which the court has defined as "Slow or limited in intellectual and emotional development or in academic progress." This was important because there are protections and specific crimes related to this victim.

The victim, who was sobbing uncontrollably, had been involved in some kind of altercation, with his lips covered in dried blood. His clothing was disheveled and his pants were dirtied around the knee area as if he had fallen down onto them. It took several minutes to calm the victim down, but he eventually stated "Tom punched me in the mouth and threw me down."

After this statement, the victim began crying again. Officer Patten knew that Officer Chris McDermott knew the victim well, so he notified the Officer to respond to the scene. The Officers were able to calm the victim down so they could get a full account of what occurred. The victim said that he was in a wooded area behind the CVS pharmacy with two homeless people having a "cookout." The victim stated that he had met these people while staying at the Father Bill's homeless shelter months ago. When asked to describe these people, the victim was very specific regarding the clothing of the suspect and the other homeless person, a female. The victim refused medical attention and he was transported to Father Bill's. The officers then proceeded to the area behind the CVS in an attempt to locate the two homeless people.

The officers walked down a well-worn path into the wooded area where there have had several calls regarding homeless in the past. The officers snuck up to a makeshift tent and heard a male voice coming from inside stating "If your buddy (stating his name) comes back here again, he's going to be *%&#$% up again."

The officers announced their presence and ordered everyone out of the tent. A white male, matching the description provided by the victim, exited the tent first followed by a white female. The Officers saw that the male suspect had a fresh cut to his right hand knuckle, which was consistent with having punched someone or something.

Officer Patten asked the suspect if he had a problem with someone in the last hour and he denied this. Officer Patten told him that he just heard him make a statement about the victim, identifying him by name. At this time, the suspect uttered, "It was self defense - he attacked me."

The officer asked the suspect how long he had known the suspect and he replied, "a while." When asked if he believed the victim was mentally retarded, he said, "I guess so but he hit me first." At this point the female asked to speak to the Officers in private. She said that the victim had a crush on her and "Tom got mad but he would never hurt him."

When reminded about the threat made against the victim by the suspect from inside the tent, the female said "it was just macho talk." The female was asked if the suspect punched the victim, and she replied, "Yes - in self-defense."

Officer Patten determined that a battery had occurred against the victim and then placed the suspect in custody. The suspect, a 45-year-old homeless man, was charged with "Assault and Battery on a Retarded Person."

Federal Recovery Funds To Fix Up QHA Buildings

Quincy Housing Authority commissioners have approved a draft budget for the $1.4 million in federal funding they received under the recently passed Federal Recovery Act.

A hearing will be held Wednesday, April 1, at 5 p.m. at 80 Clay St., Wollaston, to seek comments from the public.

The budget drafted by Executive Director Jay MacRitchie includes needed capital improvements to each of the four federal housing developments owned by the QHA.

- Replacement of balcony doors at Pagnano Towers in Quincy Point.

- Repairs to the parking area and landscaping at Drohan Apartments in West Quincy.

- New walkways in the Riverview development in Germantown.

- Improvements to the front entryway and replacement of apartment windows in O'Brien Towers, also in Germantown.

Each of the improvements were cited as critically necessary in recently completed Physical Needs Assessment studies of the four developments.

"We were fortunate to have just finished the Physical Needs Assessment studies," said MacRitchie. "Having completed these studies allows the QHA to quickly convert this money into actual improvements."

Christine Cedrone Logan, chairperson of the Housing Authority, saw the award as "a great opportunity for the Authority to complete necessary improvements to its buildings. Each of the items will improve the lives of the residents."

Commissioner James McDonald called the program "a win-win for the city of Quincy. We are able to provide better housing to our residents and we will create jobs for the citizens and businesses of Quincy."

MacRitchie pledged to use all the funds on improvements, none for administrative costs.

"It is imperative that we use the funds given to the QHA for the purposes assigned by Congress and the President," he said. "The QHA will use the money to improve our buildings for the residents and to create jobs in the private economy."

For further information, contact MacRitchie at 617-847-4359.

'Camp Sunday' At Quincy Community United Methodist

If you ever attended a worship service where you sang "On Top of Spaghetti," or sat around a campfire and listened to the sounds of nature, then the Camp Sunday presented by the Quincy Community United Methodist Church on 10:30 a.m. March 29 is right down your alley.

"Yes, Camp Sunday is unusual," said Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, pastor. She said "the first one was held last year and the Worship Committee decided to expand Scout Sunday to include Camp Fire girls and Bluebirds."

The program includes information about the United Methodist Church's three camps in New England, as well as a number of camp songs. Participants are asked to call out the name of their favorite camp song, and it is then sung during the worship service-hence, "On Top of Spaghetti."

Dr. Glidden said, "Last year when we held Camp Sunday, a group of students from Eastern Nazarene College were visiting. They were doing research for a paper on various types of religious services. I can just imagine a professor's face when she or he was reading one of those papers; I just picture that professor say-

Local Students Honored For Leadership, Outstanding Community Service

Quincy Kiwanis Presents Junior Heroes Awards

The Kiwanis Club of Quincy recently presented its annual Junior Heroes Awards to 15 local students for their leadership and outstanding community service at a breakfast held at the Quincy Lodge of Elks, West Quincy.

Joining Quincy Kiwanians in making the presentations were Mayor Tom Koch and Quincy School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro. The program was emceed by Jim Fatseas, the mayor's chief of staff.

Also attending the ceremony were other school administrators, teachers and family and friends of the recipients.

Each year, the Kiwanis Club of Quincy presents its Junior Heroes Awards to young people who were nominated by their peers for outstanding community service and leadership. The award is named in honor of Patrick Toland White of Quincy, one of the first recipients of the award, who died at the age of 15 after a courageous fight against cancer.

Each recipient received a citation and an accompanying medal in recognition of their achievement.

This year's group of recipients are:

Nora Abo-Sido, a senior at North Quincy High School; Kristen Bloomer, senior at Archbishop Williams High School; Jordan Cai, grade 5, Snug Harbor Elementary School; Alex Cox, grade four, Squantum Elementary School; Ember Duong, grade eight, Broad Meadows Middle School; Mikayla Kennedy, kindergarten, Montclair Elementary School; Patrick Ouellette, junior, North Quincy High School; Jonathan Sheehan, grade 4, Merrymount Elementary School and Samantha Wieher, senior, North Quincy High School.

Here is a brief description of each recipients' community service:

Nora Abo-Sido has been one of the executive board members of the Alliance against Racism Club. She has been the driving force in the club and has helped with organizing and facilitating ethnic tolerance trainings, leadership club members, recruiting members and has participated in the annual Norfolk County District Attorney Office's Youth Town Hall Meeting.

Nora has become a true leader and advocate for social justice in the Racism Club, school and community. She has shown a sincere and true dedication to fighting intolerance and racism in her daily life and in turn, has been an impressive role model for younger students.

Kristen Bloomer is secretary of the AWHs National Honor Society, and she coordinates the chapter of Operation Day's Work which is a student leadership organization that seeks to improve the lives of children in developing countries through education.

Last year, as a junior, Kristen traveled to Haiti with a group of people in her parish under the direction of the St. Boniface Haiti Foundation. She volunteered to help the poor and sick, especially children.

In addition, she and her brother regularly volunteer at Friendship Club which is an adult organization for mentally challenged young adults. They play games, do crafts and eat dinner with the club members.

Jordan Cai came to the U.S. from China in 2004 at the age of 7. Jordan has been diagnosed with cerebral palsy due to complications at birth. While he faces physical challenges, he is always willing to work with his physical and occupational therapist at school. He loves physical education and is an active participant.

Jordan serves as an excellent role model as he overcomes Cerebral Palsy by being an active participant in all school sports and activities. He is always willing to do his best work and he has made nice progress with his academic skills. His classmates enjoy having him participate in their classes.

Alex Cox, an avid animal lover, is a friend to the Southwick Zoo. For the last two years, he has organized his classmates to collect everyday household items that they animals need. Also, he has led his classmates in making toys that the zoo's birds can play with.

Alex is a hard working and exceptional student and is a wonderful role model for all his classmates. He is currently working on an essay about his passion for animals; he hopes to win a trip to Peru.

Ember Duong has been a member of the Worker-Bees for three years and in that time has volunteered her time on countless occasions to assist a diverse group of people in her community. She has sorted clothes and toys for needy children at Cradles to Crayons; she has served breakfast to the elderly at the Seniors' Breakfast; she has assisted in a toy drive that raised over $4,000 in cash and toys; and also enjoys beautifying school grounds with plants and flowers.

Ember has a habit of putting the needs of others before her own and displays a very mature sense of responsibility. She prefers to work quietly and diligently to improve her community.

Abigail Egan, Montana McBirney and Nicole Regal completed a literacy project titled "Literacy Learning with Lily." They wrote and illustrated a 20-page book and recorded an audio CD which was distributed to all Quincy Public School kindergartners and pre-school classes.

The goal was to promote independent learning and literacy to both visual and auditory learners.

These three students all have outstanding academic records and are involved in numerous school activities.

Aileen Farrell is a model student and comes to school prepared everyday. She is a friend to all and always thinks of others before herself.

Aileen suffers from Spinal Muscular Atrophy. She tackles her SMA with the same resolve that she confronts every issue in her life: with a positive outlook and plenty of confidence. Besides being a wonderful student, Aileen is a tireless fundraiser for Spinal Muscular Atrophy research for which she helps to organize a yearly fundraiser for SMA: a walk at Wompatuck State Park in Hingham.

Aileen is a wonderful girl and has been able to progress from a walker to her everyday routine on her own two feet. She is an inspiration to all.

Kyle Gates has helped his elderly neighbors since he was 5. He has shoveled these neighbors' stairs for every snowstorm. He goes out in all kinds of weather so that they can get out in case of an emergency.

Kyle is a quiet, determined child who shows great perseverance in school. He never gives up, even for the most challenging of work. Kyle has a super attendance record and is well-liked by his peers.

Brandi Isaacs volunteers locally and globally. She gives up her Wednesdays to travel to the Thomas Crane Public Library to digitize and share the videotapes of the Broad Meadows' "Winnie the Welder: WWII Women's History Interviews" oral history collection. On Fridays, she helps lead her school's global aid project known as Operation Day's Work - USA. The goal of the Friday afternoon group is to raise funds to educate 2,000 Haitian children who currently are unable to at-

Spring Home Deals Are Healthy For Those Who Know The Score

(ARA) - Motivated sellers, builders offering deep discounts and incentives, historically low mortgage rates, plenty of inventory and fierce competition for qualified borrowers - it's actually a great time to be buying a house. If your credit score is good, you're in an even better position to negotiate the loan on the home of your dreams this spring.

Spring has always been a popular time to buy a new home. More people put their homes on the market when the weather is warm, and a wealth of inventory is available. With winter thawing into distant memory, home shoppers are ready for a fresh start in a new house. Buying a home in spring will help new homeowners ensure they move their families during the summer, and not at the beginning or in the middle of the school year.

With plenty of housing opportunities and low interest rates currently available, it pays to ensure you're in a position of power when you go home shopping this spring. Here are some simple tips for ensuring you're in the driver's seat when buying a house:

Know Your Credit Score
You may not be able to control the economy, but your credit score is a financial reality you do have control over. The higher your score, the more likely you are to be able to negotiate lower interest rates when mortgage hunting.

Before you look at a single house, find out what your credit score is. Sites like FreeCreditReport.com give you free access to your credit report -- which will show potential lenders your payment history and help them decide if you're a good or even great credit risk. Through the Web site, you can also get your credit score from Experian, one of the three top credit bureaus lenders turn to when evaluating the credit-worthiness of potential borrowers.

The better your score, the better your chances of scoring a great loan, so take steps to improve your score, such as paying off credit cards quickly, paying bills on time and minimizing your use of revolving credit. Errors can occur and if you find some on your credit report, work directly with the credit bureaus to have them corrected.

Know the Playing Field
Once you're confident you have a powerful credit score, research the market where you're interested in buying. In addition to considering the quality of schools, proximity to work, entertainment and amenities a neighborhood has to offer, consider the number of foreclosures in an area and how much home values have dipped in the past year.

Is the neighborhood you're interested in poised to regain value quickly when the real estate market rebounds? Recovery speed could be an important consideration if you plan to stay in the home only a few years. If you're in the home for the long haul, you may be less concerned about how quickly home values in the neighborhood will improve

Easy Tips For An Eco-kind, Budget-Friendly Home

(ARA) - Going green is one trend that continues to grow, helping to keep our environment healthy. And in a tough economy, taking eco-friendly steps at home can also be a way to save some money. If you are interested in being more energy efficient and want to reduce waste at your house, you'll be happy to know it's easier than you think.

"One of the most cost-effective, low eco-impact ways to save money is to use retractable shade around your home," says Ido Eilam at SunSetter Retractable Awnings. "Utilizing the cooling aspects of shade and the heating aspects of the sun, when applicable, can be an easy way to save money on home energy bills."

Here are some ideas on how to integrate this concept into your home life:

* Reduce your carbon footprint with a retractable awning.

There are a variety of awnings for use at home. Some attach directly on the house and are quick and easy to open and close. Not only do these retractable awnings keep you comfortable and protect you from harmful UV rays, they also help you heat and cool a home more efficiently. During the summer, less sunlight will come into windows under the awning, so the AC doesn't have to run as hard. In the winter, the awning can be stored outside in its closed position to let the natural sunlight in to heat the home. Your energy bills can be lowered throughout the year.

In addition to awnings that attach directly on the house, SunSetter offers the Oasis, a free-standing option that is great on a patio or by a pool. It does not need to be mounted against the home and helps increase how much time a family spends enjoying their yard amenities.

Hot weather during the summer months can drive people indoors fast, but if you have an awning (free-standing or wall mounted), you can enjoy temperatures up to 20 degrees cooler than those in the sun. Awnings provide a relaxing, comfortable place for you to enjoy your backyard, and because you are spending more time outdoors, you can turn down the air conditioning inside, helping to lower your bills and the pollution you put into the atmosphere.

* Consider planting trees, shrubbery and a garden.

Trees, grass and other green plants take in carbon dioxide and release oxygen, helping to keep our air clean. This is a natural way to be an eco-friendly homeowner, plus you'll add appeal with the visual allure of landscaping.

Doing a little research and finding plants that thrive in your climate without a lot of water will allow for lower maintenance and conservation of water resources. Different types of trees can do this and keep your home cool, protecting it from the hot rays of the sun. Ask your local nursery what tree species they suggest.

Another idea to consider is planting your own organic container garden. These plants will help clean the air and you'll also get fresh fruits and vegetables you can eat, helping to lower your grocery bill.

Now that you know how to create an eco-friendly and energy efficient home, take the first step. Visit www.sun-setter.com to learn about the best awning for your home. You'll love enjoying the outdoors, helping the environment and saving money all at the same time.

Kitchen Remodeling Tips From The Pros

(ARA) - Now is a great time to invest in your home, and renovating your kitchen is usually the most cost-effective upgrade you can make. As the room where families spend the most time together, the kitchen can be enjoyed on a daily basis and much of the renovation cost can be recouped when you do decide to sell.

Get the most out of your remodel by keeping the answers to these common remodeling questions in mind.

Where's the best place to begin?

According to "My Home, My Money Pit" by Tom Kraeutler and Leslie Segrete, you should start at the end -- by determining how you want to use the remodeled space. Although your primary inclination will be to pick out the style of kitchen you like best, you need to first consider how your kitchen fits your lifestyle and how you need it to function. Think about whether or not you have ample space to work efficiently or enough storage for your kitchen tools. If you use the space to pay bills and handle other household business, think about adding an office area. Once you know what you need from your new kitchen, you'll be able to solve the problems when you're remodeling.

What makes a kitchen

'Empowering Your Pocketbook' Seminar April 4 At NQHS

The Mayor's Commission on Women will host a spring seminar entitled "Empowering Your Pocketbook - Making Sense of It" Saturday, April 4 at North Quincy High School, 316 Hancock St.

Registration begins at 10 a.m. followed by a welcome at 10:30 a.m.

At 10:45 a.m., Diane DiTullio Agostino will speak on "Financial Independence and Security."

DiTullio Agostino, a former Milton selectman and a graduate of Simmons College, is an insurance broker and financial planner.

remodel more or less expensive?

Kraeutler and Segrete say that cabinets can be the single largest expense in a kitchen remodel. If you're looking to cut back on expenses, existing cabinets can often be repaired, reinforced or refinished instead of replaced. Just be sure to check your cabinets' construction; if they're made of veneers, they can't be sanded or stained, so painting will be your only option.

Surfaces are also another area where you can splurge or save -- it all depends on the materials you choose. Look for more cost-effective options for counters, backsplashes and floors to keep your budget in check. But like any major purchase, you should only spend what you can afford.

What is the kitchen "work triangle" and why is it important?

When remodeling your kitchen, keep the "work triangle" in mind -- the kitchen area from the refrigerator to the main cooking area to the sink. It's important because all of the key kitchen activities -- food preparation, cooking and clean-up -- take place in adjacent locations, improving the functionality of your new kitchen by streamlining the meal-making process.

Look to include budget-friendly options that allow you to upgrade your work triangle without incurring a huge expense. Include an undermount sink and pullout faucet to increase efficiency. Moen's Lancelot stainless steel sinks are available in multiple sizes and configurations and are constructed from durable 18-gauge stainless steel. All Moen stainless steel sinks feature SoundSHIELD noise-protection undercoating for a quieter experience while working at the sink.

Pair your new sink with the Colonnade pullout kitchen faucet from Moen, a single-handle faucet featuring an ergonomically designed pullout wand for easy access to all corners of even the largest sinks. Available in four great finishes, including the versatile LifeShine Classic Stainless, Colonnade fits any fresh new decor. It also offers several flow patterns, making prep and clean-up effortless.

What is the most desired kitchen feature?

The kitchen island has become the must-have item in any kitchen. Since it's centrally located, the island is easily accessed and ideal for various kitchen tasks. The island can also double as an eating and entertaining area -- making it a smart, stylish and functional addition to any space.

For more information on Moen's stainless steel sinks or Colonnade pullout kitchen faucet, visit www.moen.com or call (800) BUY-MOEN (800-289-6636).

Dollars and sense by David Uffington

Make Extra Cash This Summer

Warmer weather is just around the corner -- and so is your chance to make some extra money. It's not too early to get started on a plan. Here are some ideas.

- Yard sales: Start looking in your own home and garage for items to sell. What you've always given to Goodwill or the Salvation Army could net you a few bucks. Kids' jeans for a dollar, shirts for 50 cents -- somebody will buy those. Have baked goods on hand and a couple pitchers of lemonade or punch to bring in extra dollars.

- Look at your own skills: Plan a class teaching something you know how to do and propose it in writing to your local parks and recreation department or college. Teach basic sports to children, computer skills to seniors (don't forget senior centers), flower arranging, faux (marble, leather) painting, baking, home tailoring and basic sewing, music lessons -- the list of possibilities is only limited by your own skills.

- Language instructor or tutor: Contact social services and charity organizations to organize a class for those who want to learn English. If you know a foreign language, you can tutor or get on a courthouse list to act as translator.

- Tutor in a subject you know: By this time of the year, parents know whether their child is likely to pass final exams. There's still time for you to tutor children and get their knowledge up to par before the end of school.

- Delivery driver: Check courier services, landscapers and auto-parts suppliers.

- Vacation plant and pet care: Put out flyers (especially at your local veterinarian) and offer your services taking care of pets for those on vacation. Offer to water plants and bring in the mail as extra incentive. Be sure to charge a bit less than local kennels.

- Run Saturday errands for busy families: This is doable even if you work during the week.

- Make and sell crafts or jewelry at summer flea markets.

- Weed vegetable gardens in exchange for some of the bounty. Can the vegetables, again for some of the end result.

Don't limit yourself to one way to bring in extra cash. Try out different ideas and see what ends up being the most lucrative.

Cheap Ways to Boost Your Home's Value

Q. I know home prices are dropping like a rock, but I'm still considering putting my cottage in Maine on the market. Is there anything I can do to keep its value up? Sign me -- Ogonquit Snowbird, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

A. The housing market has gotten pretty interesting in the past year, but while prices have sunk in many areas of the country, other areas have seen only a modest decrease. And, despite all the doom and gloom we hear about, homes are still being bought and sold. The biggest difference is that buyers can demand more for their money.

As a seller, you will need to offer a home that satisfies at least some of those buyer demands, while avoiding getting soaked on the final selling price. So, what does that mean? Renovations? Probably -- but now more than ever, you'll want to be careful which renovations you make because you want to get the biggest return for the amount you invest.

Steve Berges wrote a great guide in 2004 that tackles this concern: "101 Cost-Effective Ways to Increase the Value of Your Home" (Dearborn Trade Publishing) doesn't just throw out ideas like redoing your kitchen, it breaks down, by the numbers, which project is most desirable to consumers and is therefore most likely to help improve that sale price.

Visual appeal ranks very high in his guide (and in general). That means improving your home's exterior and its surroundings (the yard, trees and garden, for example). If your cottage doesn't get much attention while you're away for the winter, or the yard looks a little ratty, call a professional landscaper to spruce up the lot -- or completely redo it.

The interior of your cottage should get thorough consideration as well. A fresh coat of paint and clearing away clutter costs little, yet vastly improves the look and feel. Hire a decorator if you want to create a complete "look" in the house that will tempt buyers.

What if major repairs need doing, such as plumbing or foundation work? You can make them before putting the house on the market, or you can disclose the problems to potential buyers and work out an agreement on who will tackle the work before finalizing the sale. In that case, talk to your Realtor to get more details ahead of time.

HOME TIP: Keeping your house and yard in good condition is the most cost-effective way to maintain the home's value in any market -- good or bad.

Season Starts Monday

Spring Sports About To Bloom

By SEAN BRENNAN

The cold, hard winter has come and gone here in Quincy and that means that high school sports season is about to bloom. Fans of baseball, softball, lacrosse, boys' volleyball, tennis and track and field will have the next two and half months to get outside and enjoy local high school athletics at its finest.

Beginning early next week, the two city high schools will open the 2009 spring season in full effect. With tryouts and pre-season games currently in progress, these teams are preparing for what will hopefully be a successful and healthy season. The following is a quick look at the early season games for each program.

Starting this week and continuing into April, The Quincy Sun will have full team previews of all the spring teams.

QUINCY

Softball

The reigning Atlantic Coast League champions will not have a chance to defend their ACL title this spring, instead the team, along with every program at QHS and NQHS, will be competing in the Patriot League.

Quincy, which dominated league play last year, opens their 2009 schedule on April 1 with a non-league road game versus Stoughton HS. The Presidents follow the season-opener with consecutive Patriot League road games against Scituate HS on April 3 (3:30 p.m.) and at Duxbury HS on April 6 (3:30 p.m.). The team will play its first home date when they host Silver Lake Regional HS at Mitchell/McCoy Field on April 8 at 3:30 p.m.

Games against North Quincy HS are scheduled for April 15 and May 19.

Mike Sedar coaches the Presidents.

Baseball

Under the direction of first-year head coach Tim Daley, a math teacher at Atlantic Middle School, the Presidents open the 2009 season with three straight home tilts. Quincy will host Brighton HS on March 31 at 3:30 p.m. at Adams Field in a non-league matchup. Following the season-opener, Quincy will play host to league opponents Scituate HS (April 3, 3:30 p.m.) and Duxbury HS (April 6, 3:30 p.m.) before hitting the road to play Silver Lake Regional HS on April 8.

The first game against NQHS is scheduled for April 15 at 3:30 p.m. at Adams Field.

Daley takes over the coaching duties this spring from veteran skipper Mike Draicchio.

Boys and Girls Tennis

The boys' tennis team will open the season on April 3 at 3:30 p.m. against Patriot League opponent Scituate HS. The match will be held on the CTE Courts. The team is scheduled to travel to Duxbury HS on April 6 and to Silver Lake Regional HS on April 8, both of these games are Patriot League contests.

The girls' tennis team will open their 2009 schedule with an away match against Scituate HS on April 3 and will open its home schedule with a Patriot League showdown with Duxbury HS on April 6 at 3:30 p.m. on the CTE Courts.

Veteran coach Peter Swanson leads both teams.

Boys Volleyball

A season-opening non-league match with New Bedford HS on March 30 at 5:30 p.m. in the Broadmeadows Middle School Gym opens the 2009 season for the QHS boys' volleyball team.

Quincy follows that game with a road match versus Brockton HS on April 1 and is scheduled to play host to Duxbury HS on April 3 at 5:30 p.m. (Broadmeadows MS). The Presidents are scheduled to play NQHS on May 4 and May 15.

Ed Smith is the coach.

Boys Lacrosse

Coach Kevin Orcutt's team plays host to Patriot League foe Pembroke HS on April 1 at 3:30 p.m. The game will be played on the turf at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Quincy will hit the road on April 6 to play Hanover HS before heading back to The Vet to play state powerhouse Duxbury HS on April 8. Start time for this game is 3:30 p.m.

The Presidents will challenge NQHS on April 28.

Girls Lacrosse

The Presidents jump into spring action with a non-league home game against Braintree HS on March 30 at 3:45 p.m. at Veterans Memorial Stadium. Following their season-opener, Quincy will hit the road to play Archbishop Williams HS on April 1 and Patriot League opponent Pembroke HS on April 2. On April 6, the team will play host to Hanover HS in a league game. Start time is 4:45 p.m.

Quincy and North Quincy will meet on April 28 at 5:30 p.m. at the Stadium.

Kerry Duffy coaches the team.

Spring Track

The boys' varsity team is scheduled to run with Pembroke HS on April 3, while the girls' team will run against Duxbury HS on the same date. Both Patriot League meets are on the road.

The co-ed team will run on March 31 against Whitman-Hanson HS and on April 7 versus Scituate HS.

Veteran coaches Peter Chrisolm and Geoff Hennessy coach the boys and girls teams, respectively.

NORTH QUINCY Softball

First-year head coach Kerry Ginty, who takes over for Michael Connor this spring, will have her team at home (Mitchell/McCoy Field) for the first two games in 2009.

North Quincy plays host to Patriot League opponents

Pembroke HS on April 2 (4 p.m.) and Hanover HS on April 6 (3:30 p.m.) before hitting the road to play against Randolph HS on April 8.

The team will play at home on April 9 against Rockland HS at 3:30 p.m.

The Raiders will host the annual NQHS Softball Tournament on April 20-21 and are scheduled to play QHS on April 15 at 3:30 p.m.

Baseball

Next Monday (March 30), the Red Raiders, under second-year head coach John Fidalgo, will open the 2009 season with a non-league home game against Brockton HS. Game time at Adams Field is set for 4 p.m.

North will take to the road for its next three games. A game versus Brockton HS on April 1 will precede two straight Patriot League road games against Pembroke HS on April 2 and Hanover HS on April 6.

The Raiders will square off with the Presidents on April 15 (3:30 p.m.) and the team will be hosting, once again, the annual NQHS Baseball Tournament on April 20-21.

Boys and Girls Tennis

The 2009 boys tennis team, coached by Mark McGuinness, will open the spring with consecutive Patriot League road matches against Pembroke HS (April 2) and Hanover HS (April 6).

The Raiders are scheduled to host Randolph HS on April 8 at 3:30 p.m. on the Bishop Tennis Courts.

The girls' team, coached by Mera Kriz, starts the spring off with two straight home matches against Patriot League foes Pembroke HS (April 2, 3:30 p.m., Bishop Tennis Courts) and Hanover HS (April 6, 3:30 p.m., Bishop Tennis Courts).

Both teams are scheduled to match up against Quincy HS on April 15.

Boys Volleyball

North Quincy opens the season on March 30 with an away match with Barnstable HS. The team's first home match at the NQHS Gym is set for April 1. The team will play host to Duxbury HS at 5:30 p.m.

Matches against Quincy HS are set for May 4 and May 15.

Boys Lacrosse

Coach Mark Nutley's Red Raiders open the 2009 campaign with a tough Patriot League home game against Hingham HS. The game, which is scheduled for April 2 at 4 p.m. at Veterans Memorial Stadium, is followed by three consecutive road games.

NQ will travel to Hull HS (April 6), Cohasset HS (April 8) and Silver Lake Regional HS (April 9) before heading back home to play Whitman-Hanson HS on April 15.

NQ and Quincy will square off on April 28 at 4:30 p.m.

Girls Lacrosse

Consecutive road games against Archbishop Williams HS (March 30) and Hingham HS (April 2) opens the 2009 schedule for North Quincy.

The team will play its first home game at Veterans Memorial Stadium on April 6 versus Hull High School. The game starts at 3 p.m.

The Raiders and the Quincy Presidents will get together for city bragging rights on April 28 at 5:30 p.m. at the Stadium.

Elizabeth Doherty coaches the team.

Spring Track

The boys track team is set to open the spring with road meets versus Pembroke HS (April 3) and Hingham HS (April 14), while the girls team will travel to Duxbury HS (April 3) and Hanover HS (April 14).

The co-ed team will race against Whitman-Hanson HS on March 31, against Scituate HS on April 7 and versus Middleboro HS on April 28.

Peter Chrisolm and Geoff Hennessy coach the boys and girls teams, respectively.

Notes: Schedules for sailing and girls' golf will be published when they become available. All scheduled games are subject to change in time and location... Schedules were taken from highschoolsports.net, the official website used by Quincy and North Quincy teams.

Quincy's Michael Chan Starts Season On High Note

Michael Chan, a junior tennis player at Eastern Nazarene College and a 2006 graduate of Quincy High School, played a key role in the Crusaders 4-1 start down in Hilton Head, South Carolina earlier this month.

Chan posted a 3-2 record at the #1 singles position, beating the #1 players from Hood, Juniata and Southern Virginia Colleges, while losing two matches against the #1 players from Penn State-Behrend and RPI. Both of Chan's early season defeats came at the end of three long sets of tennis.

Chan also teamed up with Xavier V. Gonzales in double matches and the duo posted a 3-2 mark at the #1 double position.

Chan, following his success down in South Carolina,

QUINCY'S MICHAEL CHAN, a junior at Eastern Nazarene College, has started the spring tennis season with a 3-2 record at #1 singles.

was recognized by the Commonwealth Coast Conference (CCC) as the league's TCCC Player of the Week.

Quincy Softball Ready To Go

By SEAN BRENNAN

The Patriot League should best beware of the Presidents in 2009.

Starting next week, Quincy's quest for a second straight division title will get underway. Last year, the program's last in the Atlantic Coast League (ACL), the Presidents captured the ACL North Division championship, finishing the regular season with a 16-3 record and Quincy entered the Division I South Regionals with high aspirations. The team defeated Fontbonne Academy 2-0 in the first-round before losing to Taunton HS, 5-0, in the quarterfinals. A strong showing for a team that in 2007 finished with a 1-19 record.

This year, playing in the new league, the team could be even better. Quincy graduated only one starter of last year's team. Granted, that player was Marybeth Torpey, the ACL's batting champ and the Presidents' captain and rock, but experience gained from the younger players and the return of All-League pitcher Kori Sorensen should bode well for QHS as it moves forward this spring.

"We have everybody back this season off last year's team except for Marybeth," said QHS head coach Mike Sedar. "She was an exceptional player and will be greatly missed, but the younger girls, and we are a junior laden team, have gained that big game experience and hopefully that will carry over as we start play in the new league."

"With Kori on the mound we always have a chance. She is that good and has only gotten better since the end of last year. You add in the return of Olivia Berry at catcher and Elisa Lam (team captain in 2009), both ACL all-stars last season, and you have a great foundation to work with."

Besides Sorensen, Berry and Lam, Sedar returns veterans Julie Yee (3B), Kylie Kozlowski (1B), Erin Curran, Amy Anderson, Lisa Lam, Jamie Shaughnessy and Danielle Urbanus. The one new comer to the team is freshman Nicole Parry. Parry, who will see time on the hill backing up Sorensen, is slated to fill the short-stop position left vacated by Torpey.

"We are junior heavy and all of these girls are fired up about playing," added Sedar. "Beside moving Parry in for Marybeth, we return the infield intact. And in the outfield we have four girls battling it out for three spots."

"Losing Torpey may put some added pressure on the offense to produce, but if we can grab a couple runs here and there our pitching and defense should carry us to wins."

After dismantling the ACL North last season Quincy will face new challenges this spring in the Patriot League. The Presidents will have to contend with teams such as Duxbury, Silver Lake, Hanover, Middleboro, Scituate, Rockland, Hingham, Pembroke and Randolph, not to mention ACL carryovers North Quincy and Whitman-Hanson. A challenge that Sedar believes his team is ready to attack.

"Last year we won games every way possible. And even our loss to Taunton showed me that we could be resilient and tough to knock out. The Patriot League will present new challenges and teams like Duxbury, Silver Lake and Middleboro are strong programs."

"But I expect the momentum from last season to carry over. Our non-league schedule is tough and I believe that it helps us prepare for league play. It should be a successful season."

Quincy opens the 2009 season on April 1 with a non-league road contest against Stoughton HS. The team's first home game is set for April 8 at 3:30 p.m. (Mitchell/McCoy) versus Silver Lake Regional HS.

Ten Sacred Heart Travel Teams Chasing Championships

The 2008-09 basketball season marked the 20-year anniversary of the Sacred Heart North Quincy Youth Basketball program. This program serves 700 Quincy children between the age of five and 18 who participate in the instructional and house leagues.

In addition, Sacred Heart fields 17 competitive traveling basketball teams from Grade 4 through Grade 12. This season has been another great year for many of these travel teams. Ten out of these 17 teams have advanced to the "Final Four" or championship game in their respective quests for league championships.

All five of the Sacred Heart boys' travel teams in Grades 4-8 have advanced to the "Final Four" of the South Shore Boys Travel Basketball League. This marks the first time in league history that one program (Sacred Heart) have had all five teams qualify for the semifinal round.

Leading the way is the Grade 6 team coached by Rick Beach. This team has compiled a 36-0 record while dominating both the South Shore League and CYO League. Members of this team include Tyler Beach, Leon Buckley, Eric Cohone-Jones, Patrick Frasso, Jake Hallisey, Sean Halleran, Patrick Keohane, Michael McDonald, Tim Murphy, Greg Paulo and David Suslowicz. (This team played last Saturday against St. Adelais of Peabody for the CYO Championship.)

The Sacred Heart girls' Grade 8 team has also had a special season, running up a 19-0 record in the CYO League of Boston. Coach Tom Yatts' team includes Caitlyn Bulger, Annie Dow, Siobhan Flynn, Jo-Jo Hallisey, Krystyn Mark, Molly Plunkett, Nora Rowland, Sara Ryan and Abby Yatts. (This team played last Saturday in the CYO Championship against St. Joe's of Medford.)

The Grade 5 boys' team won the regular season in the South Shore Prep League with an 11-1 record and advanced to the Final Four. Coach Bob Evans and Scott Mele's team includes Devin Bragdon, Jeremy Coruhum, Connor Crammond, Quinlan Evans, Bo Levine, Jack Loughnane, Brendan McDonald, Michael McNelly, Matt Mede, Scott Mele, Michael Travers and Dan Wenerawicz.

Buzz Connelly's Grade 5-6 boys' team suffered a heartbreaking one-point loss to St. Peter's of Cambridge in the championship game of the Boston CYO "B" League. This loss was the only blemish on an otherwise perfect 15-1 season. Joey Flynn Running Boston For Patrick White Joey Flynn, a resident of Quincy, will be running in his fourth consecutive Boston Marathon on April 20 to raise money for the Dana Farber Cancer Institute in memory of his late cousin Patrick White. White, a patient at Dana Farber, was also a Quincy resident and passed away from a rare soft tissue cancer in 2005 at the age of 15.

Flynn has risen approximately $38,000 in three years for the Claudia Adams Barr Program in Innovative Basic Cancer Research. Basis research has made the difference between business-as-usual in cancer treatment and the new era of targeted, less toxic therapy. Since its inception, the Dana Farber Cancer Institute has been at the center of this process and the Barr Program is an essential component of that success. Dana Farber's urgency to find a cure for all forms of cancer including breast cancer, ovarian cancer, melanoma and lung cancer will never stop until cancer is no more.

Flynn is hoping to break the $50,000 mark this year. He will be holding a fundraiser at Malachy's Saloon on Friday, April 17. Tickets are $20 and may be purchased at the door.

If you would like to support Flynn's cause/run, visit www.dana-farber.org/how/danafarber.com (click on support a runner and type Flynn) or mail a check made payable to Dana Farber Marathon Challenge to him at 41 Joan Drive, Quincy, MA 02169.

How To Keep Allergies From Ruining The Fun At Playdates

(ARA) - Playdates have taken off in America, and it is no wonder. In this economy, where else can you find an inexpensive activity that is fun for both children and moms? Not only do playdates help youngsters learn socialization and cooperation skills, but they also allow moms to mingle and share advice.

Participating in playdates (or "playgroups") is a great way to spend the afternoon, until one of your guests sneezes, and then sneezes again. If it turns out that a member of your playdate is severely allergic to the family cat, your afternoon plans could be ruined.

On any given day in America, 10,000 children miss school because of allergies, according to one study referenced on the American Academy of Allergy, Asthma and Immunology's Web site, www.AAAAI.org. Their site also mentions that up to 40 percent of American children are believed to suffer from nasal allergies, and millions more have food and skin allergies.

Yet in a recent national survey conducted by Ipsos and The Clorox Company, just three percent of the parents polled said they are most concerned about exposure to indoor allergens during playdates.

"Playdates nurture a sense of community among children and parents," says Jeff Van Lom, co-founder and CEO of Playgroups USA, a national organization that helps parents form playgroups for their children. "Kids get to be kids and enjoy playing together while parents can share advice, experiences and support. But an allergic reaction can take all the fun out of a playdate."

Nearly half of parents reported their children have experienced indoor allergy symptoms in the past year, according to the survey. Because playdates often occur indoors, they can be tough for children who are allergic to indoor allergens such as dust mite matter and pet dander. Whether you're hosting the playdate or your child is a guest, it pays to prepare with some allergy precautions.

A new free, downloadable guide on www.PlaygroupsUSA.com, called the "Guide to the ABCs of Playdates and Allergies," helps parents prepare homes for playdates -- especially when guests have allergies. The guide, created through a partnership between Playgroups USA and The Clorox Company, provides information on common allergens, statistics on allergies among children, and tips for minimizing allergy triggers during playdates.

Prepping for the Playdate

Everyone knows how tough it is to be a parent in general, much less also be in charge of hosting a playdate with other children -- especially children with allergies. This guide outlines simple steps that you can take to help make life easier as the playdate host.

For example, prior to the playdate, follow these easy steps to help reduce common indoor allergens like dust mite matter and pet dander:

- * To help make indoor allergen management easier, spray upholstered furniture and other fabrics with a product such as Clorox Anywhere Anti-Allergen Fabric Spray to reduce up to 90 percent of common indoor allergens such as dust mite matter and pet dander. This spray is also fragrance-free and dye-free, so it is safe to use around pets and won't bother kids with sensitive skin.

- * Wash fabric toys and blankets with an anti-allergen bleach like Clorox Plus Anti-Allergen Bleach that removes 99 percent of household allergens. The bleach denatures common household allergens -- such as mold, dust mite matter and pet dander -- that can hide in fabric fibers or on hard surfaces.

- * It is also a good idea to vacuum and dust the room where you plan to host your playdate. Also try to keep your pets out of the house for the day. As all moms know, there are not enough hours in the day, so just focus on where you plan to spend time with your guests. The rest of the house can wait.

- * Find out from other parents if their children have food allergies, and plan menu choices accordingly. If their child has a food allergy, they will be very impressed -- and thankful -- that you asked. Invite parents to join in and, if it raises their comfort level, supply their own snacks for their food-allergic child.

The "Guide to the ABCs of Playdates and Allergies" offers more easy-to-follow advice on how to keep allergies from being a playdate problem and is available for free download at www.PlaygroupsUSA.com.

Taste Of Spring Fundraiser To Benefit New Milton Hospital Technology

Milton Hospital will hold its Taste of Spring fundraising gala Thursday, June 4 at the Milton Hoosic Club in Milton.

Proceeds from this year's event will fund new operating room equipment that further enhances the hospital's commitment to innovation and technology while serving the community.

Chaired by Dr. and Mrs. Clifford Gluck, this year's event features a food and wine tasting prepared by area restaurant chefs. Guests are encouraged to participate in both the silent and live auctions, bidding on a host of items and packages, including a Celtics Ball Boy or Ball Girl Game Package.

Net proceeds from the event will fund a Smith & Nephew Digital OR Platform, which utilizes digital and emerging technologies, enabling the hospital to keep pace with clinical and technological advancements such as high definition cameras, image-guided surgery and robotics.

Last year's event raised $70,000 in support of the hospital's Generations Campaign and the purchase of a high definition video Gastroscope and Colonoscope for its newly expanded Endoscopy Center.

"From donations and restaurant participation to ticket sales and spirited auction bidding, last year's event was a true success. This year, we again ask the community to support Milton Hospital as we work to generate funding for new equipment that assists nurses and surgeons in the operating room," said Joseph V. Morrissey, president of Milton Hospital. "The live auction portion of the event is truly a great forum for local business owners to promote a product or service and is always a crowd-pleaser."

Sponsorships, advertising and donations are currently being accepted. Individual tickets and groups of ten for the event are also available.

For more information, contact Arsha Saunders, Development Officer, via email at Arsha_saunders@milton-hospital.org or by phone at 617-313-1311.

Milton Hospital is a clinical affiliate of Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center providing community-based health care.

ROOTING OUT GUM DISEASE

The most common treatment for periodontal disease ("scaling and root planning") involves removal of plaque and tartar above and below the gum line. By smoothing the root surfaces, all rough surfaces to which bacteria-laden plaque and tartar like to adhere are removed. In addition, smooth root surfaces encourage gum disease to reattach itself. In some cases, antibiotic gel is also injected by syringe into the pockets that form between teeth and gums. While clinical evidence supports the use of antibiotic gel, it should only be used in conjunction with scaling and root planning or not as a replacement for the standard treatment or surgery. Antibacterial gel alone does not stop gum disease and bone degeneration which contributes to tooth loss.

Deep cleaning and other periodontal treatments can largely be avoided if you are careful with your cleaning. One of the ideas of having regular check-ups is to avoid such problems developing. We'll be more than happy to show you how to clean your teeth properly if you are unsure how to do it. Periodontal disease approaches silently. It may progress painlessly, producing few obvious signs. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street where we offer complete dental care for the entire family. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. You can trust your dental health to our experience and knowledge. We want to keep you smiling. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

PS Scaling and root planning may require up to four visits.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You'll want to discourage well-meaning but potentially ill-advised interference in what you intend to accomplish. Your work has a better chance to succeed if it reflects you.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) The Bovine's well-deserved reputation for loyalty could be tested if you learn that it might be misplaced. But don't rely on rumors. Check the stories out before you decided to act.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You've been going on adrenaline for a long time, and this unexpected lull in a recent spate of excitement could be just what you need to restore your energy levels. Enjoy it.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Friends can be counted on to help you deal with a perplexing personal situation. But remember to keep your circle of advisers limited only to those you're sure you can trust.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Security-loving Lions do not appreciate uncertainty in any form. But sometimes changing situations can reveal hidden stresses in time to repair a relationship before it's too late.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) This is a good time for single Virgos to make a love connection. Be careful not to be too judgmental about your new "prospect" -- at least until you know more about her or him.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your sense of justice helps you resolve a problem that might have been unfairly attributed to the wrong person. Spend the weekend doing some long-neglected chores.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You might feel justified in your anger toward someone you suspect betrayed your trust. But it could help if you take the time to check if your suspicions have substance.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Ignore distractions if you hope to accomplish your goal by the deadline you agreed to. Keep the finish line in sight, and you should be able to cross it with time to spare.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your creative self continues to dominate through much of the week. Also, despite a few problems that have cropped up, that recent romantic connection seems to be thriving.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) As curious as you might be, it's best to avoid trying to learn a colleague's secret. That sort of knowledge could drag you into a difficult workplace situation at some point down the line.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Instead of spending too much time floundering around wondering if you can meet your deadline, you need to spend more time actually working toward reaching it.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a natural gift for attracting new friends, who are drawn to your unabashed love of what life should be all about.

A THOUGHT
FOR THE WEEK

There is an old Dutch proverb which states, "An ounce of patience is worth a pound of brains."

To do swiftly what seems to need doing is good because this is a part of the business of survival. But to act too swiftly, without even an instant's reflection, is not good. The lower animals act swiftly; they do not meditate. Sometimes they survive, but often they hurl themselves into traps.

If we claim to be higher animals, we must practice a little reasoning, a little reflection, for these are said to be virtues which set us above other animals. It is good to remember the statement that has come down to us from an ancient Chinese sage: "One moment of patience may ward off great disaster, one moment of impatience may ruin a whole life." ...

In the mid-1970s, Walpole State Prison had the highest murder rate of any prison in the country, and the lowest conviction rate: none. When an atrocious murder occurred DA William Delahunt jumped at an inmate's offer to testify that he'd seen who'd done it—even though it was a lie. It took 20 years for Stephen Doherty to prove he was innocent after being framed. This is his story. www.executionsquad-fraud.com.

Beechwood Knoll Students Celebrate Dr. Seuss's Birthday

KINDERGARTEN STUDENTS of teacher Nancy Barron at the Beechwood Knoll Elementary School are celebrating Dr. Seuss's birthday by inviting guest readers throughout the month of March.

SCHOOL COMMITTEEWOMAN Anne Mahoney celebrates the birthday of Dr. Seuss by reading "Knuffle Bunny Too" to kindergarten students at the Beechwood Knoll School.

State Aid For Schools May Increase By $4 Million

city employees for joining the G.I.C., the state's health insurance program.

Teachers' salaries which account for $29.4 million of the current budget will increase to a projected $31.8 million in 2010 and $34.3 million in 2011, according to Mullaney.

Mullaney said contractual raises account for $2,165,700 in next year's budget while "Step & Level" increases account for nearly $1,698,273 million.

The G.I.C. bonus will cost $450,300 and non-instructional staff raises, $825,983.

Teacher and staff retirements will save $330,000 on the salary line but new hire replacements increase the "Step & Level" budget line.

At this time, Mayor Thomas Koch is asking the city's unionized employees to forgo next year's contracted salary increases in an effort to close a $12 million gap anticipated in the city's 2010 budget.

DeCristofaro said a number of school department unions have agreed to waive the raises this year. As of Monday, the Quincy Education Association (QEA) which represents the teachers has not reached an agreement.

According to Mullaney's projections, the department would save approximately $3 million through a freeze on teacher and staff raises.

Mullaney said Koch's request does not apply to "Step and Level" increases which account for over $1.6 million dollars in the projected budget.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi suggested the city's cost could drop to $79 million if the Chapter 70 funds and a salary freeze materialize.

In previous sessions, Finance Committee members have suggested that fees for pre-kindergarten and full day kindergarten could offset budget deficiencies.

Mullaney said the actual cost to the city for full-day kindergarten this year is $2.9 million for 722 students.

Of that sum, $2.5 million is taxpayer-funded and a $411,688 grant covers the balance.

Mullaney, also, provided background on four school department enterprise funds:

- Food Service
- School Rental
- Athletic Programs
- Transportation

All four services are subsidized by the public school budget. Income from the Food Service operation accounts for 92% of the service expenses while the school department covers the remaining 8%.

Charges for athletic programs range from a $50 fee for one sport to a $250 maximum and a fee for hockey of $100. Despite such fees, the public school budget covers 84% of the athletic program expenses.

Students are charged for school transportation at a rate of 75 cents per mile.

Such transportation charges cover only two percent of the transportation budget of $3.9 million, while the city carries the 98% balance.

The school rental fees of $28 for Quincy youth and $35 for adult and non-Quincy youth cover only 57% of the cost of opening and maintaining the rental area. The school department budget covers 43% of each rental.

The Finance Committee will review the Fire Department budget Monday.

For Outstanding Community Service

George Burke Honored As Sun Citizen Of The Year

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Attorney George G. Burke, a long-time dedicated public servant who has served the City of Quincy with honor, dedication and integrity while giving unselfishly and generously to countless civic and charitable causes, was honored as The Quincy Sun's Citizen of the Year at a ceremony Sunday at the Quincy Sons of Italy Social Center.

Burke was recognized as the newspaper's 26th recipient of the award which was established in 1985 to recognize individuals for outstanding community service in Quincy.

Quincy Sun Editor Robert Bosworth presented Burke the award at 100 invited guests, including family, friends, community leaders and former and present elected city, state and county officials, looked on.

Residents Encouraged To Notify Authorities

Tragic Fire Highlights Illegal Housing Units

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Reports of illegal housing units are leading to the wake of last week's tragic fire in West Quincy, according to the city's safety officials.

Building Inspector Jay Duca said Tuesday that his office received 20 reports in just the four days after a father and two babies died in a fire in an illegal apartment, on Robinson Street.

Until now, Duca's office averaged two reports a week. For safety's sake, he encouraged residents to notify authorities to protect life.

"We check into every single one of them," Duca said.

The Quincy City Council has been inundated with reports of other (illegal) properties.

That's no surprise to Ward 4 Councilor Kevin Coughlin, who said the city's population is significantly under-counted at 97,500 due to the number of "undocumented, illegal residents out there."

"I'd wager it's closer to 100,000," said Coughlin, chair

Raymondi Petition Would Prevent 'T' Billboards Here

By TOM HENSHAW

Ward 4 City Councilor Daniel Raymondi plans to wheel out a big cannon in Quincy's war against the MBTA's planned advertising billboard on Burgin Parkway.

He'll file a home rule petition at the April 6 Council meeting negating the Supreme Judicial Court's ruling that exempts MBTA property from Planning Department control.

A home rule petition would have the effect of a state law, according to Raymondi's reasoning, and a law supersedes a court ruling unless it's constitutional law.

"The only way to stop them is to change the law," he said. "There's nothing in the constitution that says the MBTA can do it by right."

The MBTA announced last week that it will auction off space for 60 huge billboards in 32 locations in 19 cities and towns which is expected to net $6 million a year for the agency that is $8 billion in debt.

When Somerville challenged a billboard last year, the Supreme Judicial Court ruled that the MBTA had a special right to put up ads on

Council Opens Hearing For Application

Labor Leaders Support B.J.'s Wholesale Club Project

Local labor leaders lined up Monday to support a proposed B.J.'s Wholesale Club at 200 Crown Colony Dr. during Monday's City Council public hearing on development plans.

Members of roofers, carpenters, plumbers and ironworkers, were among the dozen proponents of the project which is being considered for a Special Permit by the City Council.

The speakers described the urgent need for construction jobs, the retail jobs that will follow B.J.'s opening and anticipated tax revenues for the city.

Ernie Arienti, president of the firefighters union, called the Crown Colony location, "a perfect spot. It's not going to affect the traffic too much."

Only one speaker, Richard McLaughlin, expressed concern about the plans.

McLaughlin warned of traffic problems ahead. At this time, McLaughlin said it takes him "4 1/2 minutes to get out of Liberty Street. You're going to have to put a cop up there."

McLaughlin, also, suggested that access to B.J.'s be established opposite the Home Depot onto Burgin Parkway and that councillors wait until the new Lowe's project on Burgin Parkway is open, then study that new traffic before approving the B.J.'s plans.

Another West Quincy resident, Al Bina, described his family's support of the proposal. "Overwhelmingly, they support B.J.'s." He added that his four adult children live in Quincy and tell him, "We have to leave Quincy to buy anything today."

Bina, also, believes that all new construction in the area should respect the city's heritage by installing a tribute made of Quincy granite on the property.

City Clerk Joseph Shea entered correspondence, all e-mails, on the B.J.'s Proposal into the record. About 18 supported the plan and seven opposed it.

Prior to the public comment period, Robert Fleming, attorney for QBJ Land

Review Aimed At Cutting Costs, Increasing Income

Keenan: Field Fees, Advertising Could Boost Park Department Budget

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Field fees and advertising promotions could boost Park Department funds, according to city councillors who recently reviewed the department's $1.7 million budget with Executive Director Kristen Powers.

According to Powers' records, reimbursements and fees totaled $21,835 in fiscal year 2008 and $19,231 this year to date while the department issued 2,700 permits for all its facilities.

Powers outlined the parks' income and expenditures on March 18 during a Finance Committee budget review aimed at developing plans for cutting costs and increasing income.

"There comes a time when we're subsidizing adult (teams)..." said City Council President Jay Davis, Ward 4, while discussing possible field fees.

Committee Chairman John Keenan suggested that the Park Board evaluate the income potential from advertising on playing fields. Advertising is already sold for fields in neighboring cities and towns.

Powers said adult teams do pay for field use as well as for electricity, rest rooms and maintenance crews. In addition, she said that adults, also, volunteer for projects improving the parks.

There are, also, higher expectations associated with higher fees as well as legal issues, according to Powers.

Powers said that leagues would have higher expectations as to service and conditions, along with higher fees.

Even more important, Powers said that the city would be exposed to "a greater level of liability," if teams are charged more substantial fees.

In Powers' report, she noted the Park and Forestry Department oversees 52 park locations, 25 Little League Fields, 34 basketball courts, 100 traffic islands, 10 municipal beaches and performs maintenance for the main Thomas Crane Public Library

Fatal Fire Spawns Probes, Resolution

By TOM HENSHAW

The West Quincy fire that killed an Iraqi immigrant and his two sons last Wednesday has spawned at least two investigations and one City Council resolution.

Oudah Frawi, who escaped from Iraq during the Gulf War of 1991, and his sons, Ali Oudah, 1, and Hassan, 2 months, died in the 3 a.m. blaze at 100 Robertson St.

His wife, Terri Knight, was in critical condition at Massachusetts General Hospital.

Fifteen other residents escaped from the house where Frawi and his family lived in an illegal basement apartment. The house was authorized for four apartments but housed six.

Building Inspector Jay Duca heads a task force that began a citywide search for other apartment houses that violate the city's building code.

Ward 4 City Councillor and Council President Jay Davis said he plans to introduce at the April 6 meeting a resolution enabling a faster city response to such tragedies.

"We need more authority for department heads to follow up the ordinances that we have," he said. "Right now it takes a long time. We need quicker access into houses to investigate complaints."

Currently, the law gives the owner of the apartment house 30 days to respond to a complaint.

Davis said donations of toys, food and clothing for dispossessed tenants are being taken at the Southwest Community Center in Brewer's Corner.

Money can be donated to funds at the Red Cross or Quincy Community Action Programs (QCAP).

The major investigation of the fire is being conducted by the State Fire Marshal, who declined to comment until it was completed.

David Traub, spokesman for District Attorney William Keating, said his office is waiting for the report by the fire marshal before deciding whether to pursue criminal charges against the owners of the building.

The owners are listed as Xiu Ma and Andy Huang.

Most of the residents of 100 Robertson St. are immigrants from the Middle East who work as cooks or drive taxis. Frawi worked at a gas station in Weymouth.

"The terrible tragedies hit the nicest people," acting Fire Chief Joseph Barron told the Council's Public Safety Committee Monday night. "They were all good hard-working people who lived in that building."

"It's certainly a nightmare for any firefighter to experience," he added. When firefighters go home "their children get an extra hug."

"The men did a great job, everything humanly possible," said Ernie Arienti, president of the Firemen's Union. "There was nothing they could have done. There was no way the outcome of that fire could have changed."

Both Barron and Arienti said that every firefighter has a fire that haunts him for a lifetime.

This was one of them.

• On April 5, 1951, at the end of a highly publicized espionage case, death sentences are imposed against Julius and Ethel Rosenberg after they were found guilty of conspiring to transmit atomic secrets to the Soviet Union. The only incriminating evidence came from a confessed spy who was given a reduced sentence to testify against them.

• On April 4, 1969, the most popular show on TV, "The Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour," is canceled by CBS because the brothers failed to submit an episode to network executives before its broadcast. Son BeamsBy ROBERT BOSWORTH*Koch - Phelan Rematch?*Ho-hum or humdinger?

One of those adjectives could aptly describe this year's mayoral election.

Will incumbent Tom Koch — who will officially announce his campaign for a second term in May — be unopposed or have only token opposition? Or will the one-term mayor face a serious test in his bid for re-election?

There is speculation that former Mayor William Phelan, who was defeated by Koch in November, 2007 in one of the more hotly contested mayor's races in many years, could mount a challenge to reclaim Quincy's highest elective office. But is Koch-Phelan Part II just a rumor or could it evolve into political fact?

Only time will tell.

But there are signs — and political history — to suggest a rematch will not take place this fall.

This past Jan. 20, Phelan dissolved his political campaign committee, officially the Committee to Elect William Phelan. The committee's last campaign finance report — which covers the period from Jan. 1, 2008 to Dec. 31, 2008 — shows a cash balance of $0. Dissolving a committee means a candidate no longer has to file reports. However, if a candidate wants to raise money for a campaign, he or she must establish a campaign committee first.

So, it is possible Phelan could set-up a new committee. And run again for mayor of course.

Political history, however, seems to indicate a rematch is not in the cards this fall.

There have only been two occasions in the city's history that an incumbent mayor who had been defeated for re-election subsequently ran against the man who defeated him in the next election. This, according to city political historian and former mayor, Francis McCauley.

And, in both scenarios, the sitting mayor won re-election against his former incumbent challenger.

In the election of 1916, Mayor Gustav Bates was defeated by then City Council President Joseph Whiton. Whiton, with 3,131 votes, to Bates' 2,962 votes, won by 169 votes. Bates ran again in 1918 and was once again defeated by Whiton, losing by 1,011 votes.

In the 1932 election, Mayor Thomas J. McGrath, seeking a fourth term, was defeated by Charles A. Ross whom he had defeated twice (in 1926 and 1928). Ross's margin of victory was 1,710 votes.

In 1934, McGrath, seeking to regain the mayoralty he lost in 1932, was once again defeated by Ross. Ross' victory margin was 1,914 votes.

McCauley also notes another historical nugget. In early 1935, after his inauguration, Ross would be charged with violations of the Campaign Finance Laws. Found guilty, he would be removed from office.

Three years later, in 1938, Ross lost a bid for mayor to incumbent Thomas S. Burgin. In 1942, after Burgin left office to accept a commission in the U.S. Navy, Ross ran for the open seat, was elected, and he would serve three more times, retiring in January, 1950.

One more political footnote: there have been seven individuals who lost a bid for mayor but won that office in a subsequent election. They are:

James Thompson - lost in 1893, won in 1904.

William Shea - lost in 1906, won in 1907.

Eugene Stone - lost in 1908, won in 1911.

Gustav Bates - lost in 1904, won in 1915.

Charles Ross - lost 1926, 1928, won in 1932.

James McIntyre - lost 1959, won in 1965.

Joseph LaRaia - lost 1965, won in 1975.

There are at least three important considerations in waging a successful mayoral campaign. And all three factored into the mayoral election of 2007: time, money and name recognition.

Koch resigned as long-time director of the city's Park, Forestry and Cemetery Department in January, 2007 to essentially run as a full-time candidate while doing some consulting work to help earn a living. Money-wise, his campaign spent nearly $300,000.

Obviously, long days on the campaign trail and raising significant cash paid dividends at the ballot box: Koch defeated Phelan by 2,051 votes to become the city's 33rd mayor.

Political observers believe Phelan could still announce a bid to win back the mayor's office later this spring and have sufficient time to campaign since he has run city-wide before. He, like Koch, also has widespread name recognition. But, someone else — and certainly a lesser-known political commodity or first-time candidate — would need to be "moving pretty quickly and announce soon," political observers say.

The field of candidates in the 2009 city election should become somewhat clearer next month: nomination papers will be released by the Board of Registrars on Tuesday, May 2. The last day for candidates to submit nominations papers is Tuesday, Aug. 4 at 5 p.m. Fifty signatures are required for each office in a city election.

Election dates are Tuesday, Sept. 22 if there is a preliminary election for mayor, school committee and/or city councillor; and Tuesday, Nov. 3 for the city election.

If Phelan doesn't seek the mayor's seat, there are also some observers who think the former mayor could seek a return to the school committee. Phelan served two years of a four-term term on the school committee before upsetting former Mayor James Sheets by 17 votes in 2001 — Quincy's closest mayoral election. Phelan went on to win two more terms as mayor before losing to Koch.

The three incumbent school committee members up for re-election this fall are Anne Mahoney, Ron Mariano and Nick Puleo. Mahoney will be seeking her second four-year term. Mariano is filling the unexpired term of Kevin Mulvey who left the school committee to become personnel director of the Quincy School Department. Puleo was named to fill the seat vacated by Jim Timmins after he became city solicitor when Koch took office.

However it plays out at the mayoral level, Koch says he intends to run as if there will be another name next to his on the ballot.

"I intend to talk about my record and what we've been able to accomplish and hopefully the public will respond," he says. "The mayor's seat doesn't belong to me personally. It belongs to the people. I feel blessed to have the opportunity to serve as the mayor of this city and I take it very seriously. I've had some success and there have been some financial challenges but we'll get through it."

Koch's war chest, according to the last report filed Jan. 20, had a balance of $33,321. A fundraiser March 26 at the Quincy Neighborhood Club was expected to raise another $20,000.

Now that the Red Sox are ready to play baseball games that count again, it won't be long before the city's political season is in full swing, too.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1925 real photo postcard view of the Government Elementary School built by the U.S. Housing Corp. on the corner of Fifth Avenue and North Street in Quincy Point. It was opened in 1920 for the children of shipyard workers who lived in the housing built by the government throughout this neighborhood. Six years later it was bought by the City and renamed the Pollard School in honor of the beloved Thomas W. Pollard who for many years had been the principal of the Washington and Daniel Webster Schools in the Point. About the same time, North Street was also renamed, as it became part of the new Southern Artery. This school served Quincy

Point youngsters for 62 years until the city closed it in 1982. Henry Bosworth attended the school and often reminisced about the wonderful teachers he had there. After the school closed, fires ravished it and then in 1984 it was demolished. Condominiums have since been built on the site. The copper cupola behind the tree in the center of the picture was salvaged from the fire ruins, refurbished and serves today as the centerpiece of the Granite State Marketplace on the Daniel Webster Highway in Hookset, N.H. Illegal Apartments Endanger Tenants, Neighbors

The recent tragedy in Quincy when a fatal fire took the lives of a father and his two children and left his wife in serious condition at a hospital shows once again how unsafe illegal apartments can be for tenants.

According to the state fire marshal's office, the four-unit apartment building also had two illegal apartments in it, unknown to the city's Building Department. Reportedly, the city had received a complaint from one of the tenants, which led City Hall to believe there was one illegal apartment inside. However, the city did not find out about the illegal basement apartment until after the fire.

I lived in Quincy for 23 years and the issue of illegal apartments scattered across the city has been an ongoing problem. With the downturn in the economy, surely this issue will grow in size as some property owners might very well use apartment buildings as cash cows. This issue is statewide and not just a Quincy problem. Personally, it should be addressed at the state level as well as in cities and towns.

Illegal apartments can endanger the tenants who rent them and the surrounding neighborhood. These apartments are in violation of city ordinances and reporting requirements.

Punishment for violations is not strong enough. Perhaps, a state law is needed to ensure that the penalty for operating illegal apartments is stiff. When there are fatalities involved, what should the penalty be? Stronger measures are needed because this isn't just a housing issue but rather a public safety one. Until we crack down on illegal apartments, the issue will grow and not go away.

Commends Councillor Brian McNamee's Hard Work

Having recently received a public notice regarding the proposal to have the Fiesta Shows Carnival relocated to Squantum Point Park, and reading of Councillor Brian McNamee's opposition to a proposed burlesque dance academy on Billings Road, I feel compelled to offer a response as a concerned resident in support of Councillor McNamee's position regarding these proposed venues.

As a former officer of the Marina Bay Civic Association, member of the Seaside Gardeners, and community activist, I have come to know Councillor McNamee as a vocal, pro-active and sincere advocate for the residents and issues of Ward 6. Particularly, he has always lobbied to protect the integrity of the neighborhoods he represents...often in a "less than shy" manner, which I have come to appreciate.

From my own personal standpoint, I am increasingly becoming frustrated by recent decisions in Quincy that have not been resident friendly and contribute to further erode the integrity of the neighborhoods of Quincy. Specifically, the breakdown of communication that led to the installation of a giant billboard in West Quincy, the establishment of the monolithic Highpoint development, the relocated Montessori school in the Hospital Hill neighborhood and countless other pro-developer and quick revenue producing decisions around the city. Often times, these decisions have forced residents to become adversarial to protect their neighborhoods, property values, and quality of life.

At this time, I wish to extend "a heartfelt thank you" to Councillor McNamee for his unabashed support of Ward 6 residents and neighborhoods. I respectfully suggest to the Mayor, the Quincy City Council and members of the License and Zoning Boards that they follow this cue and support future decisions, which support the integrity of Quincy's neighborhoods. As a satisfied homeowner for the past 29 years in Quincy, I hope to look forward to many more. Future decisions by the above people will determine if this is to be for my family, as well as others throughout the city that may share similar concerns regarding the growing signs of urban blight evidenced throughout Quincy.

Shipyard Workers Agree To Postpone Strike

By FRANK McCaULEY

The threatened strike of 50,000 CIO shipyard workers including some 5,000 from the Fore River Shipyard, at one minute past midnight, has been postponed for 30 days.

The announcement of the postponement was made by John J. Crogan, president of the International Union of Marine and Ship Workers of America.

This Week
58 Years Ago

Crogan said: "The general executive board had voted to agree to the government's request to postpone a nationwide strike for 30 days."

While the general executive committee, which included Donald Edmonston, former president of Local 5, agreed to the postponement, the committee rejected Bethlehem Steel's offer to pay the 50,000 members a 10% wage increase.

COUNCILLOR AUSTIN CRITICIZES ASSOCIATES FOR SALARY VOTE

"The City Council permitted itself to be pressured into a hasty decision to give city employees a flat permanent raise for the fourth time in the last few years," Councillor Edna B. Austin declared.

Mrs. Austin was referring to the action of the Finance Committee last Friday night when, at City Hall, with a standing-room only throng of municipal employees, the councillors went on record unanimously in favor of a $500 raise effective as of April 1. Mrs. Austin has tried to amend the motion to provide for a bonus instead of a permanent raise, and she was defeated by a vote of 4-to-2.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Golden Apple Cake

About a couple of times a month, I bake a golden cake one of my mother's recipes which is always enjoyed.

And so it was on one of those almost daily snow storms that I decided to do something different and added a couple of apples. Most apple cakes are made with apple sauce, but this one is made with sliced apples.

The kind of apples used are either McIntosh or Granny Smith. One day I used an Empire apple that even though they are the most crunchy, they also contain more of a water content. So the cake did not come out as well as the other kind of apple.

Golden Apple Cake

- 1 stick butter (or margarine)
- 1 1/4 cup sugar
- 2 3/4 cups flour
- 3 1/4 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 teaspoons salt
- 2 large eggs
- 2 3/4 cup milk

- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 2 large apples (peeled and sliced)
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- 2 tablespoons sugar (for the apples)
- 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg

Before you begin making the cake, peel the apples, and place them in the microwave for two minutes. Add the cinnamon, nutmeg and sugar to the apples. Set aside.

Now for the cake.

Cream butter and sugar together until well blended. Add the dry ingredients alternately with the milk and eggs and beat for one minute on medium. Add the vanilla and beat for another minute or so.

In a greased baking pan, add a layer of the cake mixture. Then add the apples. On top of that add the rest of the mixture and bake for about 35 minutes or when a toothpick or knife comes out clean.

If you prefer just baking the cake, just eliminate the apples.

MBTA had a special right to put up ads on its own property without local zoning review.

Mayor Tom Koch fired off a letter to Daniel Grabauskas, general manager of the MBTA, citing the placement of the billboard as a contravention of a special act allowing the agency to operate in Quincy.

"That act provides that all improvements undertaken by the T within our city shall be subject to our zoning ordinances --- which specifically prohibits the erection of billboards," he wrote.

"In addition, the special act specifically provides: 'No billboards shall be erected under the provisions of this act.'"

Raymondi's petition would prohibit the MBTA from "constructing, erecting, placing and/or maintaining off premises signs which is a sign that advertises or announces a use conducted or goods provided that are available elsewhere than within the building and/or structure and/or on the lot on which the sign is located in the city of Quincy that is:

"• in a predominantly residential neighborhood.

"• not in harmony with or suitable for the surrounding area or would do significant damage to the visual environment.

"• within 300 feet of a park, playground, cemetery, forest. Reservation and/or any other scenic or recreational area, walking path/trail, historic or conservation area, regardless of ownership, which is available for public use or reserved for the public if within view of the same at any time of the year; and "• not in conformity and not in compliance with the local zoning ordinances and regulations of the city of Quincy unless approved by the city of Quincy's Zoning Board of Appeals.

"No such off-premises sign shall be constructed, erected, placed and/or maintained with the purpose of circumventing the intent of this Home Rule Petition."

The precise location of the billboard site on Burgin Parkway has not been disclosed but Raymondi noted that the best location of MBTA-owned land is around the Quincy Center station.

Quincy is particularly sensitive to billboards in the wake of the long dispute over the electronic billboard that hangs over the Southeast Expressway from Willard Street in West Quincy.

"I intend to do everything within my power to prevent the construction of any billboard in the city of Quincy while I serve as mayor," said Koch.

$100 Trash Fees Or Stickers Could Aid DPW Budget

An annual $100 trash fee could cut the city's trash collection costs nearly in half, according to Michael Coffey, Business Manager, Department of Public Works (DPW).

Coffey estimated that an annual trash fee of $100 assessed to 30,000 households would generate $3 million toward the current $6.7 million trash pickup and disposal budget.

An alternative program requiring trash stickers could raise $750,000 to $1 million a year, according to Coffey. Under that plan, a resident's first barrel would be collected free each week while all additional barrels would require one-dollar stickers.

In addition, Coffey said the DPW could reduce the $191,000 yard waste collection costs by scheduling pickups on "12 weeks instead of 24 weeks," and by instituting fees for collection of white goods, televisions, and electronics.

Coffey presented financing alternatives and other potential cost-cutting measures for the DPW to the Finance Committee on March 18. He, also, offered charts showing that neighboring communities, except for Boston, charge even higher trash collection fees.

The Finance Committee has asked all departments to project the savings potential from new fees, revisions in service, or manpower reassignments in an effort to prepare for both the 2010 and 2011 budgets.

At the same time that DPW officials are trying to reduce trash and yard waste tonnage, they are trying to increase recycling collections.

Recycling efforts are succeeding, according to Coffey who said, "Our (trash) disposal costs are going down, because our recycling is going up."

Coffey said the current contract includes an $87 a ton charge for trash and a $22 a ton credit for recycling.

However, Coffey warned that the $22 a ton payback is only good for the two years remaining in the current contract. He said that Boston is currently paying $55 a ton to dispose of recycling.

The DPW's Program Manager John Sullivan described programs designed to educate residents regarding "single stream" recycling and his outreach to large residential rental buildings.

"We're actually targeting multi-family (units)," said Sullivan.

For some renters, there is little incentive to recycle, according to Sullivan who noted that trash for buildings with more than eight units is disposed of privately.

Sullivan, also, described a project underway whereby food waste is collected from businesses and the city gets free loam in return.

Councillors questioned Coffey regarding the DPW's overtime budget, which is over budget by $27,559 with three months remaining the fiscal year.

Enjoying Life at Allerton House

THE ALLERTON WAY

Allerton House at Hancock Park, Quincy, MA
by Kelly Richards

Theresa Webber's children surprised her two years ago when they came to her Dorchester home and simply said that they wanted to take her somewhere. Webber says, "As it turned out, the final destination of our mystery ride was Allerton House at Hancock Park. After taking a tour and meeting some of the residents and staff, I knew I would love living here." She credits her daughter and three sons for doing their research, knowing her needs and personality, wanting to make life easier, and finding her a perfect home. "It was the first place I looked at," she says. "I didn't need to look any further."

Theresa Webber is a resident of Allerton House at Hancock Park in Quincy.

"Moving here was the best thing!"
Theresa Webber

Today, Webber's spacious one-bedroom apartment at Allerton House is decorated with lots of photographs of her children and grandchildren, as well as other personal possessions that she holds dear. "All of my furniture fit right in," says Webber. And my family is close by so I see them all the time. They especially like to come to the special events here. At the Christmas party, they saw me sitting on Santa's lap."

Prior to her move to Allerton House, Webber lived alone. With her children nearby, she could always count on them for help, but at age 82, she continued to carry out the day-to-day tasks that home ownership entails. She says, "I don't have to do anything now - no cooking, no cleaning, no paying the bills, no laundry. All of those things are done for me, and

Webber's engaging personality touches everyone she meets. "I believe we all just need to keep going and stay involved," she says. And stay involved she does. You may find her at the Bingo game at Allerton House three or four times a week, joining other residents on a road trip for lunch at a local restaurant, or socializing in the residence's elegant dining room. One of the first friends she made when she moved in now lives at Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group's skilled nursing center in Hingham, and Webber makes it a point to visit her often. "We both enjoy catching up during our visits."

According to Webber, one of the best things about living at Allerton House at Hancock Park is the opportunity to be around truly nice people. "I know everybody here," she says, and "everybody is wonderful. Moving here was the best thing!"

Kelly Richards is the Marketing Director for Allerton House at Hancock Park in Quincy. The 42-apartment assisted living residence is owned and managed by Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group, which is celebrating 60 years of service to seniors. Program Resumes For Third Year After Receiving $9,955 Grant 'Cops In Shops' To Combat Teen Drinking

By TOM HENSHAW

Starting tomorrow (Friday) and continuing through the summer it's going to be risky for those involved in providing alcohol for underage drinkers in Quincy.

The Cops in Shops program, in which police officers work in package stores to ferret out purchasers of liquor for teens, is resuming for the third year with a $9,955.22 grant.

The program was developed by The Century Council of Arlington, Va., and the funding for Quincy's participation comes from the Governor's Office of Public Safety and Security.

The program works like this:

One undercover police officer is placed as an employee in the packie to look for fake IDs. Warning signs are posted but the time he is there is not disclosed.

"Under 21?" the signs ask prospective customers. "Police Officers May Be Posing As Store Employees."

A second officer is stationed outside in the parking lot in an unmarked car to watch for autos with underage drivers or passengers.

"We practice zero tolerance," said Detective Lt. Peter Turowski, the Police Department's liquor inspector. "All are arrested, including those of legal age who might be buying for the others."

"We also do compliance checks, sending underage kids in to try and purchase alcohol without showing IDs. We'll be doing that all summer, too."

"We have to notify the public through the media that we are doing this."

Turowski said the Cops in Shops program has been welcomed warmly by the licensees of the liquor stores for it places the onus on the underage perpetrator.

"You can be assured that if your clerks make a mistake, they will not be cited or fined," said his note to shop owners. "The officers are there to work with you and your employees to deter minors from purchasing liquor."

"Remember, the signage itself serves as a major deterrent for shoplifters and minors trying to buy alcohol."

Turowski said most crimes committed by underage drinkers fall into three categories:

- Unlawful sale or delivery to a minor.
- A minor in possession of alcohol.

• Possession of an altered ID or Massachusetts Driver's License or uses ID of another.

He also warned that the presence of liquor in any car of an underage driver or passenger, unless accompanied by a parent or guardian, is grounds for arrest of everyone in the car.

"Kids don't seem to know that," he said.

The Century Council is a national not-for-profit organization funded by the nation's leading distillers and dedicated to fighting drunk driving and underage drinking.

It has assisted Cops in Shops programs in more than 42 states.

The grant for Quincy's part in the program for 2009 comes from the Underage

Palmucci Announces Two Union Endorsements

Ward 4 candidate Brian Palmucci announces that he has picked up two key union endorsements in his bid for City Council.

The Roofers & Waterproofer Local Union #33 and the National Association of Government Employees Local 207 have each announced that they are endorsing Palmucci for the Ward 4 City Council seat.

"I am honored to receive the support of both of these fine unions," said Palmucci, a 31-year old state prosecutor and Willard Street resident. "I look forward to joining with these men and women to help change Quincy for the better."

Paul Bickford, business manager for the Roofers & Waterproofer, said his union is endorsing Palmucci's candidacy "with great pleasure."

"The prime factor in the Local 33's endorsement is your commitment to the issues of organized labor and all working men and women," added Bickford. "We feel secure in the knowledge that in the future your priorities will continue to be a strong advocate for labor. We look forward to working with you in the creation of jobs and any other areas that will better the community."

The United Union of Roofers, Waterproofer and Allied Workers, based in Washington, D.C., has 22,000 members participating in nine regional district councils across the country.

Theresa McGoldrick, president of the National Association of Government Employees Local 207 Unit 6, called Palmucci, "a labor leader, a steward and an advocate."

Kelly Vows Fight To Keep Houghs Neck Station Open

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Ward 1 City Councillor Leo Kelly Monday pledged to fight any attempt to relocate the Houghs Neck Fire Station or combine the station with its neighboring station.

"It's a terrible idea," Kelly said, describing the fire station on Sea Street as essential to protecting that peninsula. Kelly said the residents fought to get good fire coverage and they will fight to keep it.

Kelly spoke after Acting Fire Chief Joseph Barron said the Germantown and Houghs Neck stations should be relocated and consolidated at Palmer and Sea Street, a move that would increase efficiency and decrease costs.

Barron and Kelly spoke at Monday's Safety Committee meeting chaired by Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin.

While Kelly worried about Houghs Neck coverage, Coughlin and Ward 5 Councillor Douglas Gutro, also, questioned Barron's decision to pull Ladder 2 (Wollaston) out of service, when necessary, to save the department's overtime budget.

Gutro and Coughlin said they weren't notified that Ladder 2 would periodically be pulled from service in what officials call a "brown-out," due to lack of manpower.

"Ladder 2 was never on the table," Gutro said of previous budget discussions with fire department officials. He then described the massive Ladder 2 coverage area.

The decision was made Feb. 27, according to Barron who called the councillors after published reports.

"I felt we could withstand that cut," said Barron who described dealing with "huge spikes in overtime."

Gutro noted that the Fire Department has $225,000 left to cover its overtime in the budget which closes June 30.

Monday's Finance Committee meeting was scheduled to begin at 7:30 p.m. but was delayed by the Public Service Committee.

Chairman John Keenan will reschedule the meeting. Keenan warned councillors that the financial concerns will only multiply in the weeks, months and years ahead.

"There's no wiggle room in these budgets," Keenan said. "It's going to be even uglier. Every department is facing it."

Developers, outlined the development plans for an 85,000 square foot retail establishment with 387 parking spaces.

The building will be located on the 7.5 acres which formerly housed the Patriot Ledger printing press.

"We probably had the most in-depth study of any (project) ever done in the city, including Lowe's," said Fleming

In fact, Fleming said that with its brick façade and green awnings and added landscaping, the building would not have the "typical

B.J.'s' big box style because developers adopted "standards from the nearby office park."

"We tried to pay attention to every detail," said Fleming who said, "South Quincy is experiencing a resurgence (with new small office buildings as well)."

Fleming, also, noted that the Planning Board and the Conservation Commission as well as state agencies have approved the project, including MEPA, the state's environmental watchdog.

The B.J.'s team, also, presented traffic projections, suggesting that the retail operation will not adversely impact the office park, commuter traffic or the neighborhood.

"We're going to have jobs for Quincy people," said Fleming.

City Council, acting as the Special Permit Granting Authority (SPGA), must approve a Special Permit for the plan which has already been the subject of several legal disputes between the city and the developer.

City Council President Jay Davis closed the public comment period, but continued the public hearing.

New Codes, Regulations Coming

Here we go again! I just opened a packet of updated code and regulations from the State Fire Marshal and we're asked to enforce new changes once again. This time it will apply to all homes while immediately affecting those up for sale needing a smoke and carbon monoxide detector certificate from us. The new regulation will take effect on January 1, 2010 while this article will forewarn you of its coming.

I just wrote an article on the subject suggesting that we'd see more of this issue in the months to come. Little did I know how soon it would surface while months turned into days, literally. Here's what it's about.

Studies have shown that a photoelectric smoke detector is quicker to sense the larger, visible smoke particulates which are more prevalent in a slowly developing, smoldering fire such as that found in the incipient stages of a fire in upholstered furniture. This type of fire is more prevalent within a home, which is why a photoelectric smoke detector is preferred within a home. That being said, Massachusetts' regulations pertaining to smoke detectors as of January 1, 2010 will specify the need for photoelectric detectors within homes.

Ionization type of smoke detectors are historically more prevalent where they have been less expensive to purchase and make. They're easier to find as well. However, that same study has indicated that they are less effective against your more common residential fires, smoldering fires. Consequently, the State Fire Marshal's Office is now attempting to prompt households to comply with these newer findings, requiring the more effective photoelectric type.

This is how the regulation is written. There will be no grandfathering of existing conditions. Older homes, built prior to the need for hard-wired smoke detectors, will now require a battery operated photoelectric smoke detector when it is to be located within 20 feet of a kitchen or bathroom.

In other words, an ionization type of smoke detector can no longer be located within 20 feet of a bathroom or kitchen no matter how old the home. Outside of that 20 feet, let's say at the base of the cellar stairs, a combination photoelectric/ionization detector will be required and if not available, a separate photoelectric and an ionization type of detector is required. That's right; two detectors will be required under certain circumstances!

Here's hoping the technology for the combination type is available by then otherwise two separate detectors will be required in areas outside of the 20 feet. Here's hoping the manufacturers clearly mark the different types as well. At any rate, you heard it here first!

Remember, this change will apply to all homes while our inspections will initially be directed at homes under agreement for sale where a certificate from us is required. Meanwhile, come January, we will be here to guide you through these changes and answer any questions you may have. The Nicole's Law implementation went well, I believe this will do so as well.

man of the Public Safety Committee.

The committee discussed the Robertson Street property where the family of four lived. Their apartment is described as an "unfinished basement" on the Assessor's property evaluation.

"There are many more illegal apartments," said Coughlin who described a single-family home that was found with eight illegal boarders.

Barron said he'd met earlier Monday with officials from the State Fire Marshal's office and discussed the Robertson Street property which was not inspected following its 2007 sale because it was a cash purchase.

"This owner bought it at

auction and paid cash," said Barron who said that cash transactions slip through the cracks because there is no notification.

Mortgage holders, such as banks and credit unions, report properties that are changing ownership and request inspections in order to complete the transaction.

"That mechanism does not kick in with cash," Barron said.

Ward 4 Councillor Jay

Davis suggested that city officials establish links between the Registry of Deed and the Assessors' office in an effort to alert city officials to all property transactions.

Duca described the city's official Task Force, which conducts home inspections when ownership changes, or there are reports of illegal housing. The Task Force checked 10 properties last week.

The four-year-old Task Force consists of representatives from the Building, Fire, Police, and Health Departments and the Code Enforcement Officer.

"As soon as we get a complaint, we place it on the Task Force agenda and send out a letter requesting inspection. After a week, the address is placed on the list and the team attempts to enter the building.

In the past year, the Task Force conducted over 1,000 inspections, according to Duca. Of that number, they issued 109 complaints, ranging from a lack of smoke detectors to insufficient exits to orders evacuating areas of buildings deemed unsafe.

"Our priority is to make sure the violations get resolved and people are safe," said Duca who has nine criminal complaints pending against offenders.

The Task Force won't be disbanding anytime in the future, according to Duca who said, "There are plenty of slumlords."

Deputy Chief Paul Griffith said that the inspectors now offer no leeway when a safety matter, no matter how technical, is involved.

"At the direction of the mayor, we're going to take a hard line on this," said Griffith, noting that buildings will be declared unsafe or inspections 'failed' for every infraction.

Griffith described some of the "cramped" units that are "literally fire traps" found during inspections.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi said that nobody benefits in dangerous living quarters.

After describing a two-family building that was illegally converted to five units, Raymondi said that ignoring illegal housing is "not doing a service to any population." He urged even more diligence in order to "protect those individuals even from themselves

Planning Spring Home Improvements? Know The Score First

(ARA) - Spring is a popular time to begin home improvement projects, especially if they'll upgrade outdoor living spaces. With the economy keeping more homeowners in place, rather than moving up to bigger, grander digs, improving your home can elevate both your enjoyment and its eventual resale value.

A great home improvement can enhance your enjoyment of your home and its eventual resale value. Even if you choose just the right improvement -- one that makes you love your home even more and will woo potential buyers come selling time -- you may still be frustrated wondering how you'll pay for your project.

Before you dive into your spring home improvement, keep a few points in mind:

Your Finances

First, get your free credit score and report. Any significant home improvement, such as building an addition or turning your backyard into an oasis, is probably going to require you to find financing. Before you make a single phone call to a potential lender, it pays to know your credit score and what is on your credit report. Generally, the higher your credit score, the more leverage you will have to negotiate a good financing deal, including a lower interest rate.

Enrollment in membership based products like FreeCreditReport.com give you access to your free credit report and score, which potential lenders will almost certainly use to determine if you're a good credit risk. You'll be able to see what finance companies see when you look at your credit report, including your payment history and whether there are any errors or other blemishes on your report.

Once you're confident of your credit score, you can evaluate your financing options.

Reverse

Mortgage Topic

Ed Barrett, a reverse mortgage specialist, will discuss his specialty on the first and third Wednesdays of the month at 1 p.m. at the Council on Aging office, 83 Saratoga St., North Quincy. Reverse mortgage is a program offered by the federal government that allows seniors to convert a portion of their home equity into tax free cash.

For an appointment, call Ann Bruce at 617-376-1506.

tions, whether it's a second mortgage, a personal line of credit or a home equity line of credit.

Smart Choices

Some financed home improvement projects pay off more than others in terms of enhancing your home's value and your enjoyment of your house. If you're opting for improvements to your outdoor living spaces, consider ones that will deliver the greatest return for your investment, such as patios, decks or screened porches. In fact, the National Association of Realtors' 2008 Remodeling Cost vs. Value found that outdoor improvements, such as wood decks, continue to recoup 80 percent or more in value upon resale.

Landscaping, it seems, is also popular with potential buyers - a University of Michigan study found that potential buyers scored a well-landscaped home 11.3 percent higher than the same home without good landscaping. The trend for more Americans to stay home and invest in their surroundings, rather than spend on pricey vacations, has spurred interest in grand backyards that evoke the look and experience of a resort. From in-ground pools with water slides to lavishly tiered patios that feature built-in hot tubs, a growing number of homeowners are focusing on outdoor improvements that improve resale value and their current enjoyment of their homes.

Before you make your summer remodeling plans, check your free credit report at www.FreeCreditReport.com. If you plan to sell your home within five years, it might pay to check with your realtor as well to see if he or she can give you an idea of how much your investment might affect the eventual sale price of your home.

First-Time Homebuyer Tax Credit, Energy Efficient Tax Credit Explained

By MADELENE SEMERIA

Calling the current real estate market a "buyers market" is an understatement!

Low interest rates, dropping house prices and most importantly a federal tax credit offered to first time home buyers.

Recent changes in the economic stimulus bill offers first time home buyers a tax credit of up to $8,000, which does not need to be repaid. The original tax credit offered to first time buyers was more of an interest free loan; however recent changes have increased the tax credit as well as lifted the need to repay the money.

I am surprised that more first time home buyers are not taking advantage of this great opportunity.

The tax credit is applicable on the purchase of a primary residence on or after January 1st, 2009 and before December 1st, 2009. The credit is only offered to first time home buyers, which is identified as any purchaser (and purchase's spouse) who has either never owned a property or who has not owned a primary residence in the past 3 years prior to the purchase. This option opens up the opportunity to buyers who may have sold their property in the past and were unable to buy a home in the past few years when prices began to skyrocket. Applying for and receiving the credit is a seamless addition when filing your taxes, since it will simply be claimed on the tax return. It is suggested that first time home buyers consult a tax professional before applying for this tax credit.

While the tax credit available is up to $8,000, or 10% of the home's value, some income limits do apply. For a married couple ple the combined income cannot exceed $150,000 in order to qualify. The availability of this tax credit is an outstanding opportunity for buyers. This additional money can be used to help furnish the new home or to make wanted improvements. First time home buyers should not miss out on their window of opportunity to receive this credit, which is truly a gift.

Current homeowners looking to make energy efficient improvements to their current property may also be eligible for a tax credit. An additional aspect of the stimulus bill includes a tax credit of 30% of the cost of the improvements, not to exceed $1500, for any energy efficient improvements. The type of improvements eligible for this credit include: energy efficient insulation, heating/cooling units, doors and windows. Again, it is recommended that you discuss these items with a tax professional in order to maximize your return.

For more information on the current real estate market or for help buying a home in Quincy, contact Madelene Semeria at (617) 894-1124, or visit her website at www.Ma-HomesForSale.com.

Cleaning Area Rugs

Q: My mother gave me two very nice Oriental rugs for my apartment, which has old pine-board flooring. What's the best way to clean them? Can I steam clean them? - Megan, via e-mail

A: Steam cleaning is not recommended for antique Oriental rugs, for a number of reasons: The threads could be damaged by the water, colorfastness may be an issue and so on. So stay away from the rental steam cleaners in your local supermarket, as they are more suited to wall-to-wall carpets.

Vacuuming is fine for most rugs, though you'll want to set the height of the vacuum about a notch higher than the "carpet" setting on the machine. Vacuuming will pick up dust and small debris and is the best way to keep the rugs clean through the year.

But what if the rugs are really dirty? Pick up a corner of one of the rugs and kick the underside. If a cloud of dirt flies out of the rug, it's time for a more thorough cleaning than a vacuum can provide. At this point, you can either have them cleaned professionally -- something you may want to do if they are really antiques -- or you can clean them yourself, if you have the space to hang them up.

You'll need: a vacuum cleaner, cold water, mild rug shampoo, a soft natural brush and a window squeegee.

Lay the rugs out on a garage floor or clean driveway. Vacuum the top and underside of each rug to remove surface dirt. Fill a pail with water and rug shampoo.

Test one spot on each rug for colorfastness first with the soapy water. If the colors don't run, begin cleaning by dipping the soft brush in the soapy water and brushing in the same direction as the nap. Wet the nap thoroughly. Wash the fringes as well, and brush out dirt.

Rinse the rug thoroughly with cold, running water and squeegee in the direction of the nap until no more water is forced out. Let the rugs dry flat, turning over when the nap feels dry. Once dry, vacuum or brush one last time to fluff out the pile.

HOME TIP: Spot-clean Oriental rugs by adding 1/4 cup white vinegar to two cups cool water; add one squirt of liquid dish detergent and clean the spill or stain with a brush or sponge. The vinegar prevents dyes in the rug from running.

Go Green With Feng Shui

(ARA) - Your home is your oasis; the place you go to relax, regroup and reenergize. If you desire some balance in not only your life but in the world at large, maybe it's time to incorporate the principles of both Feng Shui and green living into your design.

The two concepts are compatible, says Cheryl Amantea, chair of both the Advertising and Fashion & Retail Management degree programs at The New England Institute of Art in Boston. "Feng Shui incorporates plants, sunlight, cleanliness and the elements of running water and circulation of air, so it's not a stretch to put the 'green lifestyle' in with Feng Shui."

"Feng Shui (pronounced feng sch-way) means 'wind water.' It connects what is seen (environment) with what is unseen (energy) -- often referred to as chi (pronounced chee)," says Amantea.

Chi can be found in your color scheme and placement of objects, with each color symbolizing different characteristics. Aply enough, green symbolizes life, growth, vitality and energy. Yellow and earth tones represent health, while blue is symbolic of knowledge and red is used for power.

Placement is key to creating a positive chi. "Picture your home as an octagon," says Amantea. Find the true front door of your home and, according to interior design student Adam Neidlinger at The Art Institute of Indianapolis, ensure air and energy are moving in a steady nurturing manner.

"The flow of the energy or chi through a space can be increased or decreased by the objects being placed in the room," says Neidlinger.

"Wouldn't you rather get energy from a natural, sustainable, green object than from a manufactured, mostly likely chemical-filled object?"

Bamboo is a great element because it is natural, clean and it quickly regenerates itself. Live plants are also important according to Neidlinger. "Plants renew the air which is what carries the energy in a room."

LEED accredited architect and engineer Samuel Hurt who instructs at The Art Institute of Indianapolis agrees with Amantea, but is not exactly sold on Feng Shui as green living. "Personally I'm a bit skeptical about Feng Shui and some of the claims, but that doesn't mean it is a completely useless way to clean up the environment," says Hurt.

Through his teaching of sustainable design and his renowned, sustainable work on buildings in the Midwest, Hurt has become well-versed in the green movement. He believes that if Feng Shui wants to combine with sustainable design, however it is defined, we are all better off.

"If Feng Shui can assist in reducing contamination in the world, then that is fine. And good for anyone else who can advance the same cause, no matter what the particular path may be," says Hurt.

Dr. Peggy Way, adjunct psychology professor at Argosy University, Nashville, considers Feng Shui and green living as a means to promote positive mental health and stress reduction. "Utilize Feng Shui and green living to create a personal space that will help sustain and renew you in the midst of a stressful professional life."

How to Make Any Room Look Bigger

(ARA) - In this economy, few people can afford to knock down walls or put an addition on their homes. However, for considerably less money, any room can appear larger and look better with one or two strategically placed sconces.

"As consumers move from buying new houses to remodeling their existing homes, wall sconces can be an attractive answer to consumers' lighting needs," explains Simone Racine, creative director of Justice Design Group, a California-based lighting manufacturer.

Sconces are lighting fixtures that are mounted to a wall and provide subtle illumination and a warm ambience. "Sconces bring human scale to a room and finish the space," notes Joe Rey-Barreau AIA, IES, CSI, architect, educational consultant for the American Lighting Association (ALA) and professor of interior design at the University of Kentucky.

When many people think of this type of lighting, the first image that may come to mind is a hotel hallway, yet sconces are gaining popularity in sophisticated residences all over the country. Brad Kleinberg, president of Crystorama Lighting Group, a New York-based lighting manufacturer, believes young admirers of the category are drawn to styles inspired by their favorite luxury resorts, hotels and restaurants. "They want what they've seen in Vegas, but scaled down to a residential size," he remarks, noting that styles run the gamut from ornate, splashy looks to cleaner lines with a contemporary feel.

"An upstairs hallway is an excellent application for wall sconces," Rey-Barreau states. "In fact, ADA-compliant models, which are required for commercial installations, are a great choice for homes because they do not extend out from the wall very much. They create a nice, repetitive pattern down a hallway." He advises putting the lighting on a dimmer control where one can use a lower light level to create ambience, and placing fixtures every eight feet for balanced illumination.

"Customers have discovered how useful and beautiful wall sconces can be in almost any room," says Raymond Christensen, an ALA-certified Lighting Specialist, designer, and owner of Ray Lighting + Design Studios LLC in Hartford, Conn. Another unique quality is their ability to expand the look of a space. "Instead of dark corners, which occur when you only have a center light, sconces can illuminate those areas," Christensen explains.

"I also find that many of my customers do not like a lot of recessed lighting. They want softer lighting that can create a mood -- and sconces are much more effective at that than recessed, even if they are dimmed," Christensen says.

Recessed fixtures send light in only one direction, generating strong shadows. Sconces send illumination in many directions, using the wall as a reflector to project light into the room and create warm shadows.

At Vermont-based lighting manufacturer Hubbardton Forge, "We try to create something that looks as good off as when it is lit," notes George Chandler, chief executive officer and chief designer. The result is functional artwork. "You can create a point of interest with a decorative sconce; it can fill a wall." He recalls one homeowner who installed three sconces in a row, vertically, alongside a tall foyer staircase. These sconces served as sculptural accents for the blank surface.

Sconces are also ideal in media rooms, bedrooms, dining rooms, living rooms and bathrooms. "Even though sconces have always been the best choice (for master baths), I am amazed by the number of customers and even professionals -- such as electricians and architects -- who want to use only one or two recessed lights over the sink," Christensen says. Instead of the harsh shadows generated from recessed fixtures, a sconce on either side of the mirror provides direct light on the face, making grooming tasks easier.

What's the best bulb type for a sconce? The answer depends on how you'll be using the fixture. Rey-Barreau points out that only incandescent can be easily and reliably dimmed. If the sconce will be in an area where changing the bulb is difficult, it's best to opt for fluorescent.

Working with an ALA-accredited lighting designer will guarantee results you will love. For more guidance in selecting the perfect sconces for your home, visit a nearby ALA-member lighting showroom. Go to www.AmericanLightingAssoc.com for a list of stores in your neighborhood. ALA lighting showrooms have trained lighting professionals and offer more variety than home centers.

Dollars and sense

Remodel Home With Buyers in Mind

If you're waiting out the housing market before you sell your home, consider using this time to remodel and increase its value. You're likely to find deals not only for the materials, but also in the cost of remodelers looking for work.

Look first to basic fixes you can do yourself. Maintenance items such as loose stair treads, leaky windows and sagging gutters should be first on your remodeling list.

Work with what you have. Sometimes just breaking out a wall between a cramped kitchen and the family room can add to appearance. Older kitchen cabinets can be moved to the basement or garage for more storage. Even new cabinet fronts and upgraded bathroom lighting can add a fresh look, as can new tile in the bathroom or on the kitchen backsplash.

For materials, check the Habitat for Humanity ReStore in your area, recycling centers, freebies like FreeCycle and the free section of craigslist.com, and building-supply stores that are going out of business (check your purchase carefully as you likely won't be able to make a return or get a refund.)

If you're "underwater" (you owe more than your house is worth), a partial remodel can help increase the potential selling price. An additional bedroom in the attic with a bathroom can add significant value, as can a finished basement. Consult with a real estate agent to determine how much value an extensive remodel will add.

Strike a balance between what a new buyer would likely want to see when it's time to sell, and what you can live with should you decide to stay in the house. Beware any customizations that a buyer wouldn't appreciate.

Keep the outside of your home in top shape at all times. Invest in some shrubbery and flower baskets, and keep the lawn mowed and trimmed this summer. You never know who might remember it later or who might talk about that "attractive house" down the street with a "For Sale" sign in the yard.

Do the math before you start. Look online for a remodeling budget estimator to get an idea what your intended project could cost, then check those figures with calls to hardware and supply stores.

"bittersweet" since it was the first time since the award's inception nearly a quarter century ago that his father — Quincy Sun Founder and Publisher Henry Bosworth — was not present to preside over the ceremony.

Mr. Bosworth, a long-time friend of Burke's who had served on the judging panel in January, died suddenly Feb. 7.

"Henry took great pride in honoring recipients of this award and certainly looked forward to this day in recognizing you, George," Robert Bosworth said.

A moment of silence was observed in Henry Bosworth's memory.

Burke said he was deeply touched to receive the honor. "I think it's the highest award I have ever received in my life. I want to thank the committee for selecting me."

Burke also singled out the person who nominated him for the award: Guido "Buddy" Pettinelli. "I want to thank you, Guido. You are one of the dearest friends I've ever had in my life."

Robert Bosworth presented Burke with a plaque adorned with a clock. "The clock is symbolic, George. It represents all the time that you have given to community causes."

He also presented Burke with a companion award: a framed Special Page 1 of The Quincy Sun highlighting the honor. Copies of the page — which also listed the other 33 nominees for the award and the names of the judging panel — were distributed to those attending Sunday's ceremony.

"I am so happy to receive this award," Burke said. "It is just amazing to me. I want to thank everyone who came here today. It means so much to me to see my friends here. I want to thank everyone who spoke; your words were so beautiful and they touched me deeply. You have to remember as you go through life and finally go on your way, there's only thing you can take in the end and that's what you've given away."

In his remarks, Burke fondly remembered his special friendship and unique bond — both personally and professionally — with Mr. Bosworth that spanned more than 50 years.

"I truly loved Henry Bosworth," Burke said. "I think he's one of the finest men I have ever met in my life. He's a man of great integrity and I say that as a reporter and as a person. People talk about what a great Catholic he was going to Saint John's 4 o'clock Mass all the time on Saturday. And he kept himself in great condition walking. He always tried to get me to go with him but I didn't much to my regret."

"I just thought he was going to go on forever. Losing Henry Bosworth has been a tremendous shock to me because I consider him a great friend and a dear person. I never met a man so fair in my life in handing out the stories he did and how he wrote them and how he always tried to be nice to people when writing his column. And I know this man — Robert Bosworth — will carry on the legacy of Henry Bosworth."

Bosworth thanked the judging panel who selected Burke for the honor. Serving on the committee were:

Bette Campbell, director of Quincy Access TV; the Rev. William Harding, pastor of Bethany Congregational Church; Robert Noble, immediate past co-recipient of The Quincy Sun Citizen of the Year Award (along with his wife, Gloria); Maralin Manning, executive director of the Quincy Business Association; and Quincy High School Principal Frank Santoro.

Bosworth also noted there were 33 other nominees for the award. "Like the Academy Awards, we are fond of saying being nominated is an honor in itself and we certainly congratulate all the other nominees."

Burke's journey to make Quincy a better place to live, work and raise a family began in 1959 when he was elected Ward 5 councillor. He went on to become president of the City Council, a state representative and the first Democrat to be elected

"I AM SO happy to receive this award," said Quincy Sun Citizen of the Year George Burke at Sunday's reception at the Quincy Sons of Italy Social Center. Burke is the newspaper's 26th award recipient which recognizes outstanding community service.

Norfolk County district attorney.

It was politics that spawned many special relationships and friendships in his life, Burke recalled.

"Dick Koch convinced me to run for public office. I was still in law school, I was not married, never held public office, and I wasn't a lawyer. I wasn't anything except a law student. I was playing (basketball) with the Koch Club for many years and Dick got me involved with John Kennedy's presidential campaign. And I got enamored of the political life. Frank McAuley can tell you: once it's bitten you, you can't escape it. And I ran for office."

At the time, Quincy Ledger reporter Fred Hunt lived near Burke in Wollaston. "Fred said 'George, I want you to give me all your (press) releases; don't give them to Henry Bosworth.'"

"Well, Henry Bosworth came to me and said, 'George, give me all your releases and don't give them to Fred Hunt.' And I said, 'Fred Hunt's been a friend of mine since I was a young boy. I have to give them to him. Henry said 'Well, we'll have to share them.'"

"That's when my friendship with Henry Bosworth started."

Burke also recounted his historic win for Norfolk County District Attorney which he shared with Henry Bosworth. At the time, Mr. Bosworth was a reporter for the Boston Herald Traveler and was covering the race for Norfolk County District Attorney. He and Burke were together in Burke's Quincy Center campaign headquarters on Election Night.

"I was 20,000 votes down," Burke recalled. "And Henry said to me 'Why are smiling George?'"

"And I said, 'I'm going to be the first Democratic D.A. ever in this county. There's been 200 years of Republican D.A.'s and I'm going to be the first Democrat.'"

"How can you say that when you're 20,000 votes down?" Bosworth asked. "I said: I know figures."

Bosworth then told Burke if he were positive he'd get elected, he said he'd write a headline: First Democratic District Attorney Ever In Norfolk County which he did do.

"Henry stuck his neck out for me and sure enough the votes came in and I won in a landslide," Burke said. "Henry said to me, 'George, I loved that. I scooped everybody.'"

As a district attorney, Burke was known for cracking down on drug abuse and for establishing pioneer drug education classes in state schools.

His community service stretches well — and deep — into many philanthropic causes.

They include:

- Scholarships of $1,000 each to 104 Quincy and North Quincy High School graduates to attend the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, his alma mater.

- $75,000 to the university where he was a star basketball player and earned his nickname "Trigger."

- $25,000 to the South

Shore YMCA for a basketball court.

- $200,000 towards repairs to Saint Ann's School and donations to Saint Ann's Church.

- $40,000 for the George Burke Fitness Center at the new Quincy High School.

He is a 1950 graduate of QHS where he captained the basketball team and is a member of the Hall of Fame.

He also attended Thayer Academy where he was captain of the school's basketball team and is a member of Thayer's Hall of Fame.

Burke has also given freely and frequently to many other worthy causes throughout Quincy.

Among them: Father Bill's Place, Quincy Medical Center, Salvation Army, Germantown Neighborhood Center, Thomas Crane Public Library, Quincy Teen Mothers, Quincy Community Action Programs, Quincy Historical Society, Interfaith Social Services, Boy Scouts and the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

Burke recalled one Labor Day back when Henry Bosworth and Dick Koch, Sr. were co-chairmen of the Quincy-South Shore Jerry Lewis Labor Day Telethon which was held locally in The Quincy Sun office.

In a telephone call, Mr. Bosworth told Burke the committee may not reach its fundraising goal. "I asked Henry, 'what are you short?' And Henry said, 'about $2,600.' I told him I just happened to have $2,600. The headline in The Quincy Sun the next day: Burke Puts Us Over The Top."

"He was always so kind to me on those occasions."

Burke is also regarded for rescuing the Colonel John Quincy silver Tankard, which had been put up for auction in New York City by United First Parish Church, which needed the money for repairs to its historic building.

The tankard is the only known direct link to Colonel Quincy, for whom the city was named. Burke's bid and cost to bring the heirloom back to Quincy was approximately $200,000.

Quincy residents and visitors can see the tankard which is on display in the lobby of new City Hall. The tankard won't be going anywhere, either - Burke has left it to the city in his will.

Burke is a 1956 graduate of UMass-Amherst and a 1959 graduate of Boston College Law School where he was class president.

At UMass, he is in the Hall of Fame. Burke - one of only four players to have their numbers retired - set many basketball scoring records at UMass while wearing the number 32. He held those records until another No. 32 - Julius Erving - broke them. Dr. J went on to a Hall of Fame career in the NBA.

Burke is also in the New England Basketball Hall of Fame, and was a rookie for the Boston Celtics.

A Korean War veteran, and longtime attorney, he is a member of the Quincy Bar Association, the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court and U.S. Supreme Court.

He is a member of the Morrisette American Legion Post and lives in Wollaston with his wife, Sandra. They have been married 50 years and have five children.

Burke introduced his family at the reception and noted his wife couldn't attend because of illness. "But she wanted all of you to know she is with us today in spirit," he added.

A host of elected officials also made presentations to Burke at the reception.

Mayor Tom Koch brought official greetings on behalf of the city while proclaiming Sunday, March 29, 2009 George Burke Day in Quincy. He was joined at the podium by former Mayor Francis McCauley in reading the proclamation which noted Burke has been a "tireless promoter of youth sports" and has "positively influenced the lives of countless young people."

"You've always supported community organizations in Quincy and have been the first to answer residents' needs, lending a helping hand to so many who had no where else to turn. You have impacted the lives of many and you have etched your legacy into the very fabric of our city."

"George is a favorite son of Quincy who just continues to give and give and give. He loves this city and everything he does shows that," the mayor added. State Representatives Bruce Ayers and Steve Tobin presented citations from the House of Representatives and Senate. Sen. Michael Morrissey and Rep. Ron Mariano were unable to attend.

Tobin said:

"You've been someone that I've had fun with but also practiced some law with over the years and having dealt with you personally outside the political context I find you to be every bit the type of guy I'd want to hang out with. You are just a wonderful person and being The Quincy Sun Citizen of the Year is a great tribute. You have earned it."

Ayers said:

"It's a pleasure to be here to recognize you. George has a great legacy: advocating for the values and principles that he believes in; volunteering his time, energy and resources for the many charities that he's involved with. His only motive is helping others with his kindness and generosity. He has dedicated himself to the city he loves. His actions surely should be an example for all of us to show how personal success and gain can be used towards helping others and the betterment of the city."

Two Norfolk County officials, Sheriff Michael Bellotti and DA William Keating, also spoke highly of Burke while presenting citations.

Bellotti said:

"As the world changes, as the city changes, and neighborhoods change, there are fewer and fewer George Burkes. Folks who are here for generations and instill values in the next generation and encourage their kids to stay in the neighborhoods and be an integral part of the success of a community. But that's just a fact of life, the world is changing and we should embrace the new world but as we do that, we need to understand that people like George Burke and Henry Bosworth become so important to a place like Quincy. You're that thread that connects generations and values."

Keating said:

"George has had a legacy of helping people. The things George has done has been helping people for the sake of helping them and to have no recognition for doing that. That legacy continues and we're so grateful."

A commendation from the City Council was presented by City Council President Jay Davis (Ward 4), Councillor John Keenan, Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymond and Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin.

Davis said:

"Your life George has been one of commitment to helping people. I am so proud to call you a friend but more so a mentor. On behalf of a grateful city, on behalf of a grateful City Council, I congratulate you today and your family. This honor is very well deserved."

Coughlin praised Burke by quoting English author Samuel Johnson. "The true measure of a man is how he treats someone who can do him absolutely no good."

"What does that say about you if you treat those well only if they are a benefit to you? Not much, as opposed to treating those well who can provide you nothing in return. . . What truly sets apart the man we honor today is that George Burke, the inner man has always been as good as his public image because they have been synonymous."

"George has been magnificent in his ability to be magnanimous, he has been charitable, courteous, and chivalrous not just when it is convenient, but when it served a purpose far greater than himself."

"He has been a role model for the realization that true men of stature are strong enough in mind and spirit and secure enough in themselves to be compassionate and considerate of others. He is one of the true men of distinction who recognize and respect the dignity of others. He is a man worthy of honor because he consistently honors the worth of others."

"He is outstanding because he has never left anyone standing out in the cold of injustice and insensitivity. He is one of a few good men who have learned to seek the good of others as well as the good within himself. He is indeed a light in dark places because he has always been part of the solution."

Keenan grew up near George Burke in the Wollaston Hill section of the city. "I got to see the other side of George. It is what he and his wife, Sandra – Mr. and Mrs. Burke to us – accomplished with their great family. It was a wonderful place to grow up and what a wonderful job Mr. and Mrs. Burke did with their family bringing them up in this great city and all the while doing so many other things for the community. Congratulations on an honor well deserved." Raymondi said: "There are many people in all our lives who make us better people and of course we can cite our parents, we can cite our relatives, we can cite people we meet along the way George was the individual that I went to for guidance, to seek my first employment opportunity. Without the guidance and the support and all the things that George has done for me I wouldn't be in the place that I am. I would not want to miss this day."

Raymondi also told an amusing story about Burke's athletic ability. "George was an absolutely fantastic student-athlete and basketball player and he showed it each and every Saturday morning at the Quincy Point Junior High School gym and I want to thank George for teaching all of us a lesson of how to lose with dignity."

"George made 90 percent of his shots and the 10 percent he missed of course we fouled him," he said drawing laughs.

Also attending Sunday's reception were members of Henry's Bosworth's family and Quincy Sun staff. Besides Robert Bosworth, also congratulating Burke were Henry Bosworth's wife, Dorothy, his daughter, Donna Gray, the Sun's circulation manager, and her husband, David Gray. A Job Well Done

On Saturday, March 25, 2009, at approximately 2:20 p.m., Officer Stephen Cleary was just finishing a detail in the area of Dunkin' Donuts on Sea Street when he observed a male (suspect #1) standing outside a taxi from another city talking to another male (suspect #2) who was inside his own vehicle. The officer, in his personal vehicle, was able to observe the two males, as they appeared to be in some type of negotiation.

Officer Cleary watched as suspect #1 handed suspect #2 an unknown item, then saw suspect #2 roll up several dollar bills and put a red elastic around them, then give it to suspect #1. Based on the officer's training and experience, he believed a drug transaction just occurred. As Officer Cleary approached the vehicles, suspect #1 got into his taxi and left the parking lot, but not before the officer was able to get the license plate.

Officer Cleary broadcasted that the vehicle was wanted for questioning in a drug deal. The Officer then went to suspect #2's vehicle to question him, but it appeared that he was not in the car. As Officer Cleary approached the car, he found suspect #2 lying in the back seat with a belt wrapped around his right arm and a needle full with what was believed to be Heroin. When suspect #2 saw the officer, he took the needle out, bent the stem and then threw it to the floor by his feet. Officer Cleary removed the suspect from the vehicle and placed him under arrest for possession of Class A Heroin.

In addition to the needle, the Officer found one small plastic bag filled with what he believed to be Heroin. After reading the suspect his rights, suspect #2 stated that he bought one bag of Heroin from the cab driver, but did not know the name of his dealer. Communications was notified that the cab driver was now wanted for distribution of Class A Heroin. Sergeant Steve Igo and Officer Paul Foley searched the general area and stopped the taxi in the 800 block of Sea Street.

Sergeant Igo asked the operator/suspect #1 to step out of the vehicle and explained to him the reason for the stop. He then explained to the suspect that Officer Foley and his K9 were going to search the vehicle for narcotics. The suspect stated that he had a container under his seat containing Heroin.

Officer Cleary arrived on scene, positively id'd suspect #1 and then placed him under arrest for distribution of Class A Heroin. A search of the vehicle produced one cell phone, $427.00 in cash wrapped in a red elastic, one orange plastic snorting device, one police scanner, and one blue Mento container containing three small plastic bags filled with a brown powdery substance believed to be Heroin.

Suspect #1 was given his Miranda Warnings but refused to answer any questions. Suspect #1, a 23-year-old Quincy resident, was charged with "Manufacturing/Distributing Class A Drug, Conspiracy of Controlled Substance Laws, Selling Controlled Substances near a School and Possession of Class A with the Intent to Distribute." Suspect #2, a 53-year-old Quincy resident, was charged with "Possession of Class A Drug and Conspiracy in Violation of Controlled Substance Laws."

Nice Work!

RECENT SCAM RESURFACING: This decade old scam is coming around again, and usually focuses on seniors. A person will randomly call homes looking for someone who will fall for the following story: The caller states that he/she is calling on behalf of the victim's grandchild, who was arrested in Canada. The caller states that the grandparent needs to wire $2,500.00 to a Constable in Toronto so that the grandchild will be released.

This scam has survived the decade because it works enough to be profitable. If you get this call, contact the Police and let us investigate if it is legitimate, which is unlikely.

Another scam coming around again and brought to my attention by Officer Stephen O'Donoghue is the telephone solicitation by people claiming to represent credit card companies. This ruse has the caller asking for the expiration date and the security code (3 numbers) of the card in order to verify a purchase. As always, do not give out any personal information over the phone and if you need to contact your credit card company, call the number listed on the back of your card.

Put These Safety Tips In Your Easter Bonnet

There was a time when the most dangerous part of Easter was making your son wear those scratchy grayannelled trousers. These days there are other worries, and according to some child safety experts, parents would be well advised to become...well, egg-sperits before making some Easter plans.

"Eggs are a big part of our kids' Easter traditions, but they also come with some inherent risks," says Linda DeRose-Droubay, director of Safety and Quality Compliance at The Children's Group, Inc., publisher of popular children's catalogs HearthSong® and Magic Cabin®.

"There are some common sense measures that parents can take to make sure Easter stays fun for everyone."

She offers up these tips for Moms and Dads:

- Always buy eggs from a refrigerated case and keep them refrigerated before you boil them in preparation for decorating. Be sure to check the "Sell by" dates.

- When you boil your eggs, make sure the water is hot (185-190 degrees F). Cool your eggs in cold water or allow cooling slowly at room temperature.

- When shell eggs are hard-cooked, the protective coating is washed away, leaving open pores in the shell where harmful bacteria could enter. Be sure to refrigerate eggs within two hours of cooking and use them within a week.

- Don't eat or cook with cracked eggs or eggs that have been un-refrigerated for more than two hours.

- If you plan to eat the Easter eggs you decorate, be sure to use only food grade dye. (Some people make two sets of eggs - one for decorating and hiding, another for eating.)

- Make sure to wash (and re-wash) your hands, utensils, and work surfaces to keep bacteria from spreading.

- Hide eggs in places that are protected from dirt, pets, and other bacteria sources.

- Limit the hiding and hunting time for real eggs to two hours. Refrigerate them immediately if they are to be eaten.

- Eggs found hours later or the next day should be thrown out — not eaten!

- Consider using plastic eggs instead of real eggs for Easter egg hunts.

On the hiding front, DeRose-Droubay offers these words of caution:

- Remember to avoid hiding places near tempting electrical outlets or plugs.

- Keep eggs at or below eye level of younger children.

- Do not hide eggs in cupboard or drawers with dangerous products.

- Do not hide eggs in, on, or under grass.

- Do not hide eggs in pre-existing holes in the ground or trees.

- Do not hide eggs in any foliage that has thorns, looks potentially dangerous or poisonous (If you don't know the name of the foliage, don't put an egg in it!)

- Do not hide eggs in any animal's home, food bowl or play area.

- Do not hide eggs where pesticides or poisons have recently been sprayed.

- Do not hide eggs in tool sheds.

- Keep count and track of the eggs you hide.

To Your Good Health

by Paul G. Donohue, M.D.

Be Still, My Racing Heart

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: During the night and mostly early in the morning hours, my heart speeds up to 200 beats a minute. There is no pain, but it wakes me up and seems to happen if I am lying facedown. I sit up and take my pulse, which is about 70 to 72. I feel my heart slowly return to normal in two to three minutes. I have worn a Holter monitor for 24 hours.

My doctor says not to worry about it. Do you think I have anything to worry about? — S.

ANSWER: For readers: A Holter monitor is a device worn externally that records all heartbeats in a given time period. They can be worn for three or more days. The doctor sees on the recording what kind of abnormal heartbeats occurred.

I have to clear something up with you, S. Is your pulse 72 beats a minute when you feel your heart beating fast? The heartbeat and the pulse are one and the same. How are you counting your heartbeat?

If the episodes occurred while you were being monitored and did not last long, then the doctor can dismiss it as not being worrisome. He should name the rhythm; ask what it is.

If the fast heartbeats occurred at times you weren't wearing the monitor, you need to wear it longer so that the rhythm can be identified for what it is.

The booklet on heartbeat irregularities describes the more common kinds of these beats and how they are treated. Readers can order a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue -- No. 107W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Canada with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: None of my 21 grandchildren has had their tonsils out. All of my seven children did. Is this no longer done? I wish doctors would make up their minds about these things. — B.B.

ANSWER: When your children were young, it was almost standard practice to remove tonsils as a way to protect against strep throat. We now know this isn't necessary, and we now have antibiotics to treat strep throat.

Children who have repeated strep throat infections still have their tonsils removed, but the operation is no longer done for prevention.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My husband and I take Lipitor. We take it before dinner in the evening. We eat half a grapefruit after breakfast. Is that OK? — M.L.

ANSWER: You can take Lipitor any time of the day, and you can take it with or without food. It's one of the statin drugs -- the drugs that are such effective cholesterol-lowerers.

Grapefruit and Lipitor are not a good combination. Grapefruit can increase the blood concentration of this drug. It does the same with a few other medicines. This effect of grapefruit lasts for 24 hours, so even taking 12 hours pass before taking the drug after eating grapefruit doesn't lessen the chance of this interaction occurring.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Milton Hospital Launches Medical Nutrition Therapy Program

Milton Hospital, a clinical affiliate of Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center providing community-based health care, announces its comprehensive outpatient nutrition program offering one-on-one or group nutritional assessment and counseling to help patients understand how food and nutrition affect total health and well-being.

Scammers Target the Elderly

With the economy slowing down the way it has, it's no wonder some people are a desperate for money. Unfortunately, some of them are perpetuating scams on seniors.

Also unfortunately, it's not always easy to tell when you're faced with a scam.

Sometimes the fraud involves getting you to help scammers move money out of a war-torn country, and "you" are the one they've picked to trust with their millions. Of course, to show good faith, you need to send them money first.

Rule of thumb: Anytime a stranger wants you to do anything involving cashing checks or accessing your bank accounts, it's a scam.

Then there's the scam that tries to get you upset about a grandchild. You get a phone call, and the person at the other end says, "This is your grandson. I'm in trouble. Don't tell my parents." The hope is that you won't bother to verify that it really is your grandchild, and that you'll immediately rush down to wire funds to bail him out of his problem.

Rule of thumb: Verify, verify, verify. Don't send a dime until you do.

One scam that's especially sneaky and plays on our wish to be good citizens is about jury duty. You'll get a call saying you're about to be arrested for failing to show up for jury duty. When you say that you never got the notice to appear, you'll be asked to give your Social Security number and date of birth so your name can be verified on the list. Don't do it. The instant you give that information, you're in line to become a victim of identity theft.

Rule of thumb: Nobody in the court system is going to ask you for that information or intimidate you about jury duty.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

BABY STEPS

Because a child's teeth begin forming under the gums even before he or she is born, pregnant women can get their children's teeth off to a healthy start by adopting a nutritious diet. A child's first tooth generally breaks through the gums at 5-6 months of age, but this can vary considerably. Some children already have a tooth when they are born, in which case the tooth may be an extra (supernumerary) one. This should prompt an examination by the dentist. Regardless of when teeth begin appearing, bear in mind that the "baby" teeth are important. Primary teeth help with chewing and speaking clearly. They also obtain space for the permanent teeth, which begin erupting around 5-6 years of age.

As a parent, you make decisions all the time about the well-being of your child -- from what foods to prepare to how much television is allowed and when to go to bed. Choosing a dentist is just one of the many important decisions you'll make. Your child should see the dentist by the time they get their first tooth or turn 1. We emphasize brushing and flossing daily, along with regular oral health check-ups. We would like to stress the importance of regular dental checkups. If you would like more information or an appointment, call 617-479-6220. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we're currently accepting new patients. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Some children may not get their first tooth until after one year of age.

Fontbonne Iced W-H/Pembroke, 3-0, To Win Division II State Championship Quincy's Taylor Shepherd Comes Up Huge

By SEAN BRENNAN

Only a sophomore, Squantum resident Taylor Shepherd was a major piece of the puzzle for Fontbonne Academy's MIAA Girls Hockey Division II State Championship team.

Shepherd and her Ducks steamed through the post-season; Fontbonne knocked off Boston Latin Academy 3-0 in the opening round, defeated Notre Dame of Hingham, 4-0, in the second-round, shutout Duxbury HS, 3-0, in the semifinals and earned the state title with a 3-0 victory over Whitman-Hanson/Pembroke. And it was a Shepherd's scoring touch that led the way.

In the semifinals against Duxbury, Shepherd collected three goals and she followed that up with another three-goal effort in the finals versus W-H/Pembroke, including two goals in the game's first seven minutes. In four post-season games, Shepherd scored eight times (Fontbonne outscored their opponents 13-0) and for the season, she tallied 34 goals.

A deft scorer, it is Shepherd's all-around game that impresses her head coach the most.

"Taylor is the ultimate team-based player," Ducks coach Bob Huxley said about his star sophomore. "She scores a lot of goals for us, but she is also a strong back and fore-checker, she plays hard when we are short-handed and she is a strong penalty killer."

"She is a very unselfish player who should continue to be a leader for us moving forward. Looking ahead to next season, we return 17 players, and if this team continues to buy into the team concept we have in place and if they continue to work on all aspects of their games, including on the offensive and defensive side of the ice, we should be back in contention next winter."

"And Taylor, and the type of player she is, should be a big part of Fontbonne's future success on the ice."

For Shepherd, her hockey journey began at a young age on the street hockey courts of Squantum. Playing against mostly boys older than her, she switched to the ice around the age of seven and continued to play mainly with boys until the age of eleven.

"My Mom-actually grew up in the house we live in now. She likes to call herself a Squantum-ite, someone who grew up there and raised their kids there, too."

TAYLOR SHEPHERD

Shepherd said. "When I was younger we had the street hockey courts right down the street and we would play in the summer and winter and in summer we would play from nine in the morning till nine at night. And I always played with the boys because none of the girls played hockey, it wasn't the thing to do."

"Then I switched to ice hockey when I was about seven (playing in QYH) and then at eleven I switched to playing with girls and then after that I went to an elite team, the Lady Terriers, out of Boston."

Shepherd's decision to attend Fontbonne Academy was one she made while in the seventh grade. It was a choice based on, not just hockey, but academics and the environment, which the school provided.

"When I was in seventh grade I started thinking about going to Fontbonne," Shepherd added. "I knew I loved it the first time I visited. I saw a couple of their hockey games in the eighth grade but it was the closeness of the school that I loved first. Being here for two years, I love how the teachers and students are so close; it feels like we are all united as one big family."

"I don't just play hockey. I also play volleyball and softball and I am involved in Spirit Committee and I am getting inducted into the French National Honor Society in April."

As a student/athlete who loves her school, helping Fontbonne to a second state title this decade (the Ducks captured the Division I crown in 2001) was the icing on an incredible season. Fontbonne finished the winter with an 18-4-2 record, but it was those last four games that matter the most to Shepherd and her teammates.

"We always played well when we needed to this season and it showed when we got to the post-season," she said. "Sometimes we played down to the competition, and that killed us, but the games we lost were by only one or two goals. We were a close team this year and everything was team-based."

"We have a young team (only three seniors will graduate this June) coming back next year, but we do have a lot of juniors and after next year losing them could be a big deal. But we also have some strong sophomores and freshmen and they should be able to carry us through in the next couple of seasons."

A humble, team player, Shepherd's individual achievement this year, and especially her performance in the state tournament, still deserves recognition. She was a force. Seemingly scoring at will when it mattered most. The Ducks' motto all year was "20 hearts; one beat," and Shepherd, you could say, was the beat that kept her team's heart alive.

"It just clicked (speaking of her play in the tournament)," Shepherd said. "My line mates and myself just played well. My line of Bridget O'Brien and Kaighla Ridge and myself were scoring the majority of the goals and we knew in the playoffs we had to step up. But the whole team, from our defense to our balanced offense, played great all four games. And Kristin Connors, our goalie, was outstanding."

Fontbonne, in the finals, had only eight shots on goal. Shepherd made sure all of hers counted; she scored on a deflected shot, on a short-handed breakaway on the penalty kill and she put the game away with a third period tally by utilizing her speed.

"The first one was kind of a scramble in front of the net. I kicked it over to my stick and then around her blocker side," said Shepherd. "The second was on the penalty kill. Bridget chipped it out on her backhand and it went right to me, which was nice, and the third goal was on a breakaway and the defense just played me wrong."

"But it was not just me," Shepherd humbly added. "We had a really strong defensive team and we were never behind in the tournament. We went out and got our goals and then played defense. That is what really won us the title."

For Shepherd and the rest of the Ducks, the path to a state championship began months beforehand. It may have culminated with the 3-0 win over W-H/Pembroke at the TD Banknorth Garden, but it all started back in the late fall.

"Coming out of tryouts from the first day I knew we were going to be good," said Shepherd. "I think we knew we had a chance. Last year we went .500 and lost in the first-round of the playoffs. And this year we made it all the way."

"The last couple of seconds in the finals there was an icing call that stopped play and I looked up to the scoreboard and, even though I knew we had it, I was nervous. But when I heard that final buzzer I just went in for the hug. It was just nice to finally win it."

Shepherd, who is quick to deflect attention away from what she has accomplished, credited not only her teammates, but also the rest of the Fontbonne student body, including teachers and administrators for their die-hard support of her team.

"Through all the playoff games more and more students and teachers came

The atmosphere of 'Lets Go Fontbonne. Lets Go Ducks,' it kind of brought the girls together and the teachers together and it seemed to bring the school together. Some teachers came to the game down in Bourne (the semifinals against Duxbury), and I think we had our biggest crowd at that game. It was great to have the whole school community behind us."

The good news for fans of the Ducks' ice hockey program is that Taylor Shepherd and her 17 returning teammates will be back next winter to defend their title, the bad news for the rest of the Division II field is that Shepherd and her team should be even better.

"I can't wait to get back on the ice," Shepherd said. "Our goal is defend our title and bring another state championship back to Fontbonne. I want to experience that feeling of winning another state title before I leave high school."

QUINCY'S TAYLOR SHEPHERD scored eight goals in four post-season games.

Season Begins This Week

Depth, Talent Expected To Carry NQ This Spring

By SEAN BRENNAN

The 2009 North Quincy Red Raiders are loaded. The team returns nine seniors; six juniors and a sophomore to a team that last year finished the season with a 9-11 record. And with the pitching, offense and defensive depth on the roster, Year Two of the head coach John Fidalgo era should be very successful.

"We (coaching staff) are very excited about the upcoming season," said Fidalgo last week. "We return a number of starters with lots of game experience and with another year in our system this team is ready to be very successful and win games. We have built a very balanced team."

"Our pitching staff is three-deep with quality starters, our bullpen should also be a strength and our offense is strong. Across the board this team is a lot better and having been in the system now for two years, these kids know what to expect from us and what we expect of them."

Team captain Joe Vialpando (CF) heads an impressive senior class. According to Fidalgo, Vialpando is the team's best all-around hitter and will bat leadoff and act as the team's offensive catalyst.

"Joe is our best hitter and we are penciling him in at leadoff. He will be called on to set the table for our big bats."

Joining Vialpando on the roster are seniors Joe Edgerly, Frank Flora, Matt Jay, Ben Leahy, Matt Rodriguez, Danny Russell, Paul Reardon and LaMonte Toombs.

"These seniors are the key to us having the year we are expecting," added Fidalgo. "Edgerly will be one of our top starting pitchers, Rodriguez, our starting catcher, and Matt Jay are going to be counted on to drive in runs."

"Ben Leahy and Danny Russell will pitch out of the bullpen and with them backing up our starters, the pitching staff should be much improved this year."

Beyond the seniors, the Red Raiders have a junior class that can match up with any team in the area. John Ainsley, Ryan Louis, Mike Medeiros, Keith Morreale, Brian Donaghey and Devon Hudson not only have the talent to start on most high school teams, but they provide North Quincy with a solid bench and a bright future.

"These juniors are good," said Fidalgo. "Louis looks like he will be our #2 starter and our starting third baseman, while Morreale will be our #1 ace pitcher. John Ainsley may fit into the second hole in the batting order and Donaghey, Medeiros and Hudson will all see considerable playing time."

The lone sophomore on the team is Colin Ryan. Ryan, who will play shortstop and bat at the top of the Raiders' lineup, is a future star. His presence gives Fidalgo even more options when it comes to filling out the lineup card.

North Quincy, which played last year in the Atlantic Coast League (ACL), moves into the Patriot League this spring. The move helps to eliminate some of the long road trips associated with ACL play, but if anything, it puts North into a more competitive league.

"Across the board it looks like every team is going to eliminate some of the long road trips associated with ACL play, but if anything, it puts North into a more competitive league."

"The team's non-league schedule is also cupcake free. Fidalgo has scheduled his team against serious competition. A home-and-away slate versus Brockton High School opens the year and an April 20 matchup with Weymouth High School should give him an idea of where the team is just weeks into the season."

"I purposely scheduled some tough non-league games. It is the best way to see what kind of team we have," Fidalgo said. "Brockton is a powerhouse and Weymouth, in my opinion, could be the best team on the South Shore. These games are going to be a challenge, but not a challenge we can't overcome."

When Fidalgo was hired to coach the Red Raiders last year he wanted to get North Quincy back to baseball prominence, and entering his second season on the bench, he sees that progress being made at a rapid pace.

"Certainly with another year under our belts we are starting to see our system take shape. Things like practice management, game preparation and what works and what doesn't; what makes these kids tick, are all coming into focus."

"All of my players have a interest in baseball, but I want them to play as many different sports as they like. It helps prepare them for the baseball season and keeps them in shape. My goal was to change the atmosphere around the program and we are getting there."

"Our jayvee and freshmen teams are also loaded with talent, so the program should continue to be very successful in the coming years."

Fidalgo coaching staff includes Josh Powell, Bob Denise, Jason Alonzi and Jason Fidalgo.

North opens the season today, (Wed.), on the road, against Brockton HS. First pitch is at 3:30 p.m. The team's next home game at Adams Field will be held April 8 versus Randolph HS. First pitch is at 3:30 p.m.

Quincy Pediatric Dental Wins QYA Mite Jamboree

Quincy Pediatric Dental used a four-game winning streak to capture the championship of the Quincy Youth Hockey Mite Jamboree, which was held the weekend of March 22-23 at the Quincy Youth Arena.

The team lost its first game of the jamboree to Joe Finn, but bounced back and recorded four victories in a row to earn the title.

In the team's first game against Joe Finn, a 5-3 loss, goalie Tommy Feeney's performance kept the game close. Forward Johnny Quinn scored two goals (he finished the tournament with 15) and Anthony Rizzatano scored once, but Quincy Pediatric could not convert on numerous breakaways and solid passing, and lost by a three-goal margin.

The team rebounded with a nail-biting 6-5 victory over Doran and Horrigan in its second game. Quincy Pediatric jumped out to a 3-0 lead. After Will Scola (goal) and Quinn (three goals) put Quincy Pediatric up 4-1, Doran and Horrigan fought back and went up 5-4 with only four minutes left in regulation. With three minutes to go in the game, Mikey Adamson was called on to take a penalty shot and he cashed in to tie the score at 5-5.

The game-winning tally came off the blade of Hannah Bell. Bell danced her way to the net with 38 seconds left and scored. Final score: 6-5, Quincy Pediatric.

In the team's third game of the jamboree, Quincy Pediatric knocked off Rep. Bruce Ayers, 6-2. Quinn continued his rapid scoring pace. He accounted for four goals, while Will Scola (goal), Carly McMorow (goal) and Nicole Page all played solid games. The team's second and third lines played smart hockey all game long.

The team's semifinal game was a rematch against Joe Finn. Quincy Pediatric, behind the goaltending of Feeney, advanced to the championship game on the strength of a 5-2 victory.

Quincy Pediatric, which lost to Joe Finn in the 2008 championship game, got the first goal of the game from Kaitlyn Fox to go up 1-0. Other players scoring against Joe Finn included Quinn (hat trick) and W. Scola (goal). Playing well for Quincy Pediatric were Kevy Feeney, Thomas Page, Jake LaMonica and Coleman Gillis.

In the finals, Quincy Pediatric Dental went up against Paul Harold Club and won 5-2. The team sported red face paint to get them pumped for the big game and all of the team's lines came ready to play. The defense kept the puck in the Paul Harold zone for most of the game and the team's offense never let up.

Quinn finished with another hat trick and Anthony Rizzatano and Will Scola scored a goal apiece. Carly McMorow, Hannah Bell, Nicole Page, Eamonn Mayo, John Riley, Matt McDonough, Kaitlyn Fox and Mikey Adamson all played well.

"The kids continued to improve each practice, each game and each challenge," said coaches Tony Scola and Steve Fox. "We are very proud of them for their hard work, attitude and abilities. They played as a team and did what we told them to do."

"We congratulate all the Mite teams in the Jamboree. Every game was hard fought. It was a great year for Quincy Mite Hockey!"

Sheriff's Summer Youth Academies Canceled Due to Budget Shortfall

Due to a severe budget shortfall, Norfolk County Sheriff Michael G. Bellotti has been forced to cancel his popular youth leadership academies for the coming summer.

Nearly 1,000 kids between the ages of 10 and 14 attended the Youth Leadership Academy and the Future Captains Basketball Academy last summer at the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office Braintree Public Safety Complex.

"This was a difficult decision, but we really had no choice," Bellotti said. "The budget for the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office has decreased 17% this year. Something had to give. We could not justify running the academies this summer when we already are being forced to reduce our staff and make painful cuts in other areas of the Sheriff's Office."

Bellotti said the decision to cancel the academies was even more difficult because of their immense popularity among Norfolk County kids and their parents.

"We fill the slots for these academies on a first-come-first-serve basis, and we've had people on waiting lists since last summer. I know those people are disappointed. I am disappointed as well. We take great pride in the character-building programs we have developed for these academies," said Bellotti.

The Youth Leadership Academy uses an aerial ropes course to reach team building, problem solving, patience, trust, planning, leadership and listening skills.

The Future Captains Basketball Academy emphasizes leadership traits and skills that lead to players becoming team captains.

The academies resumed last summer after a one-year absence in 2007 due again to budget constraints. But the reverberations from the national economic recession have made this year's budget shortfall even more severe.

"We understand that we are not alone, that all levels of government are feeling a budget crunch," Bellotti added. "Our people are working twice as hard to carry out our core mission of running the Norfolk County Jail and Correctional Center."

Half of Massachusetts' county sheriffs—including the Norfolk County Office—rely on an archaic funding formula that depends in large part on revenue from the real estate deeds excise tax, which is a fee paid on real estate transactions. As a result of the slumping real estate market, deeds excise tax revenue has decreased drastically.

Bellotti and other Sheriffs who work under this old funding formula have been advocating on Beacon Hill for legislation to move those Sheriff's Offices onto the state budget so that funding is more predictable.

Seven other county Sheriffs already are funded through the state budget.

Also after 22 games, LeBel leads the University of Rhode Island in batting average (.377) and stolen bases (seven). He is currently second on the team in hits (29) and on-base percentage (.435). LeBel has already hit three home runs and has a .545 slugging percentage. He has a ten-game hitting streak, which started against perennial powerhouse Cal State Fullerton.

Folino and LeBel will play each other on April 22 at 3:30 p.m. at URI.

Passover Seder April 9 At Community United Methodist church

Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston, will hold a Passover Seder Supper Thursday, April 9.

This is the fourth year the church will be holding this model Seder.

"I think it's very important for Christians to understand the Jewish roots of our faith, and thought that a Seder would help us appreciate Judaism more," said the Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, church pastor.

To ensure that the table is set properly, reservations are required.

Easter Vigil Worship Service At United Methodist Church

Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston, will celebrate the Easter Vigil on Saturday, April 11 at 7:30 p.m.

"One phrase can sum up this powerful service," said the Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, church pastor, "and that is, 'expect the unexpected.' In a very heart-felt way, the Vigil proclaims the hope and promise of Easter."

Dating from the earliest years of the Christian Church, the Easter Vigil is a service unlike any other, literally leading the congregation from Lent to Easter. It does so through word, song, and, most importantly, symbols that refer to Scripture. Because many people today are unfamiliar with symbolic interpretation, explanatory notes are provided in the text of the Vigil Service.

Rev. Dr. Jarek-Glidden has also updated the ancient service somewhat, so that is "speaks" to today's Christians.

Everyone attending the Vigil is requested to bring a flashlight - an updated and safer version of the traditional candles. Some extra flashlights will be available.

People are also asked to wear comfortable walking shoes. "Some walking is involved in the Vigil, but Quincy Community United Methodist Church has made provisions for those who can't walk far. If you can walk up and down a flight of stairs, you'll be fine," the Rev. Dr. Jarek-Glidden said.

For more information, call the church office at 617-773-3319.

The church is handicapped accessible; the handicapped entrance is located at the front, the door closest to the flag pole.

Palm Sunday Service At Community United Methodist

The most important week of the Christian Church's year, Holy Week, will begin with a special Palm Sunday service at Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston.

The service, which will begin at 10:30 a.m., will open with the traditional scripture reading. Later in the service, the palms will be given to the congregation.

The service will continue with Scripture lessons, hymns, and the dispersal of palms. It will conclude with a ceremony that is traditionally a part of the Maundy (Holy) Thursday worship service: the stripping of the altar. In this ceremony, which symbolically depicts the Passion, all candles, flowers, altar cloths, and even the Bible are removed from the altar area. The congregation will be invited to participate.

Seminar For Ushers Tonight At United Methodist Church

Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston, will offer an ushers' seminar tonight (Thursday) at 7:30 p.m.

"At Quincy Community United Methodist Church, the ministry of hospitality is taken very seriously," Dr. Jarek-Glidden said. "Everyone who walks through the doors is greeted as if that person were Christ walking through the doors. People here are welcomed as they are and wherever they may be on their journey of faith."

At Quincy Community United Methodist Church, as at most other houses of worship, the ushers are the first people someone meets.

"That means it's the ushers who set the tone for the entire experience," Dr. Jarek-Glidden said. "Quincy Community United Methodist is fortunate to have a very dedicated team of ushers; however, Quincy Community always tries to improve and grow its many ministries."

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

SCOTT DEWARE

Are you a friend? It does not take a special gift. It takes a special grace – the grace of kindness.

A good talk with a close friend can solve problems, or at least put them in perspective before they become overpowering. One of the problems we face in our hectic, moving-about-society is a scarcity of true friends...

Let's think about friendship... A friend is one who is kind, patient and loving enough to listen to what bothers us. A friend is one who does not look upon us because we feel discouraged or mixed up. A friend listens and hears the need we, ourselves, have difficulty understanding. A friend is one who, simply by letting us share, helps us hear our own words so that we gain a better perspective.

How often have we said to a friend who listened: "You have been such a real help. Thanks a lot." After reflecting, we remind ourselves that our friend had just listened, not only with the ears, but with the heart, and hardly said a word. Yet we were refreshed and encouraged...

Yes, friendship need not be a scarcity to those who truly want to be friendly...

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Putting yourself in someone else's shoes isn't easy for you. But if you do it, you'll gain a better perspective of what you need to do to achieve your goals. Be open to new ideas.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) There are still some problems you might have to deal with before moving on to your next project. It's a good idea to accept help from those who share your objectives.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) It's time to recognize the difference between those who are truly concerned for you and those who simply plan to use your good nature to their advantage. New ideas become increasingly attractive.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Depending on a promise made becoming a promise kept could be more than a mite unwise at this time. It's best to proceed on your own rather than wait for aid that might never arrive.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A recently revitalized relationship might not be quite what the Big Cat expected. But give yourself more time to deal with the changes. A little flexibility can go a long way. Good luck.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A major change could prompt more adjustments. Some of them might be difficult to deal with at first. But hang in there, and before you know it, you'll be coasting to your next goal.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your sense of justice prompts you to speak out against an unfair situation, even if you seem to be the only one who feels that way. But you soon learn that many others agree with you.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Creating a fuss is not usually your style. But that doesn't mean you should tolerate an ill-mannered attitude. Speak up for yourself, and you'll earn the respect of others.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You might have a few loose ends to tie up before you can stamp your project as complete. But once that's done, you might want to celebrate with someone special in your life.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Disappointment darkens the Goat's mood. But close friends rally to pull you through with words of encouragement. Use their confidence in you to rebuild your own self-esteem.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) An upcoming decision might be more difficult with inaccurate information. Best to recheck the data you have at hand right now to be sure it won't mislead you later.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) An offer you previously turned down might no longer be available. But if you do some checking around, you could find something else that would suit you just fine.

BORN THIS WEEK: You believe in helping those who cannot help themselves. Although it embarrasses you, the fact is, people like you and tell you so.

Civil Service Rules: Fire Chief Process Legit

The state Civil Service Commission has ruled that the city acted appropriately when it started a fresh selection process for a new Fire Chief after three of four candidates who originally signed to accept the job decided they would not take it if appointed last fall.

The city called for a new exam when three candidates, two in writing, backed out, leaving only one potential choice to replace retired Chief Timothy Pettinelli. Civil Service rules dictate that the city have at least three candidates to choose from.

The move prompted an appeal by Deputy Fire Chief Gary Smyth, who claimed that he was illegally bypassed for the job when the city declared a short list and restarted the selection process by calling for the new exam. The Commission dismissed Smyth's appeal, writing in its decision that "accepting the Appellants' argument on this point would be contrary to the plain language of the statute and would defy common sense and logic."

"I believed a clean slate was the fairest way to handle it when we called for the new exam in the fall, and I am pleased that the Civil Service has agreed with our position," said Mayor Thomas Koch. "As we said from the beginning, this will be a thorough and fair process guided by Civil Service rules, and I am looking forward to naming a chief whose priorities are the safety of our city and the safety of the firefighters under his command."

For Concourse Project; Hancock Street To Remain Open Quincy Fair Mall To Fall By June 1

By LAURA GRIFFIN

The bids are in and have been awarded for the final demolitions needed for the Concourse.

Demolitions are now being scheduled and crews will level three Quincy Center buildings by June 1st, according to Nick Verenis, the city's Economic Development Planner.

"The demolition is coming in phases," said Verenis, adding that he does not expect any disruption to businesses in Quincy Center during the process.

"Hancock Street will stay open," said Verenis, explaining that the crews will use the former Kincaide's lot at 148 Parkingway for a staging area.

The massive Quincy Fair Mall at 1563-1597 Hancock St. will disappear by the end of May or June 1st at the latest, according to Verenis.

Verenis said the mall demolition will complete the final phase of demolitions scheduled for the Concourse project and could, actually, begin much earlier in May.

Prior to the mall demolition, crews will raze the buildings located at 1586 Hancock St. and 14 Revere Rd. These are scheduled to be cleared before the end of April, according to Verenis.

The Hancock Street property was once home to Bernie's Formal Wear and, more recently, to Alba's Restaurant.

Quincy Fair Mall formerly housed the Registry of Motor Vehicles, several theaters, restaurants, a fitness center and businesses.

Last May, Mayor Thomas Koch issued an eminent domain land-taking for the building and 10% of the land for a purchase price of $2,010,000. The owner of record is Messina Quin-

Inspector Finds 8 Illegal Apartments

By TOM HENSHAW

Building Inspector Jay Duca has received 45 complaints of illegal housing since a West Quincy basement apartment fire killed three -- but thus far only eight have panned out.

Oudah Frawi and his sons, Ali Oudah, 1, and Hassan, 2 months, perished in the blaze, and his wife, Terri Knight, remained in a coma Tuesday in Massachusetts General Hospital.

Of the 45 complaints, only 15 had been inspected as of Tuesday afternoon.

State fire marshals are waiting for Knight to regain consciousness to complete an investigation and Norfolk County District Attorney William Keating is waiting on the results of the fire marshal's probe before deciding whether to charge the owners, Xiu Ma and Andy Huang.

The dwelling at 100 Robertson St. was ruled in violation of the city's building code since it had six apartments in a building authorized for four.

Duca said some of the illegal apartments have been ordered evacuated while others have been ruled safe and given a chance to be upgraded to legal residences.

The owners are given 30 days to comply, after which an evacuation is filed in Quincy District Court.

"We encourage the landlord to find alternative housing for renters who are dispossessed," said Duca.

Silent Moment For Mary Gillon

The City Council rose for a moment of silence Monday night for Mary E. (Caulfield) Gillon of Norwood, wife of Traffic Engineer John "Jack" Gillon, who died last week.

Her friends were asked to omit flowers and make a donation to the Caritas Good Samaritan Hospital, 3 Edgewater Drive, Norwood, MA 02062.

DEMOLITION will begin soon for Phase 2 of the Concourse Project, according to Nick Verenis, the city's Economic Development Planner. Verenis expects the Quincy Fair Mall building and the former Bernie's Formal Wear in Quincy Center to be razed by June 1.

cy Fair Properties, LLP of Braintree.

Verenis said the low bidder for both the Quincy Fair Mall and 1586 Hancock Street demolitions was Patriot Hauling Co. at $680,000 and $123,010 respectively.

The low bidder for 14 Revere Rd. was Dowling

Corp. at $31,940.

The building demolitions will clear the way for Phase 2 of the city's Concourse Project, the 4/5th of a mile bypass intended to relieve traffic congestion in Quincy Center.

The Concourse will skirt Quincy Center and allow a single four-lane East-West roadway from Granite Street to Southern Artery with direct access to Burgin Parkway.

Phase 2 involves the 2000 feet of anticipated roadway from Burgin Parkway to McGrath Highway with minor improvements on Hancock, Elm and Mechanic Streets.

All Concourse landtaking were needed for Phase 2.

Verenis expects the bids for the roadway work on Phase 2 to be opened in July and the entire project to be completed by Sept., 2010.

Phase 3 which involves resurfacing and utility work on McGrath Highway should be completed by Jan. 2010, according to Verenis.

Verenis expects the entire Concourse to be completed by Sept. 2010.

Councillors Postpone Action, Will Resume Public Hearing May 4

C-Mart Attorney Charges Bias In Special Permit Process

Attorney Christopher Harrington has charged that racial and ethnic bias stalled and negatively impacted the application process for a C-Mart Supermarket in North Quincy.

The supermarket proposed for the former Boston Gear Works site would cater to the Asian community which includes roughly 30% to 40% of North Quincy's residents.

Councillors postponed action on the request Monday and will resume the hearing on May 4 meeting. They will not accept new documents on the subject after April 22.

In an April 4 letter, Harrington stated, "...these proceedings have already been tainted by illegitimate and illegal considerations that violate the applicant's and its prospective customers' civil rights..."

After citing a 1996 case, Harrington warned that the council's decisions are "not immune from civil rights claim..."

Harrington letter was one of three documents given to councillors just days and, in one case, two to three hours before the councillors met Monday as the Special Permit Granting Authority to review C-Mart's application.

Councillors, also, received a new traffic review from Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon and a letter from Glenn Frank, the Boston attorney for Super 88 Supermarkets which, also, serves the Asian community.

A Super 88 was formerly located adjacent to St. Ann's Church, Hancock Street, Wollaston and Frank wrote that the company had filed for a Building Permit on April 3 and "...we will be reopening the store within a short time period..."

Harrington hand-delivered his letter to the councillors on Saturday prior to the meeting.

In the letter, Harrington blamed Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee for bias, for publicly opposing the project even before the plans were presented to the City Council, and then, failing to recuse himself from the council review.

At Monday's meeting, McNamee rejected the accusations and fired back at Harrington for distortions in the letter. McNamee said that opposition to the project is based on safety and traffic, "That has been the number one issue."

McNamee said that he's been presented with petitions signed by 200 persons and that he's received 74 e-mails objecting to the project and two telephone calls favoring it.

Similarly, Ward 5 Councillor Douglas Gutro said of Harrington's letter, "I took offense" to references of "ethnic intolerance. I believe that's inaccurate."

Gutro, also, cited the former Super 88 Supermarket which was located at 731 Hancock St. and said the owners and the city had worked cooperatively at that location.

Ward 6 Councillor 3 Kevin Coughlin described his visits to other C-Mart supermarkets and cited double and triple parking at the locations.

The North Quincy plan would include 100 onsite parking spaces, according to Harrington.

"This is a reasonable alternative to what could go in there," Harrington said, referring to the parcel's Industrial B zoning which would allow, by right and without a hearing, such projects as a warehouse, a delivery center, heavy industrial manufacturing, or an office building.

In his letter, Harrington enumerated numerous delays by the Council in considering the application which was filed Aug. 21,

"We are now scheduled for April 6, 2009, 228 days after the application was filed."

Harrington noted that supporters of the project outnumber opponents 4 to 1, and claimed that traffic and parking concerns are not valid grounds for denial of the application.

Harrington charged that "the City Traffic Engineer (Jack Gillon) threw up a smoke screen to further delay and hinder the application process in accordance with the wishes of Councilor (sic) McNamee."

In the same letter, Harrington outlined C-Mart's revised plan which reduces the size of the supermarket

C-MART OWNER Miao Kun Fung and attorney Christopher Harrington spoke at Monday's meeting of the City Council which was considering a Special Permit for a new C-Mart at the site of the former Boston Gear Works.

Mayor, Teachers Still Deadlocked On Wage Freeze

By TOM HENSHAW

Little or no progress was reported Tuesday between Quincy and its teachers union over the city's request for a one-year wage freeze to save $3 million in the Fiscal 2010 budget.

"We're waiting for the city to respond," said

Paul Philips, president of the Quincy Education Association, whose members rejected the last city proposal by an overwhelming margin.

"We know they are meeting but there has been no contact. The QEA did not Moments in time

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On April 12, 1861, the Civil War begins when Confederate shore batteries under General P.G.T. Beauregard open fire on Union-held Fort Sumter in Charleston Bay in South Carolina. During the next 34 hours, 50 Confederate guns and mortars launched more than 4,000 rounds at the poorly supplied fort.

• On April 7, 1891, American showman P.T. Barnum dies in Bridgeport, Conn. The 81-year-old Barnum's sense of humor never deserted him. He requested that a New York paper run his obituary before he died so he could enjoy reading it, and the paper obliged.

• On April 6, 1909, American explorer Robert Peary accomplishes a long elusive dream when he and Matthew Henson reach what they determine to be the North Pole. Decades after Peary's death, however, navigational errors in his travel log surfaced, placing the expedition in all probability a few miles short of its goal.

• On April 8, 1935, President Franklin D. Roosevelt authorizes almost $5 million to implement work-relief programs. Hoping to lift the country out of the Great Depression, Congress allowed the president to use the funds at his discretion. The act was unprecedented and remains the largest system of public-assistance relief programs in the nation's history.

• On April 11, 1945, the American Third Army liberates the Buchenwald concentration camp, near Weimar, Germany, a camp that will be judged second only to Auschwitz in the horrors it imposed on its prisoners. Among those saved by the Americans was Elie Wiesel, who would go on to win the Nobel Peace Prize in 1986.

• On April 10, 1953, "House of Wax," starring Vincent Price, opens at New York's Paramount Theater. The first color three-dimensional picture, the movie had to be viewed through special glasses.

• On April 9, 1969, the Chicago Eight, indicted on federal charges of conspiracy to cross state lines with intent to incite a riot at the 1968 Democratic convention in Chicago, plead not guilty. The trial turned into a circus as the defendants and their attorneys used the court as a platform to attack President Nixon, the Vietnam War, racism and oppression.

Don't Rule Kelly Out Of Ward 1 Race

The question isn't whether there will be a contest for Ward 1 councillor this fall.

But rather: will it be an open seat or will incumbent Leo Kelly make it at least a three-way race?

Two candidates have already declared their candidacies for Ward 1 councillor: community activist Margaret Laforest and Zoning Board of Appeals chairman Martin Aikens.

Right now, political observers are wondering whether Kelly — who is second in seniority on the City Council — will seek a 10th term.

LAFOREST

has sort of been the rule rather than the exception during his career on the council. In his nine successful campaigns for Ward 1, Kelly has been unopposed just three times: in 1983, 2005 and 2007.

Compare that with Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis who may be the only councillor in the city's history to be unopposed in his first three campaigns for councillor. Davis, who is seeking a fourth term this fall, has at least one opponent: Brian Palmucci.

Or Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi — the dean of the council — who has been opposed four times in 10 elections. Raymondi, who will seek an 11th term in November, has been unopposed the last six times on the ballot: 1997, 1999, 2001, 2003, 2005 and 2007.

It's safe to say of the nine councillors serving today, Kelly has had the most competitive races.

In winning his six other terms, Kelly has had 13 different opponents try to wrestle the Ward 1 seat from him. He's also faced four preliminary elections in winning and holding the seat.

He's like the Energizer Bunny of local politics — he just keeps going, and going, and going.

And along his successful path to winning the Ward 1 seat, Kelly's defeated a few household names in local politics.

In his first successful bid for Ward 1 back in 1973, Kelly topped the preliminary election with 1,325 votes. Coming in second was the late Paul Harold, former city councillor, state senator and Norfolk County Register of Deeds. Finishing third and fourth that election were Matt McDonnell and Robert Denvir, Jr. In the final election, Kelly defeated Harold by 64 votes (2,433 to 2,369).

In 1975, there was another preliminary election. Kelly (2,558 votes) easily topped the ballot as Edward Meade (692 votes), James McDonough (400) and John Whalen (219) finished second, third and fourth respectively. Kelly defeated Meade in the final (4,036 to 1,467).

In 1977, after a three-man preliminary, Kelly defeated Dave Crowley, Jr. (3,595 to 1,933) for his third term.

There was no preliminary in Ward 1 in 1979 but Kelly had an opponent in the final election. This time he defeated Dave MacMillan (2,741 to 1,513) to win his fourth term.

Same thing in 1981: just a two-man race and Kelly defeated MacMillan again (3,395 to 1,603) for his fifth term.

Kelly would win without opposition for the first time in 1983 but resigned in January 1984 to become project manager for the Quincy Housing Authority.

Michael Cheney succeeded Kelly after winning a special election in June 1984. Cheney served as Ward 1 councillor until being elected a councillor-at-large in 1989.

That same year, Peter Kolson won the Ward 1 seat and held it until making an unsuccessful bid for councillor-at-large in 2003. And it was the same year that Kelly made a triumphant return after a near 20-year absence on the City Council. He topped a five-candidate field for Ward 1 councillor in the preliminary election and then defeated Joe Keegan in the final (1,901 to 1,633).

Ward 1 encompasses Adams Shore, Merrymount, Germantown, Houghs Neck and part of Quincy Square around the Thomas Crane Public Library, South Shore YMCA and part of Washington Street in upper Quincy Point.

The ward has three precincts which traditionally are among the highest voter turnout in Quincy: Ward 1 Precinct 1 (Merrymount), Ward 1 Precinct 4 (upper Houghs Neck and Adams Shore) and Ward 1 Precinct 5 (all of Houghs Neck).

Kelly's been unopposed the last two city elections and would be challenged by two first-time candidates in Laforest and Aikens if he seeks a 10th term. Laforest is the former president of the Houghs Neck Community Council. Aikens is an electrician and member of Local IBEW 103.

And there's always a chance other candidates could enter the Ward 1 field.

If Kelly tosses his hat in the ring, it would be his sixth preliminary election. He lost his first bid for Ward 1 councillor in 1971 which featured a four-man race in the preliminary. After securing a spot in the final, Kelly lost to the incumbent, Ed Graham, in the final election by 551 votes.

POTENTIAL CANDIDATES seeking a spot on the ballot need to collect 50 signatures certified by the city's Board of Registrars. That's 50 signatures for any elective office — mayor, school committee, councillor-at-large or ward councillor. The 50-signature rule has been part of Quincy's charter since it became a city in 1888.

Two neighboring municipalities — Weymouth and Braintree — which recently changed their form of government from a town to a city have higher signature requirements.

Both Braintree and Weymouth require 150 signatures to run for mayor — a minimum of 25 per district (and each town has six districts). They also require 100 signatures for a district councillor (similar to a Quincy ward councillor).

Any thought of raising the signature-minimum in Quincy?

"I think having 50 signatures makes it easier for all people to participate in elective office in Quincy," says City Clerk Joe Shea. "It's not a burning issue but I wouldn't necessarily be opposed to changing it."

A change to the city charter would require a home-rule petition be passed by the city council and mayor and then an act of the state legislature.

ANY GOLFER who's ever teed it up at Granite Links Golf Club can attest the course and amenities are superb. And Golf Digest magazine has confirmed that the course — which recently opened for its sixth season — is something special.

In its May issue which hits newsstands this week, the magazine lists Granite Links among America's 100 Greatest Public Courses for 2009-2010. It also includes the course in its Best In State Ranking (among the top 20).

Of the top 100 public courses, Golf Digest ranks Granite Links No. 73 — ahead of such notables such as Trump National Golf Course Los Angeles (No. 84) and Doral Golf Resort and Spa (No. 94).

If you're wondering what number one is: it's Pebble Beach Golf Links in California.

The rankings were compiled after 900 panelists nationwide played and rated the courses on seven criteria, each on a scale of 1 to 10: shot values, resistance to scoring, design variety, memorability, aesthetics, conditioning and ambience.

Congratulations to Walter Hannon III, general manager of Granite Links Golf Club and the entire staff for such a strong showing in the annual ranking which has been published since 1966.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1911 postcard view of the old Quincy Point Congregational Church that was on the corner of Washington and South Streets. It was first erected in 1838 as a one-story Methodist church. It became Congregational in 1884 and a year later it was raised 10 feet and a vestry, kitchen and stage were constructed beneath it. In 1900, the Fore River shipyard located nearby and the church eventually became surrounded by industrial businesses. In the 1940s, under the direction of their new pastor, the Rev. Bedros Baharian, the parish decided to raise the money to move a half-mile up the street to the corner of Abbey Road. In 1949 the 111-year-old original upper level of this church was lifted off the bottom addition and moved on rollers up Washington Street onto a new foundation. Then the building was extended, covered with bricks, a new roof and refurbished with wood trim inside. The new site also included a new parish house, social hall, offices and classrooms and a new steeple extending up 96 feet was erected at the front of the church. You would never know that the present church has a 171-year-old building as its sanctuary. And today the corner of South and Washington Streets is home to an automobile lubrication firm, but a marker placed there by Rev. Baharian in 1950 denotes it as the site of the church's original home. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

CPA Funds, Hotel/Motel Tax Funds Are Separate

I'd like to point out one item that was not entirely accurate in the March 12th stories regarding Community Preservation Act funds and the Hotel/Motel Tax funds. The story stated that the local portion of the CPA funds come from the Hotel/Motel Tax. This is not correct. These two funds are completely separate and have no relation at all.

I am very proud of the progress the City of Quincy has made towards open space protection in the past few years. In 2003 the city purchased about 12 acres of land using the Hotel/Motel tax fund. This is a fund that established a 4% tax on hotel/motel room within city limits. In 2003 the city took a bond to use this money to buy land and improve passive and active recreation sites around the city. A significant piece of the Bird Sanctuary in Marina Bay and a small boat yard in Hough's Neck was purchased. The approximately 20 year bond is still being paid off from Hotel/Motel tax proceeds.

Completely unrelated, the voters of Quincy passed the Community Preservation Act in 2006 by a margin of 57% to 43%, winning support in every ward and precinct across the city. This established a less than 1% property tax increase dedicated to the purpose of open space preservation, historic site restoration, the creation of affordable housing, and new passive and active recreation parks. In 2007, the city took a four year bond to purchase over 18 acres of land. Four acres were purchased at 271 Sea Street, about one acre was purchased in West Quincy referred to as the Joyce Parcel, and 13 acres of land were purchased adjacent to Faxon Park. This year, CPA funds will pay off the second of four payments towards this bond at approximately $950,000.

The city continues to examine additional sites for potential purchase for protection from development and has three in particular that are being researched carefully now. From applications received by the Community Preservation Committee in March 2008, the three sites include seven acres adjacent to 93 South once home to Howard Johnson, several acres near School Street at Fort Square, and land owned by Quincy Medical. All sites are being appraised.

'Taste Of South Shore's Benefits Strong Kids Campaign

More than 520 people attended the recent "Taste of the South Shore" and a record 23 restaurants participated in the 13th annual fundraiser for the South Shore YMCA's Strong Kids Campaign.

This year's effort will help send close to 500 children to camp, while also providing aid to families in need. Of the money raised, 100 percent of the proceeds will directly benefit more than 5,500 children on the South Shore at a time when the number of applications from families seeking financial assistance has risen 60 percent.

This year's event also honored Mark and Michele Dickinson who have been strong supporters not only of the "Y," but also the Strong Kids Campaign.

Residents of Scituate, the Dickinsons have both led campaigns that helped the South Shore YMCA become the first of its size in the country to raise $1,000,000 annually. Mark was also instrumental in the planning, development and fundraising needed to build the Y's Mill Pond branch in Hanover.

With funds raised by YMCA members and community volunteers, like the "Taste of the South Shore" participants, the Strong Kids Scholarship Program provides families in need with financial support to participate in membership and program activities at the South Shore YMCA. The YMCA also provides scholarships to programs like summer camp, child care and teen activities, so that no one is turned away due to an inability to pay.

Honey, Balsamic Chicken With White, Sweet Potatoes

One of the food network programs is touting getting back to basics. I must admit that I have never gotten away from basics - most of the food is what I have been cooking for ages and still enjoyed.

Today's recipe is for roasted chicken and potatoes that is my very favorite, when I'm either cooking for one or more.

HONEY ROASTED CHICKEN

1 chicken (cut up or separate pieces if preferred) such as thighs and drumsticks honey for coating
Balsamic vinegar for coating salt and pepper
olive oil for coating

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Slightly grease baking pan with oil (any kind will do).

Wash and pat dry the chicken. Salt and pepper each piece, then rub each piece with honey and then the balsamic vinegar. The two major flavors gives the chicken and brownish hue. Bake for about an hour or until pieces look brown.

ROASTED WHITE AND SWEET POTATOES

Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Grease a baking pan.

5 or 6 white potatoes (peeled and cut in pieces)

2 medium sized sweet potatoes cut in pieces (peel if preferred)

1 medium onion (sliced)

salt and pepper to taste
olive oil

Place the cut up potatoes in a large bowl. Mix together with olive oil, salt and pepper and the onion, coating generously. Bake until potatoes are browned. I usually turn them a couple of times while they are baking.

Although I sometimes bake the potatoes along with the chicken, there never seems to be enough for my potato loving family. This way, you can make as many as you like.

For the presentation after both foods are completed, I place the chicken in a large shallow dish and put the potatoes on top. It gets raves.

Hall Of Fame Boxer Lou Brouillard Trained In Quincy Gym

Joe Beston's Gym Located At President's Place Site

By TOM HENSHAW

It's Presidents Place now but there was a time when a building at the corner of Washington and Hancock Streets housed Joe Beston's gym, where a welterweight and middleweight boxing champion trained for his fights.

His name was Lou Brouillard and he lived for a time in Houghs Neck and married a Quincy girl, Minnie Beston, Joe's daughter. He was welterweight champ at 19, middleweight champ at 21 and, when he died at 73, he was a member of three boxing halls of fame.

Young Jack Thompson, Jackie Fields, Ben Jeby, Vince Dundee. The names mean nothing to today's boxing fans. But in Brouillard's day they were the cream of what A. J. Liebling called "the sweet science." Brouillard fought them all.

"He beat Thompson for the welterweight championship on Oct. 23, 1931, in front of a crowd of 19,000 in the first title bout in Boston Garden," said Paul Beston, Joe's grandson and Brouillard's nephew, who still lives in Quincy.

Brouillard lost the title three months later to Fields but he was back again to knock out Jeby for the middleweight crown in the seventh round in New York's Polo Grounds Aug. 9, 1933. Three months later he lost it to Dundee in Boston Garden.

"Lou also beat light heavyweight champion Bob Olin twice in non-title fights but Olin's manager refused to give Lou a title fight when Olin became champ," said Beston. "Lou boxed a total of 13 champions."

In all, he had 110 victories and 27 defeats and was knocked out only once, a technical KO by Tiger Jack Fox in the Garden on Feb. 18, 1938.

He was elected to the World Boxing Hall of Fame in Los Angeles and the International Boxing Hall of Fame in New York. He was not only chosen for the Canadian Boxing Hall of Fame but was selected as the greatest fighter ever to come out of Canada.

Lucien Pierre Brouillard

was born in St-Eugene-de-Granham, Quebec, but the family moved to the States when he was 7 to be near their work in the mills of Manchester, N. H.

He quit school at 15 to work in the mill and was four months short of his 17th birthday when he had his first fight, knocking out a kid named KO Mullins in an amateur boxing tournament in Norwich, Conn.

He turned pro in 1928, knocking out Billy Krake in the second round in Willimantic, Conn., on New Years Day and for the next 12 years he met the best in the welterweight, middleweight and light heavy weight divisions and defeated most of them.

He fought Mickey Walker, Fred Apostoli, Gus Lesnovich, Jimmy McLarnin and Baby Joe Gans. He beat Canada Lee, later the actor, twice but lost three times to the middleweight champion Marcel Thil.

"Lou lost two middleweight title fights to Thil in France, both by questionable low blows," said Beston.

"In 1938, Lou challenged the German champ, Adolph Heuser, the man he thrashed five years before in Boston Garden.

"I wanted to teach the characters in Germany something about having a little respect for Americans," said Lou.

"But the Nazi propaganda machine, after seeing Joe Louis beat Max Schmeling, could not stand another defeat.

"Gestapo-inspired riots broke out in Berlin and Hamburg. Gangs of storm troopers burned pictures of Lou in effigy.

"The U. S. embassy in Paris refused to give Brouillard a passport to Germany for fear of his safety."

Brouillard fought his last fight, a loss to Henry Chmielewski in Worcester, in June of 1940 as World War II was reaching its early peak. He tried to enlist in the Navy but poor eyesight stymied him so he spent the war operating a crane at the Fore River Shipyard.

He spent his last days living in Hanson and was a frequent visitor to his father-in-law's gym in Quincy until his death in 1984. He is buried in the Halifax Town Cemetery, a virtual unknown to today's boxing fan.

Davis Candidate For Re-Election In Ward 4

talization of the downtown area.

"Now more than ever, we need experienced and effective leadership to lead this City," Davis said. "Having been a small business owner in Quincy Center for the past 13 years, I have the skills, experience and knowledge to provide that leadership."

Another priority for Davis has been ensuring that the nuts and bolts of city services are working for all residents. "During my time as the Ward Councilor, the City's Pavement Management Plan has really hit its stride," Davis said. "Since the plan's inception several streets in Ward Four have been paved including all or part of: Brook Road; Columbia Street; Copeland Street; Common Street; Federal Avenue; Granite Street; Independence Avenue; Intervale Street; Nightingale Avenue; Penn Street; President Avenue; Quarry Street; Robertson Street; Rodman Street; Trafford Street; Verchill Street; Minihan's Lane; Forrest Avenue; Willard Street; Bates Avenue; Grove Street; and California Avenue."

Davis said he worked with the leadership of the police department to reconfigure patrol areas to allow for increased police presence in Ward 4. In 2007 he also successfully advocated for an increase in the number of officers in the police department's drug unit.

In 2006 he led a group of educators, police personnel and community activist to start the West Quincy Teen Program. The program emphasized sports and community service as positive activities for area teens looking for things to do during the summer. When state and local funding for this program became strained, Davis reached out and advocated for private funding.

Davis drafted the City's Community Preservation ordinance; and as chairman of the Community Preservation Committee, he worked to protect open space in Ward 4, including Turning Mills Estate, a six-lot subdivision off of Forrest Avenue.

A graduate of Syracuse University and Suffolk University Law School,

Davis and his wife, Honor, live with their two daughters, Madison, age 11, and Meghan, age 8, on Shawmut Street in West Quincy. He has been practicing law in Quincy for more than 13 years and is currently the managing partner in the law firm of Graeber, Davis and Cantwell, P.C. Graeber, Davis and Cantwell is a general practice law firm with more than 12 employees located in downtown Quincy.

"As a Quincy resident for more than 18 years my commitment to our city is stronger than ever," Davis said. "My wife, Honor (Jutilla/Crowley), and I live on Shawmut Street in the home that was built by her grandfather in the 1940s. Our daughters, Madison and Meghan, attend the Quincy Public Schools."

"My family and I have invested hundreds of hours volunteering and supporting Ward 4 organizations."

In addition to his work at his law firm and on the City Council, Davis volunteers for a number of community agencies including, Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore, the Quincy Public Schools Business Partnership, South Shore YMCA, Quincy Youth Soccer, Quincy Girls Softball, St. Mary's Basketball, the Southwest Community Center, St. Mary's/West Quincy Girls Basketball, Girl Scouts, Quincy Youth Baseball/Softball, Sterling Middle School, Lincoln Hancock Community School, and Quincy Youth Soccer. He has also been a volunteer Big Brother; a pro bono (volunteer) lawyer for both DOVE, Inc. and the Volunteer Lawyers Project; and served as a councilor, as well as a member of the program board, for the American Legion Boy's State program.

In kicking off his re-election campaign, Davis spent this past weekend knocking on doors and working with more than 20 volunteers delivering literature to more than 1,500 Ward 4 residents.

"I am very encouraged by the response we've had from residents," Davis said. "I am extremely proud of what we have been able to accomplish together in Ward 4 over the past six years, and I look forward to making even more progress in the future."

Davis will kick-off his re-election campaign with a "Campaign Opening Day" family party at the Tirrell Room, Quincy Elks on Quarry Street tonight (Thursday) from 7-10pm.

For more information, contact Davis at 617-472-8722.

New Video Raises Awareness Of Substance Abuse

Mayor Thomas Koch has kicked off a month long campaign to raise awareness of substance abuse through the unveiling of a half-hour video produced by the Boston University Center for Digital Imaging.

At the event, Koch commented on his efforts to address drug addiction and abuse in the city, saying that, "While it is hard to measure the results of substance abuse prevention measures, the consequence of doing nothing is far too grave to stand by and ignore the problem."

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti commended

the effort and recognized Koch's direct involvement to reduce substance abuse in the city.

The video, sponsored by several local business groups including State Street, Quirk Auto Dealerships, Fallon Ambulance, South Coastal Bank, Quincy Mutual Group, the Quincy Credit Union, the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office, Eastern Bank, Dependable Cleaners, Ayers Handicap Conversion, Inc., and Deware Funeral Homes, consists of four parts, each dealing with different groups in the substance abuse prevention effort.

First responders, parents, police and court officials are all interviewed and offer their perspective on coping with and treating substance abusers. The video will be distributed throughout the city to local schools, religious organizations and community groups and will be a tool for parents and children to see the perils of drug use more closely. Throughout the next month, the program and public service announcements will air on QATV and ads will appear in local newspapers.

One of the ads appears on Page 19 of this week's Quincy Sun.

Forum On Sex Offenders At Fore River Clubhouse

The Ward 2 Civic Association will host a forum on sex offenders for local residents Tuesday, April 14, at 7:30 p.m. at the Fore River Clubhouse, 16 Nevada

Rd., Quincy Point.

Police Lt. Pat Glynn and Community Police Officers Jim Dentremon and Tom Ford will discuss identifying sex offenders and working with Quincy police on the issue.

For more information, contact Brad Croall at 617-930-0106.

Mosquito Larvae Spraying Starts Week Of April 21

The Norfolk County Mosquito Control Project will begin its Spring Aerial Application to Control Mosquito Larvae in Quincy during the week of April 21.

The target date for completion is April 24 but, since the weather in the spring is unpredictable, if the application cannot be finished in that time it will go on beyond that date.

The biorational larvicide Bti will be applied by helicopter. The trade name of the granular formulation of Bti to be used is VectoBac G (EPA Reg #73049-10).

Mosquito larvae surveillance in Quincy has indicated the need to apply larvicide by helicopter in the Broad Meadows Marsh. The application should take only one day.

For further information, contact Project Director John J. Smith at 781-762-3681.

Council On Aging, Lions Seek Classes

but can't afford them.

worthy cause, call the COA at 617-376-1506 for further information.

Quincy To Join Other Communities April 13-17 Special Events To Celebrate Community Development Week

The City of Quincy will join other communities across the nation by proclaiming April 13-17 "National Community Development Week," announce Mayor Thomas P. Koch and Planning Director Dennis E. Harrington.

The goal of this nationwide celebration is to encourage those who benefit from the Community Development Block Grant (CDBG), HOME Investment Partnerships, Emergency Shelter Grant and other housing and community development programs to communicate with their Congressional representatives, state and locally elected officials and the public, about the important role these programs play in improving the quality of life of residents in the community.

Since 1975, the CDBG program has provided over $69 million to the City of Quincy for community development programs related to housing rehabilitation; first-time homebuyers; affordable housing; public facilities; public services; public works; economic development; and handicapped accessibility projects.

"The Community Development Block Grant program allows us to provide youth, senior, and family programs throughout the City of Quincy, addressing critical neighborhood issues," Koch said. "From community center funding to street and sidewalk repair, the CDBG program continues to be a very powerful and effective tool to assist us in meeting the needs in our community."

Several events are planned during Community Development Week to celebrate the positive impacts CDBG and other U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development resources have had in Quincy. These events include community center programs and the ribbon-cutting ceremony of an affordable housing project.

Mayor Koch invites and strongly encourages the citizens of Quincy to attend the events, which will take place during the City's celebration of Community Development Week.

Mayor Thomas Koch this week formally submitted proposed zoning changes to Quincy's downtown district to the City Council as planning for the historic redevelopment of Quincy Center continues to take shape.

The changes are largely meant to match the city's zoning code with its Urban Renewal Plan, the plan guiding redevelopment downtown. The changes would allow developers to seek a special permit from planning board to construct buildings as high as 20 stories, compared to the 15 stories allowed by right today.

The changes would also give the Planning Board authority over parking issues and signage in the downtown district in provisions keeping with overall intent to make the Planning Board the primary permitting-granting authority downtown.

"This is another step in the right direction, and we are looking forward to working with the City Council to keep this project moving forward," said Koch.

The administration and the team from Street-Works development are in the middle of a two-month series of public meetings on long-term development plans for Quincy Center that officials believe will create $1 billion in private investment over the next several years.

Meetings next week will be:

April 13, Adams Shore Association, 7 p.m., Adams Shore Library; April 14, Adams National Historical Neighborhood Association and the Hospital Hill Neighborhood Association, 7 p.m., The Neighborhood Club; April 15, Ward 5 Community Meeting, 7 p.m., Beechwood Knoll School; April 16, Montclair-Wollaston Association, 7:30 p.m., Wollaston Lutheran Church.

20th Cleaner, Greener Quincy Set For May 2 helps to beautify our city," said Koch.

Following the cleanup, Mayor Koch will host an appreciation barbecue from 12:30 p.m. to 2:30 p.m. for all volunteers at Pageant Field.

Those wishing to participate are encouraged to coordinate a team, target an area to spruce up, and to contact the Park Department to identify their area as a cleanup site. The Park Department will make rakes, shovels, gloves, bags and other tools available for use. As the event draws nearer, cleanup sites will be posted and residents can choose to join a designated site.

All volunteers will also receive a Cleaner, Greener Quincy t-shirt.

For more information about volunteering or to have questions answered, contact the Park Department at 617-376-1251 or email jconso@ci.quincy.ma.us.

close any door and they made it clear that they were not shut any doors either.

"We also want it noted that the discussions and information sharing were entirely respectful on both sides all during this process."

QEA membership "respectfully" shot down a city proposal last week by a margin of 13 percent yea and 87 percent nay and then voted by a large voice vote to keep its fact-gathering team together in case the city wishes to continue.

The occasion was in sharp contrast to the bitter, four-day teacher's strike in June of 2007 that disrupted plans for the ground-breaking of the new Quincy High School.

Philips explained the union vote, in part, like this: "First, the city was not asking the same of the QEA that it asked of other unions. It was asking more of us.

"When we inquired if the city would discuss proposals or discussions about wage deferments and other concessions that would match the sacrifice of our brother unions of the city, the city declined.

"Secondly, the federal stimulus package and the ARRA (American Recovery and Reinvestment Act) promise to deliver millions in additional funds to the Quincy Public Schools over the next two years, upwards of $8 million according to original estimates.

"This money must go to the schools and the ARRA money is specifically aimed, according to President Obama, at limiting and eliminating layoff in schools.

"The city representatives were correct that specific amount of certain funds are still in flux and they were hesitant to budget based on uncertainties.

"QEA members noted that we were being asked to take wage deferment based on uncertainties. We asked if the city would consider the concept of a 'trigger' based on the actual arrival of federal money. They respectfully declined to discuss that concept.

"At no point did the QEA say, nor will we ever say, that we are insensitive to the city's situation. We will listen to further proposals and information from the city, especially after more complete facts are known."

A number of School Department unions have agreed to forego next year's salary increases as Mayor Tom Koch struggles to close a $12 million gap in the Fiscal 2010 budget.

by 30%. He, also, outlined C-Mart's willingness to invest $100,000 in a new traffic signal, and to offer its own land for public parking purposes for a nearby diner and sign company.

"By contrast to the wide array of industrial and commercial uses permitted as a matter of right in the Industrial B zoning district, this Project promises to upgrade an existing commercial building to a modest and beneficial retail use, which would complement neighboring retail and residential uses."

Approximately 175 persons attended Monday's session and nearly all, many with young children, represented the Asian community.

At Monday's meeting, City Solicitor James Timmins called the revised plans, "a substantially reduced project," when asked if the council could consider the changed plan.

However, Harrington said that he had informed councillors as early as November that C-Mart was willing to eliminate the food court and restaurant, if necessary.

Councillors, also, discussed Gillon's April 6 traffic report on the revised proposal which many had received just hours earlier.

"Some of the traffic concerns remain," said McNamee, noting that Gillon "continues to have concerns."

Both Gillon and Harrington described the illegal parking on Hayward Street despite the parking prohibition. Harrington said C-Mart's owner would provide nine off-street parking spaces to replace the illegal spaces used by the nearby diner's clientele and spaces the sign company's employees.

Harrington, also, noted that a municipal parking section was set aside at the Hannaford's supermarket location.

In his report, Gillon said that C-Mart's offer to provide nine parking spaces in a lot off Hancock Street required clarification.

Harrington said that C-Mart would also increase the alley access width to the new parking lot from ten to 20 feet.

However, Gillon questioned the permanency of the offer, "I'm not sure if this is a permanent solution to run with the property or if the parking is convenient enough for customers of the diner."

On another issue, Coughlin asked C-Mart owner Miao Kun Fang of Weston to explain a May, 2008 wage complaint case filed with the attorney general's office. In that case, Fang agreed to pay over $66,000 in restitution to employees and fines.

Fang attributed the problem to his payroll company and said he has since changed servers.

Harrington repeated the value of the project to the city, citing new jobs, tax revenues and shoppers' convenience, and stated the traffic concerns were no more serious than those at the proposed B.J.'s in Crown Colony or the Lowe's Warehouse location on Burgin Parkway.

He concluded there is "no legally justifiable reason" to reject the project.

Councillors postponed voting after Harrington said he needed additional time to study the traffic report.

Councillors also decided not to accept any additional materials less than 14 days prior to the next meeting on May 4.

Civil Service: Fire Chief Process Legit

The new Fire Chief's exam was held last month, and the scores will dictate the selection process in coming months. Deputy Fire Chief Joseph Barron has been acting chief since July.

As part of its ruling, the Civil Service stated that city erred by using its traditional practice of naming the most senior deputy as acting chief rather than using the list of chief's candidates. The procedural was later corrected, and Barron remains acting chief, according to City Solicitor James Timmins.

Sheriff's Office Lands New ACA Accreditation

For the third consecutive time, the office of Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti has been accredited by the American Correctional Association (ACA).

The ACA called the office "a member of the elite in achieving correctional excellence" and awarded it scored of 100 and 99 percent in its evaluation.

The achievement is "a symbol of the enormous dedication and commitment demonstrated by each and every member of your staff to the accreditation process," said the association.

Bellotti noted with pride that his office is one of the relatively few jails in the nation that is accredited by both the ACA and the

MICHAEL BELLOTTI

National Commission on Correctional Health Care.

"This dual accreditation is a testament to the men and women up and down the line of the Norfolk County sheriff's office," he said.

"The fact that this recognition comes during a time when our financial resources have been greatly reduced makes it all the more impressive."

The Norfolk County Correctional Center was visited by an independent audit team last October to evaluate the facility and make its recommendation to the ACA.

"This achievement is part of my pledge to the people of Norfolk County that we will always run the correctional center in a manner that is as safe and secure as possible while also being a humane institution," said Bellotti.

"I believe the best way to accomplish that goal is with a professional staff developing and implementing state-of-the-art policies and practices. This accreditation is a tangible indication that we are achieving our goal."

Raymondi Seeks Wider Options On Wind Energy

Residents should be able to purchase and install or have their own wind energy units installed, according to Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi who wants the city's regulations to cover that option.

At Monday's Council meeting, Raymondi objected to forwarding the mayor's proposed wind energy ordinance to the council's committee because Koch's proposal prohibits private units.

Such private units are still in the development stage but are expected to look like television dishes and function like a solar panels in providing energy to individual buildings.

Raymondi's objection postponed action on the wind energy regulations until the next council meeting when it is likely to be moved to the Ordinance Committee for review.

Members of the city's energy committee, Patti Keville, Maura O'Gara and Chairman Larry Chretien, attended this week's meeting. The committee helped formulate the mayor's plan.

City Not On FIOS List

Verizon's FIOS won't be available in Quincy anytime soon, according to Rick Colon, spokesman for Verizon.

Colon described Verizon's plans for FIOS through 2010 and those plans don't include Quincy, Boston, Milton, and dozens of other Massachusetts cities and towns.

"Capital is limited," Colon told city councillors Monday, explaining that the company allocates its funds for the best return.

In fact, Colon said that Massachusetts' public access and licensing procedures can be more expensive and time-consuming than other states where a licensing request can be cleared in 45 days.

City Council President Jay Davis asked why the company is creating "a demand for something you can't get" and described mailbox fliers for FIOS.

Colon said to notify him if the fliers promote FIOS. As for the television ads, he said they include disclaimers that the service is not available in all areas.

A Job Well Done

On Friday, March 27, 2009, at 10:48 a.m., Officers Mark Millane, Brian Flaherty and Barry DeFranco responded to 646 Adams St. for a larceny of a purse that just occurred. Quincy Police communications broadcast that the suspect who took the purse, fled in a brown 2002 Toyota Camry and provided the license plate number.

Upon arrival, Officer Millane met with the victim, who stated that she parked her car on Adams Street and went into the cleaners, leaving behind her Coach brand bag/purse, valued at $400, on the passenger seat. She said that the purse contained $100 U.S. currency in various denominations, a Visa card, a Macy's card and other credit cards. The victim said that she left her vehicle unlocked because she was just doing a quick errand and when she returned, her purse was missing from the passenger seat of her vehicle.

LT. DAN MINTON

Officer Millane interviewed two witnesses who were in a local business. Based on their accounts, Officer Millane determined that a brown vehicle pulled up behind the victim's unoccupied vehicle. The suspect, the sole occupant, got out of his car and entered the victim's car, removing the black handbag from the passenger side. The suspect then got back into his car and drove down Shirley Street. Officer Millane provided the license plate number to communications and the direction the suspect vehicle was last seen traveling.

A local resident on Connell Street, who stated that she witnessed a male driver throw a purse out his window, flagged Officer DesRoche down. The officer returned the purse to the victim, who confirmed it was hers. She believed that the money and all her credit cards were still there.

A short while later, Officer DeFranco located the suspect vehicle at the registered address, so he and Officer DesRoche knocked on the door of this residence and spoke with the home owner and his adult son. The focus of the investigation was on the son, who met the clothing and physical description of the suspect.

After reading Miranda rights, the suspect admitted to stealing the purse and then throwing it out the window on Connell Street. The suspect, a 48-year-old Quincy resident, was placed under arrest for "Breaking and Entering of a Motor Vehicle in the Daytime with Intent to Commit a Felony and Larceny over $250."

Nice Work!

In this case, simply locking your door would have eliminated the opportunity. At a minimum, keeping valuables out of sight may have been a sufficient deterrent. The more cards and documents you carry in a purse, the more effort it will take to cancel and/or replace each one - hopefully you will remember each one.

A JOB WELL DONE On Monday, March 23, 2009, at approximately 2:45 p.m., Officer James Cassidy was on patrol in plain clothes in an unmarked police vehicle on Des Moines Road when he observed a motor vehicle with no front plate, traveling north on Des Moines Road towards Southern Artery. He stopped the vehicle on South Street at Sumner Street and was assisted by Officers' Bill Lanergan and Joe McGunigle.

Officer Cassidy requested license and registration from the male operator and noted that the front seat passenger was known to the police. Being familiar with the criminal history of the passenger and the fact that the operator had no registration and a different last name from the owner, Officer Cassidy asked the driver if there was anything illegal in the motor vehicle and he hesitated, then responded, "No....nothing at all."

The officer was given consent by the driver to search the motor vehicle. The driver also stated that the vehicle is his mother's and the front plate was at the auto body shop. The passengers stepped from the vehicle during the search and a pat frisk for weapons was conducted. The front passenger then stated that he was in possession of a hypodermic syringe, which was removed from his left jacket pocket and secured in a HAZMAT container. During the search of the vehicle, in the center console, Officer Cassidy found a cigarette box with two halves of an orange tablet believed to be Suboxone and a small plas-

Exit Drills In The Home Program

I'd like take this opportunity to reiterate the hazards associated with illegal apartments and bedrooms within basements and attics. I have written about it frequently in this column while conveying my concerns through our cable TV medium as well. Let me review the subject again here for you.

Before you consider utilizing a basement space for an additional sleeping area, consider first whether you have the appropriate exiting arrangements to do so. I suggest you contact the City of Quincy Building Department and ask for their determination. It is too easy to consider using the space for sleeping without considering the consequences should an emergency arise. Sleeping areas within attics demand the same consideration.

As I have frequently written, an alternate means of egress is a necessity in an emergency. Your typical basement window will not meet the requirements of an alternate means of egress. It is also my understanding

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau

that a bulkhead does not conform as a second means of egress from a basement as well.

The E.D.I.T.H. program, Exit Drills in the Home, is a program encouraging residential occupants to develop a household evacuation plan within their home. We frequently encourage children to pass information about this program to their parents. In that plan, occupants are encouraged to become aware of two separate means of exiting each room and a building. It is a proactive program hiliting and emphasizing the need for awareness of exit locations. I encourage you to create your own plan.

These same exiting requirements are applicable in apartments within basements and attics as well.

Having alternate means of exiting both spaces is essential. If one of these units is illegal, it is more than likely that consideration has not been given towards proper exiting.

For some time now, the city has had a task force in place attempting to eradicate illegal apartments, rooming houses and or sleeping areas. In the course of their duties, penalties have been levied as punishment for those who attempt to circumvent public safety regulations. It is the owner who is held responsible.

Once discovered, the building department assesses fines of up to $300 a day. When an around the clock detail is ordered until compliance is met, fees for the detail, whether police or fire, can run as high as $1000 a day. Meanwhile, it is the owner who is responsible for relocating displaced tenants. Once an illegal unit is discovered and ordered evacuated, it is immediately the owner's responsibility to supply both room and board for the displaced individuals from illegal units.

If you are the owner of an illegal apartment, rooming house, or sleeping area, I suggest that you dismantle the hazard immediately. The building department will look favorably upon those who proactively request their assistance when dismantling an illegal unit. Meanwhile it is imperative that the occupants are immediately relocated for their own safety.

FOOT NOTES

by Joel Chariton, D.P.M.

Diplomat, American Board of Podiatric Surgery
Diplomat, American Board of Podiatric Orthopedics

HEEL SPURS

The heel bone is the largest bone in the foot, absorbing the greatest amount of shock and pressure with every step. Heel spurs develop when the plantar fascia, a band of fibrous tissue running from the heel to the forefoot, separates itself from the heel area. This can be caused by over-pronation, or flat feet. Those with particularly high arches may also experience heel spurs. Calcium deposits create a bony protrusion, which can result in extreme rear foot pain, particularly noticeable when walking or standing. What helps? Subject to the individual, stretching exercises, losing weight, wearing shoes with a cushioned heel, or orthotics can help. When experiencing heel spurs and the pain that ensues, always confer with your foot doctor.

Whether your foot problem is caused by overuse, aging, deformity, injury, or disease, or related to inappropriate footwear, we invite you to consult with us at QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER. Our state-of-the-art foot-care facilities offer relief from the painful condition of hyperpronation through HyProCure™, an ankle subsidizing procedure that utilizes a titanium implant to eliminate the discomfort caused by excessive motion of the foot and ankle. For more information about any topic we discuss in our column or for an appointment, please feel free to call us at 781-986-3668. Office hours are also available at 999 North Main St., in the Randolph Medical Office Building, and Milton Medical Building in Suite 221.

P.S. Women have significantly higher incidence of heel spurs due to the sorts of footwear worn on a regular basis.

Twenty years later, they sat together to reminisce as they wait to board a bus to see that interview become a part of the new women's history exhibit "Women Protecting US."

Broad Meadows Student Historians Also Recognized At Battleship Cove

New Women's History Exhibit Honors Winnie The Welders

In Fall River, 75 people were on hand for the recent official opening of Battleship Cove's newest exhibit, "Women Protecting US."

Quincy residents ages 11 to 87 were honored at the ribbon cutting. Some are featured in the exhibit, some created parts of the exhibit.

The exhibit, in one of the forward areas of the Quincy-built Battleship Massachusetts, is dedicated to the efforts and sacrifices women have made through the years in service to their country. With an emphasis on the World War II era, recognition is given to women who served in the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Coast Guard and the Red Cross.

A special recognition is paid to those women who were so vital to the war effort on the home front, particularly those like lifelong Quincy resident Flo "Woo Woo" DiTullio Joyce, who was the first female welder interviewed and hired at the Fore River Ship Yard during WWII.

In recognition of her wartime contribution to the defense of our country and for her groundbreaking work as a woman welder in an all male shipyard, Flo was given a standing ovation at the ceremony. Humbled and tear streaked, Flo simply said, "Thank you, very much."

Also attending was Mildred Gillen Vento. Mildred and her sister, Anna "Dolly" Gillen Bornstein, also made great contributions during WWII at Fore River.

Mildred, now 83, said Anna asked her, "Why don't we do something to help our country?" Mildred was 17 and Anna was 25 when they applied for work at the shipyard and were hired as scrapers and painters in the shipyard's turret shop.

The exhibit features uniforms, vintage posters and artifacts donated by women veterans or their families.

A collection of oral histories by women veterans also includes a project about women shipbuilders, collected by students at the Broad Meadows Middle School in Quincy. Students at Broad Meadows have faithfully volunteered year after year to locate, tape oral histories with, and preserve in the women's own words the stories of the first WWII women shipbuilders of the Quincy Fore River and Bethlehem-Hingham Ship Yards.

Before boarding a school bus to attend the exhibit's ribbon cutting ceremony, current student volunteers as well as founding volunteers from the 1980s and 1990s classes at Broad Meadows treated Flo and Mildred to a school pizza party to celebrate the successful completion of the 20 year "Winnie the Welder" oral history project. The collection makes up one room of the five room "Women Protecting US" exhibit onboard the USS Massachusetts.

Contributing to the exhibit and attending the exhibit unveiling were: Broad Meadows' grade 6 student Krysta Laforest; grade 7 students Brandi Isaacs, Melissa Coutts, Jackie Blake and Madison Kirby; grade 8 students Sammi McArdle and Sylvia Sanchez. Other Broad Meadows students attended to support their classmate contributors.

Founding contributors also attended and were recognized for their vision 20 years ago realizing that these WWII stories would be lost forever unless someone did something. Volunteering years ago to interview area pioneering women shipbuilders were Margaret McLean Laforest and Kerri Piccuito Dawidczyk. Margaret and Kerri interviewed and befriended many WWII welders, pipefitters, supervisors and electricians.

Broad Meadows graduate Kerri, a former U.S. Marine, now married and a nurse has a family member following in her footsteps. Kerri's 12 year old cousin, Melissa Coutts now volunteers on the "Winnie the Welder Project" by digitizing the VHS tapes with classmate Brandi Isaacs. Kerri and Melissa rode together to the ribbon cutting.

Broad Meadows graduate Margaret Laforest, now married and a lifelong resident of Quincy, also has a family member following in her activist footsteps. Daughter Krysta Laforest, a grade 6 student at Broad Meadows Middle School, also was at the exhibit opening. Mother and daughter interviewed Flo and rode the bus with Flo and Mildred and guests to the exhibit.

While a Broad Meadows student and as a Quincy High student, Margaret interviewed both women and men who worked at the Quincy Fore River Ship Yard during WWII. Margaret and classmate Jill Hawes were a very effective interviewing team. Now, their work, as well as the work done by all of the Broad Meadows Middle School volunteers over twenty years, is now on display and is now a permanent part of the official Commonwealth of Massachusetts WWII Memorial onboard the USS Massachusetts in Battleship Cove, Fall River.

The stories of the pioneering Quincy "Winnies" and the story of the students who "Remembered the ladies" are now safe, public and are now a permanent chapter in Massachusetts history thanks to some forward thinking and 20 years of hard work by Broad Meadows' students.

Battleship Cove Executive Director Jack Casey pointed out that 338,000 women served in the various branches of the military during World War II, most in the nursing corps, clerical and support efforts, as well as those in combat. Currently, he said, there are 200,000 women in the military, including the first female four-star general, who is in the Army.

Casey said it was retired Navy Captain Guy Archambault's idea 18 years ago to have a women's exhibit aboard the Battleship Massachusetts. That was two years after the Broad Meadows students began collecting WWII women's history.

Thanks to Laurie Carlson of the USS Massachusetts the two like minded groups found each other and history was made and is now being shared.

The project is funded in part by a grant from the Massachusetts Foundation for the Humanities.

How To Make A Big Splash With Your Small Yard

(ARA) - A baby boomer couple downsizing, a working professional's downtown city condo, and a young family's starter home in a metro suburb -- the trend of people moving to smaller homes with smaller yards continues to grow. If you are one of them, how do you make the most out of your small outdoor green space? With the right tools and strategies, you'll find the possibilities are endless. "When people move to smaller homes, they want to make the most of the green space they have," says Ashton Ritchie, lawn expert and master gardener for Scotts. "They still want that outdoor retreat after a stressful day."

Ritchie says that smaller yards can be some of the most stunning because they require less time and hom-owners can focus more on what they really enjoy. "The difference is with a small green space, it's not an overwhelming full-time job. I've seen many beautiful small yards with intensive gardening and great landscaping."

Here are Ritchie's tips for getting the most out of small outdoor green spaces:

1. Make it your own.

If you want to create an outdoor retreat, a small yard holds many possibilities. Your priority should be deciding how you are going to use your yard. If you enjoy cooking, have much of your space dedicated to a great vegetable and herb garden. If you want to use your space to unwind at the end of the day, create an outdoor room with relaxation elements. If you plan to use your small yard as an additional space for entertainment, incorporate sitting space and tables for overflow from the house.

2. Use contrast to your advantage.

The nice thing about a small lawn is the contrast you can easily achieve in the foliage. Lush green grass is the foundation that contrasts with the colors and textures of other plants. Keep your lawn vibrant and consider planting flowers, shrubbery or an herb garden. The contrast in these elements provides as visual frame that is very appealing.

3. Fertilize for a green and beautiful lawn.

Green grass provides us with a soothing, relaxing feeling. But the No. 1 problem with grass is it ends up malnourished and starves. Therefore it's important to fertilize four to five times a year so you get strong root and top growth.

People with small yards don't want to bother with bulky bags of fertilizer and storage of a spreader. Scotts Turf Builder with Built-in Spreader is a great new solution. The handheld, all-in-one container is simple to use -- simply flip the spout, tilt and shake onto your lawn. Made from ingredients found in nature, the fertilizer strengthens lawn and promotes a healthy root system. It feeds a lawn up to 1,000 square feet. If you finish and have extra, the small container is easy to store for use next time.

4. Outdoor decor adds appeal.

Consider adding elements to your yard that intersect your personal style. For example, adding a water feature is a great idea that is visually appealing plus it adds a water sound that creates a relaxing atmosphere. You could also add a bird feeding station to attract wildlife. If room is very limited, consider a small hummingbird feeder. Be creative and get ideas from your local gardening center.

5. Use space-saving furniture.

Small spaces do not call for big and bulky outdoor furniture. Benches can be a good option because they seat multiple people and also take up less space. Look for pieces that are multifunctional like a bench or table that also opens up to provide storage space. Finally, make sure furniture can withstand temperatures all year long since it probably won't be stored in a different location.

Small yards can provide big beauty with these tips and strategies. Visit www.Scotts.com where you can read Ashton Ritchie's blog and get other ideas for maximizing small green spaces.

Weatherstrip Now for Summer

Q: I know that weatherstripping in the winter can keep out cold air and lower my heating bill, but what about summertime? -- Ellen in New York

A: Just as blocking cold air from entering during the winter months can keep you more comfortable and save on heating costs, reducing the amount of cool air that escapes the interior of the home during the hot summer months also can save money.

If your home's windows and doors are well-sealed against drafts -- either because they are brand-new or because you installed thicker weatherstripping in the fall -- that seal should be enough to keep air-conditioned air inside.

A home's insulation also works year-round to help maintain comfortable temperatures indoors. It works best when in good shape, so if you haven't inspected the insulation in a while, check the condition of any that you can access, such as the attic or crawlspaces. The material should not be compressed or matted, and definitely should not be damp or moldy. Replace old or damaged insulation.

And while you're up in the attic, inspect the vents installed around the space. These should not be blocked or damaged; if they are, unblock them or have them repaired. This is one area where, winter or summer, outside air needs to circulate constantly in order to prevent moisture, excessive heat or cold from damaging the outer envelope of your home. (A home's "envelope" generally consists of the uninhabited spaces just inside the outer walls and roof. Air flowing through these spaces helps keep the building materials from deteriorating.)

Spring is an excellent time to inspect weatherstripping, insulation and venting around the home, as you can make any repairs in fairly comfortable weather and be ready for the hot season ahead.

HOME TIP: Curtains and blinds play an important role in maintaining interior temperatures. Close them to keep direct sunlight from heating up the house in summer.

(ARA) - Let's face it, the earth needs our help and families everywhere are looking for ways to help out. Recycling, driving less and bringing reusable bags to the grocery stores are great ways to reduce your family's carbon footprint, but did you know there are things you can do to reduce the impact your home has on the environment, not to mention your wallet?

Hannah Keeley, lifestyle expert and host of the PBS program "Hannah, Help Me!" offers energy efficiency tips that can yield big returns for your home, your budget and the earth.

Fill in the cracks.

Never underestimate the power of weatherproofing your home. Check all windows and doors for drafty areas. Caulking holes and cracks will keep your home from bleeding heat, not to mention prevent your hard-earned dollars and cents from leaking out of the house.

Or consider replacing your existing doors with more energy-efficient fiberglass options. Thermo-Tru fiberglass doors offer five times the insulation value of wood, which will do a world of good in creating a more energy-efficient home.

Use less.

A seemingly obvious solution is to simply use less energy. Raising your thermostat a few degrees during the spring and summer months translates into big savings in both energy usage and utility bills. A programmable thermostat will automatically adjust your thermostat throughout the day, helping to control the temperature of your home even if you're miles away.

Lighting accounts for almost 20 percent of the average homeowner's monthly electric bill, but many people overlook this key opportunity to save energy and money. To reduce lighting bills, homeowners can choose lighting controls from Lutron Electronics. An incandescent bulb dimmed by 25 percent will use 25 percent less electricity and last four times longer than a bulb that has not been dimmed. Even better, dimmers allow homeowners to set the right light level for the mood and activity in a room.

Consider a dual-fuel system.

Installing a part-electric, part-gas hybrid heating and cooling system provides more control over your home's energy usage by automatically sensing and operating in the most economical mode. For example, as outdoor temperature increases throughout the day, the Heritage Hybrid (TM) comfort system from American Standard Heating & Air Conditioning will use an electric heat pump to efficiently cool your indoor air. When the weather turns cooler and heating with natural gas becomes more efficient, the furnace takes over. With a hybrid comfort system, you can save some serious cash -- even when confronted with unpredictable utility costs.

Make smarter choices.

Choosing the right home appliances is vital as well. No matter which room of the house we're talking about -- the kitchen, laundry room or otherwise -- an outdated or inefficient unit can drain your bank account and increase carbon emissions. To combat this, look for Energy Star certified appliances that way you know you're getting the most energy efficient products available.

The Spring Cleaning Task That Can Save You Money

(ARA) - Spring cleaning season meets a recession - what better time to take care of some often-overlooked household cleaning tasks that can save you big bucks in the long run? Some of the costliest repairs are ones that could easily be prevented with simple maintenance steps.

Take your home's heating and air conditioning system. When was the last time you had your cooling coils cleaned? If you're not even sure what part of the system the coils are, where they're located or if they've ever been cleaned at all, spring is a good time to take care of this important maintenance item. Doing so can help extend the life of your system and ensure it's functioning at peak efficiency.

"The cooling coils take the heat and humidity out of the air," says Aaron Marshbanks, a member of the National Air Duct Cleaners Association (NADCA), and a heating and cooling industry professional with 15 years experience. "The coils are essentially the connection point between your air conditioning system and the air in your home."

Cooling coils, which resemble a car radiator, are typically located on top of or inside the air handling unit in the mechanical room. Over time, household dust and air contaminants including fabric particles, skin cells, animal dander and other debris collect on the coils. While your furnace filter will reduce debris -- assuming you keep the filters clean -- it's impossible to completely eliminate it, and what gets through will end up on the coils.

"When that happens, two problems arise over time," Marshbanks says. "First, the build-up restricts the flow of air through the unit and decreases its ability to effectively remove heat from the air. Second, it makes the equipment work harder and longer to get air into your house. So the air handler runs and runs, and the unit consumes more energy and produces less comfort."

If the unit has to run 25 percent longer to produce the desired results, you'll actually be shortening its usable life by 25 percent, he points out. And the cost of repairing or replacing a faulty heating and cooling unit far exceeds the cost of having the coils cleaned.

While coils may not need to be cleaned annually, they should be inspected every year. It's best to leave the inspection and any necessary cleaning to a trained professional, Marshbanks advises. The configuration of some units may make it difficult to examine and clean the coils without removing them from the unit. Plus, improper cleaning can actually damage the coils.

"And you shouldn't assume your coils are being cleaned or even inspected regularly just because you have a service contract with an heating and cooling company," he adds. Many companies do not include that service as part of their regular maintenance routine.

NADCA offers a certified professional locator on its Web page to help consumers find qualified technicians in their area. NADCA members must pass a rigorous certification exam and complete regular training in order to earn and maintain the association's certification. When evaluating a company to inspect and clean your coils, be sure to ask how long the company has been in business, the average experience level of its service people, and what their regular service includes.

Find Answers to Your Insurance Questions

Where's the best place to find information about life insurance? Kiplinger's Personal Finance Magazine has named www.insure.com as the best site for life insurance information two years in a row. For good reason, too -- the site is packed with must-know information, and not just about life insurance.

Here's just a sample of what you'll find at www.insure.com:

- In this shaky economy, it's not too much of a stretch to wonder if our insurance companies are going to go under. Fear not. Just as bank customers are protected if a financial institution fails, most state have guaranty funds to handle insurance claims, up to a certain limit.

- Insure.com has a number of useful tools, such as car-crash safety ratings. Select your vehicle by make, model and year, and you'll get star ratings in front and side impacts, as well as rollovers.

- Need to understand annuities? Insure.com covers not only the basics, but provides in-depth information on accessing money before retirement and what to beware in a sales pitch.

- Need health insurance, but you're already sick? Look at the list of 12 ways to get health insurance. One particularly inventive way is to declare yourself a "group of one." This varies by state, but in many locations insurers are required to sell guaranteed issue policies to small groups.

- Before you buy a policy for any reason -- home, health, auto -- check the company's ratings. You can search the site by company name or by ratings. The ratings will tell you the financial shape a company is in.

- If you need a refresher, check the section on identity theft to make sure you've covered all your bases.

- Wondering if you should call your insurance company about a small claim? Even if you decide not to file a claim, your call will be recorded and a note made that will stay in your file for seven years. Too many of these "losses," and you could end up with a higher rate, even without a claim.

- Need to reduce your costs on house coverage? Check the "10 Ways to Save on Home Insurance" article.

- If you have a complaint about your insurer or a question about state insurance laws, click the State Information link for contacts in all states.

Drop Title Game To Arlington, 2-1

Quincy Under-14 Girls Finish As State Finalists

The Quincy Youth Hockey Girls Under-14 team recently finished second at the 2009 Massachusetts State Hockey Tournament held in Melrose. This finish marks the third consecutive year that a Quincy Youth Hockey team has earned a medal at the state tournament.

After finishing first in their round-robin bracket, Quincy outlasted Medford in five overtimes by a 2-1 score to advance to the state finals against Arlington. Having to return to the ice just three hours after defeating Medford, Quincy battled Arlington down-to-the-wire before Arlington poked home a loose puck in the third period to win the championship by a 2-1 count.

"The girls on this team displayed a lot of heart and character," said head coach Mike Tabeck. "To win the five overtime game and come back three hours later to play for a state championship and compete the way that they did shows the great pride they have as a team."

Quincy started off the tournament with an 8-1 victory over Natick. Sarah Tabeck led the way with a hat trick (three goals) and two assists. Jacquelyn Eeley, Caroline Kiley, Presley McLaughlin, Loren Miller and Colleen Bellotti also scored for Quincy and Erin McGinnis was solid in net. Stephanie DiPietro contributed to the 8-1 win with two assists.

Quincy's second round-robin game was against tournament host Melrose. Quincy dominated and came away as 7-0 winners. Erin McGinnis finished with a shutout between the pipes and Presley McLaughlin led the way offensively with a goal and two assists. Quincy had seven other players' light the lamp. Sarah Tabeck, Jacquelyn Eeley, Colleen Bellotti, Stephanie DiPietro, Loren Miller and Emily Sullivan all scored and Caroline Kelly, Emily Tabeck, Katie White and Leah Ryan added assists.

Quincy finished the round-robin portion of the tournament with a 1-1 tie versus Arlington. Chaislyn Burgio and Erin McGinnis were strong in goal for Quincy and Sarah Tabeck tallied the team's lone goal.

In the semifinals, Quincy went up against Medford, who had entered the state tournament with an undefeated record. Medford jumped out to an early 1-0 lead before Stephanie DiPietro tied the game midway through the second period. The contest remained tied at 1-1 throughout the third period and three overtimes, at which point the game was halted for one hour due to the ice having been previously rented. After this break in the action, both teams came back energized, with a spot in the state finals on the line.

Emily Tabeck won the game for Quincy in the fifth overtime with a wrist shot that found its way through a screen and into the top corner of the net. Chaislyn Burgio was outstanding in goal during the overtime periods and people who watched the game called it one of the best girls youth hockey games seen in recent history.

Just three hours later Quincy skated onto the ice for a rematch with a rested Arlington squad for the state title. Arlington took a 1-0 in the first period before Quincy's Loren Miller scored to make it 1-1. Arlington scored again in the final period for the 2-1 advantage and had to withstand a furious Quincy rally at the end of the game to preserve the victory.

By finishing second in the state tournament, Quincy again took home a medal. That makes it three years in a row. The Under-12 team (2007) reached the semifinals and the Under-12 (2008) advanced to the final game.

"We've been at the top of the South Shore Conference standings all season due to our stellar defense and timely scoring," added Tabeck. "The girls have allowed less than a goal a game for the season and our team defense is a big reason for our success."

Mike Tabeck, Larry Kelly and Steve Burgio coached the team.

Opened Season With A 6-4 Victory Quincy Ready To Play Ball

By SEAN BRENNAN

The Quincy Presidents opened the 2009 baseball season last week with a 6-4 non-league win over Brighton High School. The victory not only started Quincy out on the right foot—record-wise—but marked the inaugural triumph for first-year head coach Tim Daley.

Daley, a math teacher at Atlantic Middle School, takes over the bench duties from Mike Draicchio this season. Daley brings with him some serious coaching credentials. He has spent the last six summers working as an instructor down at the South Shore Baseball Club (Hingham), was the coach of the 2008 Weymouth American Legion Zone 6 East American Legion championship team and is a former coach of the AAU-16 Sea Dogs Travel team.

Daley is also a former star baseball player for Northeastern University.

His first order of business, as head coach of the Presidents, is to keep the team on a similar track to the one Draicchio had them playing on the last six years (five post-season appearances in the last six seasons).

"We are moving forward but we will be using some of the same concepts," said Daley. "The kids have been working hard in practice, and we have been, as a team, working on things like base running and team defense. We are trying to get this team to buy into the idea of the 'team concept'."

"Our success, like a lot of high school teams, will rely heavily on our ability to pitch and play defense. The good thing about this team is that we have a lot of depth and that means we have a lot of guys competing for spots and playing time. And that is a good thing."

The Presidents' three co-captains will be asked to lead by example, as the team lost (to graduation) a number of productive and strong players off last year's team. Seniors Sean Gray (OF) and Andrew Papile (1B/P) and junior Kevin Keith (SS/P) are expected to provide that leadership. Daley is looking for from his team captains.

"Sean Gray, Andrew Papile and Kevin Keith will be the team's co-captains," Daley added. "Myself and the team will be looking to them for leadership. Keith will be our number one pitcher and Papile will also see time on the mound. Sean, who was a team leader on the football team, will also be asked to provide experience and guide the younger players as the season moves along."

Other seniors on the team include Greg Gaffney (P/OF) and Eddie Sholes (3B/C). The junior class is stacked with talent, too. Juniors on the team include Collin McCarthy (CF), Leroy Wallace (C), TJ Higgins (2B/OF), Elvin Nunez (3B/OF), Tom Lowry (1B/OF) and David Muollo (2B/P). Sophomores looking to make their mark include Lucas McDonough (1F/P), Dan Higgins (C), Derek Murphy (3B), Austin Tobin (OF/P) and Bobby Kozlowski (1B).

The team was scheduled to begin play in the Patriot League last Friday against Scituate HS, but due to the early spring weather in New England, the game was cancelled—it has been rescheduled for May 19. Quincy lost yet another opportunity to open Patriot League play on Monday against Duxbury HS. Again, rain was the culprit. This game will be made-up on April 30.

Quincy is scheduled to play on the road today (Wednesday) versus Silver Lake Regional HS and will host Whitman-Hanson HS on Thursday at Adams Field (3:30 p.m.).

"The Patriot League looks to be filled with teams that can beat any other league team on any given day," said Daley. "I am somewhat familiar with some of the league's better players through the South Shore Baseball Club, but these league games will all be a test."

Schedule Begins This Week

NQ Softball Looking To Make Noise

By SEAN BRENNAN

The success of the 2009 North Quincy Red Raider softball team is heavily dependent on a strong, smart and athletic senior class, and the improvement of the team's talented underclassmen. North, which graduated five impact players off last year's team (a team that finished 12-8, losing in the first round of D1 South Sectionals), returns six seniors to the team this spring.

North Quincy will also have a brand new head coach this year. Kerry Ginty replaces Michael Connor on the bench. Ginty, who coaches the NQHS girls' volleyball team in the fall, is a former Red Raider softball captain and is a well-respected high school coach.

"Sometimes a first-year head coach can be worried about missing something or feel overwhelmed," Ginty said. "But these girls, and especially my senior class, makes it easy to coach. (The seniors) get it; they have done it before and that makes it easier for me because they are there to help me out if I need it."

"We are not changing too much from last year. That team was successful and these girls all know what it takes to win games and be competitive."

Ginty's senior class is led by Siobhan Carnell (CF), Amanda Kelly (C), Kathleen Lynch (All-League 3B), Brittany Folkens (P/SS), Catherine O'Connell (1B) and Brianna Storer. The majority of this group is three or two-sport athletes and many of them have held the role of team captain or team leader before, and that, according to Ginty, should be a huge factor in supplying her team with a veteran presence.

Young Team To Lean On Experienced Runners

Quincy/NQ Girls Track Team Off & Running

By SEAN BRENNAN

Spring track (and field) is back.

The combined Quincy/North Quincy girls track team, along with the Q/NQ boys track team, opened the 2009 season with a Patriot League meet against former Atlantic Coast League (ACL) opponent Whitman-Hanson High School on March 31.

The girls team, under the direction of veteran head coach Geoff Hennessy, will be leaning heavily on a core group of senior runners as the majority of the team is young and inexperienced.

"We have a very green, inexperienced bunch with 30 freshmen out," said Hennessy. "We'll just dig in and hope to do our best. We have a great staff and superb senior leadership from (captains) Jessie Howlett, Julie Lynch, Jess Davis and Alyssa Mullen.

"By league meet time (May 18) we will be in full stride and our top people will be ready to score in the state meet."

The team, being as young and green as they are this spring, will also have to deal with the fact that their squad has no real home track facility. With a team that is made up of a combination of student-athletes from Quincy and North Quincy High Schools, getting everyone to the same location to practice is a chore. But not an obstacle that is going to impede progress or slow down some of the more talented runners and field participants in the area.

"Our team is plagued by a lack of a real track facility," added Hennessy. "But we are working out daily at Cavanaugh Field. Being a combined program means bussing Quincy High School kids daily to the north end of the city."

Hennessy opened the pre-season with a field of 65 student-athletes (that number is now down to 45) looking to make their mark on the track or in the field. A large number of the remaining team members have a successful history on the indoor/outdoor high school track circuit and the team's talent runs deep, both in the running/sprinting events and in the field throwing events.

Some of this impressive talent includes Howlett, Amber Jones, Nery Francois, Christy Sorensen, Kristen Peterson and Talia Hampton in the sprinting events; Jenn Nahn, Crystal Luo and Mary Schwartz in the hurdles; Davis, Mullen, Erica Brady, Rachael Kasanoff, Nicole Lucier and Sarah Gardiner in the distance running events and Lynch, Erin Collins, Erin Renken, Taylor Dickey and Kaleigh McKeon in the throwing events.

Coaches Kim Delaney, Jim Finn and Colby DaSilva are assisting Hennessy this spring.

Against Whitman-Hanson HS, Quincy/North

Quincy received first-place finishes from Howlett in the 100-meters (13.7 seconds), Brady in the 800-meters (2:36.0), Mullen in the two-mile (11:54) and Collins in the discus throw (81'9").

The team's scheduled meets against Patriot League opponents Pembroke HS and Duxbury HS (last year's Class D champions) were postponed due to inclement weather. This week (April 7), Quincy/North Quincy squared off in a tri-meet against league foes Scituate and Randolph High Schools. The girls' team's next one-on-one meet will be held April 14 against Hanover High School.

Tracy Wilson Running Boston For Children's

Attorney Tracy Wilson, of Quincy, will be running in the 113th Boston Marathon on April 20 to benefit Children's Hospital Boston. As a member of Children's 'Miles for Miracles Team,' runners like Wilson have an extra incentive to push them across the finish line: helping children and families who receive world-class care at the hospital. This will be Wilson's second Boston Marathon on behalf of the 'Miles for Miracles Team.'

Wilson is running in honor of 11-year old Rachel. Rachel has osteogenesis Imperfecta (brittle bones), a very rare genetic disorder.

"Children's Hospital has provided Rachel and her family with compassionate staff, unparalleled expertise and so much more," Wilson stated. "But Rachel is just one patient. There are thousands of kids who wouldn't be here today without Children's. This is why I joined the hospital's marathon team again, and I committed to raising funds to help save kids' lives through its phenomenal research and care."

Wilson will be holding a fundraiser/comedy night at the Greater Quincy Knights of Columbus on Saturday, April 11 at 7 p.m. There will be music, comedy by Greg Murphy, other entertainment, food, a cash bar and a great silent auction and raffle prizes. QYA To Host Massachusetts Senior Hockey Games

The Quincy Bald Eagles, a 70-plus senior hockey team, will faceoff against the Central Massachusetts Rusty Blades and the North Shore Moby Dicks at the the outfield. She is an excellent high school athlete," Ginty added. "Kathleen is also a great athlete. Brittany is maybe our best softball player and Catherine, Amanda and Brianna should all provide the team with production and leadership.

"This is a veteran group. They are smart and they are athletic. These girls are a huge part of the success of not only North Quincy softball, but North Quincy girls athletics overall."

Ginty's junior class should also prove to be vital to team success. Sammi Bonanni will start the year as the team's #1 starter on the hill. Fellow juniors Jess Ainsley, Carolyn Ainsley, Katie Sheridan, Devon McKay and Lindsey Repucci will join Bonanni on the roster. Freshman Emma Ainsley rounds out the varsity roster.

"Sammi will open the season as our ace pitcher," said Ginty. "She has been working hard all off-season with a pitching coach, so she is expecting big things. The Ainsley sisters are strong softball players and Katie will back up Amanda Kelly behind the plate.

"Devon, our starting second baseman and Lindsey should also be major parts of what we expect will be a good year for our team."

The Red Raiders strengths this spring, in Ginty's assessment, will come from solid pitching, catch-everything defense and timely offense and the team will need all three aspects of their game to come together playing in the ultra-competitive Patriot League.

"We should have a strong fielding team once the jitters disappear," said Ginty. "With good defense, our pitching should benefit and if our offense can generate some timely hits we should be in every game on the schedule."

"Playing in the Patriot League we are going to face some really good teams. The pitching in the league looks strong and I see every game being competitive and a challenge. There are no easy wins in this league."

"One of our team goals is to make the post-season and advance past the first round. This team is looking to, not only make the tournament, but when we get there, do some damage."

North Quincy opened their season on Tuesday against Hanover HS and will be hosting Rockland HS on Thursday at Mitchell/McCoy Field at 3:30 p.m.

Patrick Foley Running Boston For CarePacks Inc

Patrick Foley, a 26-year old Quincy resident, will be running in his fourth Boston Marathon on April 20. Foley is running Boston this year in support of CarePacks Inc, a non-profit organization staffed and managed entirely by volunteers that is dedicated to sending care packages to US troops in Iraq and Afghanistan.

Foley has a personal connection with CarePacks Inc and the continuing wars in Iraq and Afghanistan. His brother, Jeremiah, is currently serving in the United States Marine Corps.

"This cause is close to my heart because my younger brother Jeremiah is now in the Marines," Foley said. "Luckily, (he) has a great family and awesome friends who send him packages. Unfortunately, not everyone is as lucky, and there are many people serving our country who do not have anyone to send him or her the most basic amenities. I understand that times are tough for many people, any donation, no matter how big or small will be appreciated."

If you would like to make a donation to Foley's cause make checks payable to: "CarePacks Inc," c/o Patrick Foley, 244 South Central Ave, Quincy, MA 02170.

QMC To Host Green Brush Art Reception

On Tuesday, April 28, Quincy Medical Center (QMC) will host its first annual Green Brush Art Reception from 6 to 9 p.m. at the QMC McCauley Building Lobby, 114 Whitwell St., Quincy.

The hospital lobby and nearby corridors and conference rooms will be transformed into a showcase of Asian art and culture.

The Green Brush Art Reception will raise money for the QMC Asian Services Fund, and will include a silent auction of more than 40 pieces of Chinese artwork provided by the Chinese American Fine Art Society (CAFAS).

The artwork includes brush paintings, calligraphy, and photography, and each piece is adorned with the artist's chop seal. CAFAS artists, include internationally renowned award winning artists such as Mike Mei, George Moy, Richard Yee, and Catherine Tan Chan, PhD.

The evening will also feature calligraphy and brush painting demonstrations and live traditional Chinese music.

The committee co-chairs are Wan Wu, PhD, owner of Kam Man Food in Quincy, and Dr. Chan, founder of the Foundation for Chinese Performing Arts.

In addition to supporting QMC Asian initiatives, the event will also be an opportunity for local businesses and organizations to purchase Chinese art to make their offices more welcoming to Asian customers.

"If the saying is correct that 'a picture is worth a thousand words,' then just think what it would say to Asian customers to see recognizable artwork when they enter an establishment," says Lola Tom, QMC Community Development Officer. "It is a nice way to welcome patrons from all cultures."

The evening will inaugurate QMC's main hallway leading from the front lobby

Living Will Versus DNR Orders

Do you know the differences between a living will and a Do Not Resuscitate order? Some people don't, and unfortunately, some of them are medical and emergency personnel.

A living will and a DNR order are not interchangeable. They are not the same thing.

The living will is your instructions for end-of-life care when you're not able to speak for yourself. It is part of a set of documents called Advance Care Directives that might cover things such as who will direct your care if you can't, and who can admit you to care.

The DNR is an order your doctor gives about not providing resuscitation for respiratory arrest or heart attack -- AFTER having discussed your wishes with you in advance.

I can easily envision a situation where things could go very wrong. Let's say you have a living will and for some reason emergency services personnel are called.

They might ask, "Do you have a living will?" You answer, "Yes." Suddenly they might decide not to treat your condition appropriately and transport you as quickly.

EMTs are not the ones to decipher what you mean in your living will. Their job is to get you to the hospital fast and in the best condition possible. Once there, your wishes in the living will take effect, and the doctors will invoke that ONLY if there are end-of-life concerns.

Check with elder legal services in your area to be sure you understand the ramifications of your Advance Healthcare Directive documents. Laws can differ from state to state. Then discuss it with your doctor to make sure there's no confusion about what you want.

Remember, you can change your mind about your living will anytime you choose.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

A REAL KNOCKOUT

A permanent tooth that has been completely knocked out of its socket may suffer damage to the nerves, blood supply, and underlying bone. Successful replantation of the tooth often depends on how long the tooth has been outside the tooth. Teeth that are set back into place within 30 minutes of being knocked out usually have the best chance of surviving. Thus, there is every reason to act quickly. Pick up the avulsed (knocked out) tooth by the crown and gently rinse it in milk (or water), if soiled. Then, gently insert the tooth back into its socket and hold it firmly in place. If replanting is not possible, place the tooth in milk and proceed to the dentist.

We strive to teach you good oral hygiene. In the long run, you will have better dental health.

We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we stress that health depends on healthy teeth and good dental care. A thorough examination and detailed explanation of all findings and treatment needed are routinely given. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We're always happy to discuss improving your smile, and thus, your total feeling of self-esteem. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Do not touch or scrub the root of an avulsed tooth, as this can adversely affect any remaining tissue and compromise the success of replantation.

Faith Lutheran Church

Choir Easter Cantata April 19

The Choir of Faith Lutheran Church, 201 Granite St., Quincy, will present "Who Is The King?". An Easter Cantata by Lloyd Larson and Joseph Martin, on Sunday, April 19 at 10 a.m.

The Choir is directed and accompanied by Rock Whiting, organist and Choir Director, and narrated by Richard Schulhaus, the Interim Pastor of the church.

Faith Lutheran Church invites the greater Quincy community to experience the music and words "Who Is This King?" Cantata as it recalls the events by those who witnessed the life and ministry of Jesus. They were consistently mixed in their verdicts about who He was. Many claimed Him to be the long-awaited Messiah while others called Him a fraud.

In the end, the unprecedented events of the resurrection provided a compelling affirmation that Jesus was indeed the King of all kings. Faith Choir hopes that the story lives on in our hearts and our lips as together we proclaim Jesus, the risen and living King.

Easter Vigil Worship Service At United Methodist Church

Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston, will celebrate the Easter Vigil on Saturday, April 11 at 7:30 p.m.

"One phrase can sum up this powerful service," said the Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, church pastor, "and that is, 'expect the unexpected.' In a very heart-felt way, the Vigil proclaims the hope and promise of Easter."

Dating from the earliest years of the Christian Church, the Easter Vigil is a service unlike any other, literally leading the congregation from Lent to Easter. It does so through word, song, and, most importantly, symbols that refer to Scripture. Because many people today are unfamiliar with symbolic interpretation, explanatory notes are provided in the text of the Vigil Service.

Rev. Dr. Jarek-Glidden has also updated the ancient service somewhat, so that it "speaks" to today's Christians.

Everyone attending the Vigil is requested to bring a flashlight - an updated and safer version of the traditional candles. Some extra flashlights will be available.

People are also asked to wear comfortable walking shoes. "Some walking is involved in the Vigil, but Quincy Community United Methodist Church has made provisions for those who can't walk far. If you can walk up and down a flight of stairs, you'll be fine," the Rev. Dr. Jarek-Glidden said.

For more information, call the church office at 617-773-3319.

The church is handicapped accessible; the handicapped entrance is located at the front, the door closest to the flag pole.

HOLY WEEK and EASTER SERVICES

Walk Of The Cross Friday

Parishioners from First Baptist Church Braintree and Union Congregational Church in Wollaston will share services, a meal and a 4.5-mile walk.

For the past several years, the two congregations have held worship together in their respective buildings then carried a 16-foot cross through Quincy and Braintree or Braintree and Quincy depending on the year.

This year, Pastor Robert Killeffer of First Baptist will lead worship and preach at a 3 p.m. service at Union Congregational Church.

Following the service, people who desire and are able will join Pastor Killeffer and Pastor Swanson of Union Congregational on a walk to First Baptist Braintree.

Following dinner, Pastor Swanson will lead worship and preach at First Baptist.

Each year, the walk is reversed. Over the years it has been found that Quincy is downhill and Braintree is uphill but whatever the direction both churches enjoy each other's fellowship as they witness their faith.

All people regardless of their church affiliation are invited to participate in the walk and attend the services, as well as the meal, which is free.

For more information, contact Union Congregational Church at 617-479-6661 or First Baptist at 781-843-0190.

DON MCCARTHY
Managing DirectorA THOUGHT
FOR THE WEEK

Easter is the happiest holiday of Christendom, and the chorus of hal-luh-jahs and alleluias sings around the world.

Men with little theology and less sensitivity somehow are awakened by the celebration. Men who have devoted lifetimes to the collection of material things pause to reflect on ultimate goals. For the devout, Easter is affirmation and reassurance.

Easter is a miracle. It is a day when the insight is granted to discover that many of us may be dead within even when we can see and feel and hear and talk. This is a cold tomb for a person who think he is living. Easter reminds him of the warm sunshine of love, the reality of caring and compassion...

Yes, the shadow of darkness falls away as the sun climbs over the horizon and rises into the Easter sky. If in the bright light of this day a frail mortal sees his sham, his prejudice, his insincerity and his insecurity; if he also can see goodness reaching into forever, then he has been a witness to the meaning of Easter...

Coughlin Ordinance Fines, Confiscates Pot

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Police and city councillors Monday described rampant confusion among the city's youngsters as they deal with the fallout from the state's November referendum which decriminalized the possession of one ounce or less of marijuana.

As a result of the vote, penalties are similar to parking tickets, but with fines increasing for repeated offenses.

Speakers repeatedly emphasized that marijuana and related substances are illegal in Massachusetts but last year's vote has clouded the issue.

High school students, middle school students, and even younger children are telling police and DARE (Drug/Alcohol Resistance Education) officers. "What's the big deal? It's legal," Ward 3 City Councillor Kevin Coughlin told the Ordinance Committee.

DARE officers have told Coughlin that in middle and elementary school, "Kids think the possession and consumption is legal."

"There's a public perception that it's legal. It's not legal," said Coughlin who said the schools are taking a pro-active approach.

Councillors reviewed and amended Coughlin's proposed ordinance leveling fines for using marijuana or related substances in public, allowing seizure, and requiring parental notification.

Police Chief Paul Keenan told councillors that law enforcement officials across the state want new laws.

GARY SMYTH

'Merit Principles Of Civil Service Not Followed'

Deputy Chief Smyth Contends Fire Chief Process Not Legitimate

By TOM HENSHAW

Both sides appear to be claiming at least a partial victory in the contest to succeed the retired Timothy Pettinelli as the chief of Quincy's Fire Department.

Last week it was Mayor Tom Koch who laid claim to the decision when the Civil Service Commission dismissed Deputy Chief Gary Smyth's appeal of Koch's appointment of Deputy Chief Joseph Barron as "acting chief." Smyth's turn, noting that the Commission also found an exception to its ruling in the installation of Mr. Barron as "Acting Fire Chief" during the short time period when there was an active eligible list.

GARY SMYTH

But said Smyth, was in contention in the first place.

In his opinion, the mayor should not have the merit principle of civil service.

Kids Confused, Emboldened By Changes In Marijuana Law

"There's been one major consensus. Give local communities the teeth to deal with it," the chief said.

"It was startling to me how (November's referendum) emboldened teens and kids to bring marijuana to school, to share it, to talk about it," said Ward 5 Councillor Douglas Gutro.

Coughlin described a recent incident involving high school students carrying smoking pot behind a restaurant on Hancock Street before school.

The teenagers, a kid the officers why they were called and told the officers "It's legal."

"A lot of the kids are carrying scales now," Police Chief Paul Keenan told the Ordinance Committee add

Star Of Sea Friends Seek New Mediation

By TOM HENSHAW

The five-year struggle by the Friends of Star of the Sea to revive their suppressed Squantum church as a parish has taken a new turn with the filing of a "request for mediation" with the Vatican.

The request urges the Secretary of State to instruct the Vatican Curia to suspend its review of parish closings while diocesan bishops suspend parish closing decrees and enter into mediation with 31 groups of parishioners.

A news release from

Sean Glennon and Maureen Mazrimas, co-chairs of the Friends, called the proposal "a last resort before a deeper crisis emerges."

They envisioned "a possible future decision by diocesan bishops to order the police to remove by force Catholics now on vigil in five Boston-area churches and one church in Adams."

"Our chairperson on the Council of Parishes hand-delivered our mediation proposal to the Holy See's Under Secretary of State on April 7 on behalf of 31 parishioner groups in eight American dioceses," said Glennon.

"The Council says this request was a last resort because of a likelihood of across-the-board denials by the Vatican's highest court of nine pending appeals from Boston parishioners."

He forecast "a possible future decision by the archbishop to resort to police to clear five churches currently in vigil in Boston, resulting in numerous arrests of Catholics praying in their churches."

Underage Drinking Topic For Citywide Parents May 4

The Quincy Public School Health Services team would like to invite all parents and interested community members to a citywide informational evening regarding teenage drinking. The event will take place Monday, May 4 at 7 p.m. in the auditorium at North Quincy High School.

Mayor Thomas Koch, Dr. Richard DeCristofaro, Superintendent of Schools, Norfolk County District Atty. William R. Keating and Quincy Police Chief Paul Keenan will offer opening remarks. Following these opening remarks, Michael Jackman of the DA's Office will introduce the evening's featured speakers.

QPD Lt. Patrick Glynn will offer information about community statistics and current trends in teenage drinking and use of drugs; the law firm of Campbell, Campbell, Edwards & Conroy will follow Glynn with their well-respected program entitled "Be A Parent, Not A Pal." This program focuses on the social host liability laws and a parent's rights and responsibilities.

The evening's final speaker will be Kathi Meyer, the mother of Taylor Meyer, a 17-year old student who died this past October after a night of drinking with friends in the woods.

The evening will conclude with a panel of speakers who will be available to answer any questions and address any concerns from the audience.

If you have any questions or would like additional information, contact the nurse at your child's school or call Jane Kisielius, Coordinator of Health Services at 617-984-8899.

Koch Defends Council, Residents Over C-Mart Allegations

Mayor Thomas Koch Tuesday issued a sharp defense of the City Council and the city's residents after the lawyer lobbying for a new Asian supermarket in North Quincy alleged that opposition to the project is based on racism rather than concerns over traffic and public safety.

In a letter to lawyer Christopher Harrington, Koch calls allegations of racism "baseless and offensive" and a cynical effort to pit neighbor versus neighbor over the C-Mart Supermarket proposed for Hayward Street in North Quincy.

"Regardless of whatever benefit you believe your clients will derive from this tactic, make no mistake that it is a direct insult to the City Council, an insult to me personally, and an insult to the residents of the community of all races who have voiced their opinion on this project," Koch wrote in his letter to Harrington.

A letter that Harrington

sent to the City Council, which holds permitting authority over the project, accusing officials and residents of "obvious racial bias in the community" during the public hearing process, prompted Koch's stern reaction.

Harrington also accused Quincy's Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon of using faulty concerns and questions about the project's impact on the Norfolk Downs and the surrounding area as a pretext to "cover up racial opposition to the project."

"Jack Gillon is one of the most well-respected traffic engineers in the entire Commonwealth, and I am not going to allow his professionalism and skill to be smeared by what to me is obvious grandstanding." Koch said of his reaction to the letter.

Koch said that the attempt to inject race into a permitting process where a number of legitimate issues remain would have no effect on the level of scrutiny given to the project by any member of the administration.

The City Council is still hearing the case and a vote has not been scheduled.

"I am proud of the City of Quincy and its long history of welcoming new residents, and businesses, from many backgrounds and cultures," Koch wrote. "This will not change now or anytime in the near future, despite your efforts to tarnish this record with incendiary accusations."

McNamee Seeks Relief For Marina Bay Residents

Speakers Support Anti-Noise Ordinance

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Marina Bay residents have long suffered noise from a nearby nightclub and, more recently, the beginning of the reconstruction of Neponset Bridge, but there may be some relief ahead.

In response to their problems with loud music and jackhammers throughout the night, Ward 6 City Councillor Brian McNamee proposed a detailed anti-noise ordinance in 2008 and resubmitted his proposal in February.

Committee discussed details of the proposal Monday, recommended some minor changes and postponed voting on the measure until a future meeting when specific information on measuring sound is available.

The proposed ordinance includes penalties for causing excessive noise, details the parameters for measuring noise, and includes a recommendation for a committee to review and update the ordinance twice a year.

In introducing the proposal, McNamee said excessive noise is not only a citywide problem and, likely a national problem but, also, a health concern.

He quoted Dr. Robyn Gershon of Columbia University who said noise can not only make one deaf but cause heart and other health problems.

McNamee won praise and support for the ordinance from fellow councillors at Monday's Ordinance Committee meeting and from other city officials. Police Chief Paul Keenan, City Clerk Joseph Shea, chairman of the Licensing Board, and Building Inspector Jay Duca all testified in favor of the ordinance.

"Everyone knows that noise has been an issue for a long time," Shea said, adding later, "It's needed. It can get accomplished in 2009."

"It's an ordinance that has some teeth," said Chief Keenan. "It does give us one more tool in the toolbox."

Shea and Keenan both described complaints regarding entertainment venues where the noise from open doors or open windows of fends residential neighbors.

"This is a good piece of work and addresses a long-standing problem," said Councillor John Keenan who asked that the council hear from sound experts.

The issue will be reviewed at a future meeting.

QHA Director Advocates City Own Germantown Fire Station Property

The City Council's Public Works Committee got a short history lesson Monday on the Germantown Fire Station by Jay MacRitchie, Executive Director of the Quincy Housing Authority (QHA).

MacRitchie called that fire station a "valuable asset," particularly in view of the QHA housing on the peninsula.

"We have a huge presence in Germantown," said MacRitchie, noting such properties as the eight story O'Brien towers, 284 units on Bicknell St. and 580 family housing units.

MacRitchie asked that the committee approve the paperwork needed to turn the fire station property over to the city.

"Everybody thinks that property is owned by the city," MacRitchie said of the Doane Street fire station location. "It's not."

MacRitchie said the fire station is located on QHA land and the only way to straighten out the issue is by creating a separate lot.

"We need to extend Doane Street by 75 feet," MacRitchie said, explaining that the extension will provide sufficient frontage for the fire station lot to be conveyed to the city.

MacRitchie noted that the committee's vote was basically a housekeeping measure to clarify property ownership.

Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly sought and won assurances from MacRitchie that the Public will continue to have access to the boardwalk via QHA property.

Faxon Park Clean-Up Saturday

Ward 2 City Councillor Daniel Raymondi invited residents to join the Friends of Faxon Park for park clean-up on Sat., April 18 from 9 a.m. to noon.

Raymondi said there'll be Dunkin' Donuts coffee and muffins in the pavilion area for volunteers and described the project as "our first attempt as a community to help the city" at Faxon Park.

The Friends of Faxon Park plan to work to enhance the park and help develop a master plan for the area.

'Playing 18' With Granite Links Golf Pro Chris Sleeper

A hhhh, spring.

When a young man's fancy turns to thoughts of ... for me anyway ... golf.

I recently sat down with Chris Sleeper, PGA director of golf at the Granite Links Golf Club in Quincy, and "played" 18 holes. Actually, I asked him 18 questions about his career as a golf pro, his job at Granite Links, and some of his more memorable moments on the links.

We don't mind if you caddy for us and tag along for all "18."

#1. What do you like most about your job at Granite Links?

C.S.: "I love what I do. I get to come to work at a golf course every day. It's my passion. It's what I love and I love it even more here at Granite Links because I came when there was nothing. I've been an integral part of building it to what it is so my passion and love for the game and golf in depth here because it's been from scratch."

#2. What's the biggest mistake amateur golfers make?

C.S.: "Not practicing their short game enough. Everyone likes to go to the range and pound balls. No one likes to chip and putt but that's where you save the most shots and your scores come down the fastest if you chip and putt better."

#3. How can an aspiring young golfer improve their game?

C.S.: "They should practice and make sure they practice enough short game as well as full-swing. They should get out, play and enjoy the game."

#4. What is the most common remark you hear golfers make at Quarry Hills?

C.S.: How beautiful the views are. We have a couple of areas - probably three or four good spots - where the view of Boston looks like it's right there. They can't believe that they're so close to the city and there's a piece of property that is this high up."

#5. Any advice for first-timers who play this course?

C.S.: "We have four sets of tees. Make sure you play the set of tees that is for your handicapped level. We have a set of forward tees and then we have white, blue and black tees. As long as you play the set of tees that is appropriate - (e.g.) single-digit - scratch handicappers can play the black. If you play the set for your ability, you'll have a lot of fun. The golf course is fair and generous. But some people try to play a set of tees that is a little too far back and it makes it a little hard for them."

#6. Who would be in your ideal foursome?

C.S.: "Tiger Woods, Freddie Couples, my dad, Ray Sleeper, and myself."

#7. Favorite hole at Granite Links?

C.S.: "Granite #5. It's a Par 4 where they had to leave a couple of the granite rock features in the fairway because the ledge was just too big to get rid of. Without having a quarry it reminds you what property you're on with the ledge right there. It's one of the few holes that shapes through the trees. Everything else is links style."

#8. What course would you most like to play but haven't?

C.S.: (No hesitation whatsoever) "Augusta National."

#9a. Who would win: Tiger Woods versus Phil Mickelson in stroke play in at Granite Links?

MEET CHRIS SLEEPER

Age: 35 Hometown: Brighton

Education: Springfield College (1995) and attended Boston College High School.

Handicap: Scratch

Lowest Round: Shot 67 at Oakley Country Club in W-tertown (low round at Granite Links: 69 in a tournament.)

C.S.: "Tiger."

#9b. And in match play?

C.S.: "I still think Tiger. I think overall he's a better golfer. Phil would like this golf course because we have a number of holes that are risk-reward. He loves the risk so he'd take that risk on a lot of them. He could make some really low scores because of that risk but the risk-reward on some of them is you either make an eagle or you make a very large number."

#10: What little known fact about Granite Links would surprise someone?

C.S.: "Not everyone understands that this was once active landfills and that's it's all Big Dig dirt that capped it and made all this possible. Local people know those stories but we have so many people visiting who have no idea of that story. They just know that they came as a tourist to Boston and someone recommended Granite Links and they have no idea about that part of the story - how it was all Big Dig dirt. Once they hear about that, they want to know the whole story. For local people, even a lot of them who used to come up to the quarries are surprised that you can stand here on land now and see the city as opposed to what it was prior."

#11. What makes Granite Links unique in terms of the course layout?

C.S.: "In New England, there are not that many links golf courses. We are a links golf course which means there are very, very few trees. You shape it with little mounds and fescue heather - it's a type of grass that you let grow long and it gets very wispy in the summer. A links style is traditionally near the ocean; the way the crow flies we are very close to ocean here. It's unique because it's not often that you can give an architect literally tons of dirt and let him shape it the way he wants. He was able to make some very distinct holes. We've had some very good players come through and say how all 27 holes are unique."

#12: Will the latest equipment dramatically improve an amateur's game?

C.S.: "If someone comes to us with either very old equipment or has never been fit for equipment, then we can make a dramatic change without actually giving them a lesson. That's because for some people the equipment they have just isn't right for them. You see it a lot in juniors. They have dad's hand-me-downs that are just too heavy or too stiff of a shaft. You see it a lot too in seniors who have had the same stiff shaft for 35 years and don't want to give it up. But if you get those people into regular flex or light-flex shafts, all of a sudden the results they see are drastically different. All the major manufacturers make incredibly great stuff. If you find the correct equipment - loft, shaft - to fit your game, I think the fitting is the most important part. If you get a fitting, I think it can change how you play and help you."

#13. Do you have any holes-in-one to your credit?

C.S.: "I have one - at Abila Country Club in Tampa, Fla. I used a four-iron, 188 yards."

#14. Favorite club you love to pull out of the bag?

C.S.: "I love the putter. I love putting. It's enjoyable and it's fun."

#15. Finish this sentence: "If I weren't a golf professional, I would be ... ?"

C.S.: "I would probably be in sports management of some sort. My degree was in sports management with a minor in business. I can't imagine not being in sports. My internships were all with professional teams in the promotions department doing marketing promotions and that was always fun. I interned with the Springfield Falcons (American Hockey League), Hartford Whalers (former NHL team now the Carolina Hurricanes) and the Boston Celtics for a little bit."

#16. Your favorite PGA golf tournament to watch on TV?

C.S.: "The Masters. It's the first (golf) Major of the year. It's kind of unofficially the spring kick off of the golf season. Everyone gets excited watching it and people start to want to play and they get that itch. It's a great tournament. Augusta National is a shot-maker's golf course. You just can't go out there and overpower it. You have to shape shots and it's fun to watch the pros know where to hit it and where not to miss it. Overall it's such a great tournament and the time of year is perfect, too."

#17. Have you ever attended a men's Major?

C.S.: "I've seen a Ryder Cup in person and two U.S. Opens. The Ryder Cup was at The Country Club in Brookline and the U.S. Opens were at The Country Club in Brookline in 1988 (when Curtis Strange won in an 18-hole playoff) and in 2006 at Winged Foot Golf Club (in Mamaroneck, N.Y.) when Geoff Ogilvy won. I actually worked the sixth tee at the 1988 U.S. Open at The Country Club for a week. That was great - being inside the ropes and seeing all the players. At Winged Foot, I was able to walk inside the ropes with Geoff Ogilvy for his practice round and hung out with him."

#18. Your fondest golf memory?

C.S.: "I was fortunate enough to get invited to play Cypress Point out in Monterey, Calif. It is such an exceptional golf course and it was just our foursome on the golf course - no one else. We had caddies. It was one of those sunny, perfect rounds of golf on a golf course that has been ranked number one in the world for years. Cypress Point is one of those places that you just can't get on. But a friend of mine was able to make a phone call. It was just a wonderful, perfect day. I had three other golf pro friends of mine with me. It's always been a private club and always will be."

Thanks, Chris. Time to hit the range and work on my short game.

SPEAKING OF GOLF, I hope our readers will be kind enough and give me a mulligan -- make that two mulligans -- for a few mistakes in last week's column. Here are the corrections. First, Leo Kelly finished second in the 1973 preliminary election for Ward 1 councillor. It was the late Paul Harold who topped the ballot in the preliminary. Kelly, as noted, won the final election. Second: Peter Kolson lost his bid for councillor at-large in 1999, not 2003. (Greg Hanley won the Ward 1 seat that same year.)

SPEAKING OF MULLIGANS, I got a nice note from a former high school classmate, John Mulligan, who expressed his sympathy over the passing of my dad.

"I did not know Henry but got to know him as a Sun subscriber of five years. He had that great writer's gift of putting you right in the middle of a scene, like you experienced it yourself. I also admired his love of the City of Quincy," John wrote, noting he is a resident of Pollard Place, the site of one of Henry's favorite topics: the Pollard School.

Thanks for all your kind words, John. I appreciate every one.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1916 postcard view of the old Metropolitan Police station on the corner of Cross Street and Furnace Brook Parkway in West Quincy. This was one of two police stations built on the new Metropolitan Parkway that was built through Quincy at that time. The other one was on Wollaston Beach. The road ran from Atlantic along Wollaston Beach to Black's Creek and then on to the Blue Hills Reservation. It was part of the extensive Metropolitan Park and roadway system built throughout Boston and its surrounding communities. The policeman in the doorway was an example of the original community-policing concept. Today, this building still stands but appears pretty much abandoned by the DCR as it is in terrible disrepair. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Says City Is Not Manipulating Fire Chief Appointment

A perusal of the front page of Wednesday's Patriot Ledger indicated that the newspaper continues its campaign of casting Mayor Tom Koch in the least favorable light.

The headline, "State says city erred on fire chief," plus the sub headline, "Civil Service Commission says Quincy acting chief appointment a violation," is in the context of a story in which the Civil Service Commission dismissed an appeal by Deputy Chief Gary Smyth, who argued that he was improperly bypassed for Acting Fire Chief and also as Permanent Fire Chief when the city called for a new civil service exam in November.

One would have to carefully read the Ledger story in order to discern the Koch administration victory on this matter. As the Mayor points out in an accompanying story, many accusations were made that the city was attempting, unjustly, to manipulate the appointment of the Permanent Fire Chief. These accusations have been found baseless by Civil Service.

To prove that a newspaper can get it right, please see The Quincy Sun with the headline "Civil Service Rules: Fire Chief Process Legit."

How can two newspapers reporting on the same story reach such different conclusions? You decide.

Thank You For Supporting Her Trip To Kolkata, India

Dear Friends and Neighbors,

I am a 22-year old college student at St. Michael's College in Vermont and a resident of Houghs Neck. I would like to thank all of you who supported me on my trip to Kolkata, India last May. I wouldn't have been able to do it without you. I went to Kolkata with a group of students from the MOVE program (Mobilization Of Volunteer Efforts) of St. Michael's College in Vermont; we spent three weeks volunteering in Mother Teresa's homes and the New Life/New Hope Orphanage. Together with the other people in my group, we were able to bring over $14,000 to donate to different organizations working for the poor in Kolkata. The poverty there was unlike anything I could have imagined, and it is hard to believe that what I saw was real life for the people who lived there.

Every morning we saw so many people sleeping on the ground, bathing at the faucets on the side of the road, and chewing on twigs to clean their teeth. Their lives were so exposed. Rickshaw drivers pulled passengers and other heavy loads around the city, running through 110-degree heat and thick, polluted air. Some of the drivers didn't have any sandals to wear, so they'd run along the rocky streets in their bare feet, dodging cars, people and animals.

Kolkata is currently home to about 15 million people, and not only is there a serious lack of space for everyone; there is also a lack of jobs and resources. Some people sort through giant piles of trash to find something of value, and many have resorted to begging. There are numerous child beggars. Some of the beggars have been purposefully disfigured by their "bosses" (they've had limbs cut off and been intentionally blinded), so that people will feel more sympathetic towards them and will give them more money.

Mother Teresa's Missionaries of Charity offer free meals to the poor, and they also provide beds and care to children and adults who are sick, injured, orphaned, and/or disabled. Our group volunteered in the different homes she set up, helping feed and clean people, picking lice, washing dishes and laundry, and cutting hair and nails, among other things.

I am going back to Kolkata this May, and this time I'll be co-leading the students with Annie Brabazon, another Quincy native. If you would like to make any contribution we would be extremely grateful, as even a small amount can be very helpful over there. All donations are tax-deductible, please make any checks out to MOVE International Service Trip, and mail them to: MOVE, Box 395, One Winooki Park, Colchester, VT 05439.

Thank you,
Julia Berberan

Dr. Charles Djerf Honored For Civic Contributions

By FRANK McCAULEY

More than 700 people honored Dr. Charles Djerf, noted pediatrician and civic leader, at a dinner at Valle's Restaurant in Braintree. Highlights included School Committee member Charles F. Sweeney, dinner co-chairman, who presented a $2,500 check to Dr. Djerf for his Charitable Trust. He was also presented with the chair he occupied during his 16 years as a member of the Quincy School Committee.

This Week
1970
39 Years Ago

Head table guests included School Committee Vice-Chairman James F. McCormick, Sr., School Superintendent Lawrence P. Creedon and Louis S. Cassani, dinner co-chairman and emcee. Mayor James R. McIntyre brought the greetings of the city.

'BAD NEWS' FOR TAXPAYERS DUE BY APRIL 30

Quincy taxpayers will know "the bad news" by April 30. Mayor McIntyre said that he expects the 1970 tax rate to be set by then.

McIntyre declined to forecast what the figure will be but said, "It will be a substantial increase."

Other City Hall sources, however, think the 1970 rate could hit the $130 or more plateau. They see a hike of $15 or $16.

Ward Six Councillor J. Vincent Smyth, chairman of the Council's Finance Committee, has already predicted that this year's record high $39.9 million municipal budget alone would mean at least a $10 rate hike.

HN LIBRARY OPEN FOR AT LEAST A YEAR

The opening of the $600,000 Adams Shore Branch of the Thomas Crane Public Library will not this year affect the closing of the Houghs Neck Branch Library.

Mayor McIntyre told the Quincy Sun, "We are going to keep it open for at least a year until we can see if the circulation can be maintained." (Editor's note: The Houghs Neck Branch Library would eventually close.)

Past Grand Knights Joseph Landry, Paul Kelly and their wives were in attendance at the Charity Ball sponsored by the Quincy Knights of Columbus. Mr. Kelly is a member of the Quincy School Committee. The Quincy High School Class of 1950 was planning its 20th year anniversary to be held at the Ridder Country Club in Whitman. Committee members included Nancy (Keelon) Chamberlain and Violet (Johnson) Gills, co-chairs, Donna (Chase) Malmberg, secretary-treasurer and Norma (Perry) Carlson, ticket chairman. Marie's Kitchen

Rita's Potatoes, Alfredo Style

I think the average person loves potatoes of any kind from mashed to roasted.

Last week, I had the roasted white and sweet potatoes recipe.

This week as my daughter Rita was having her usual morning coffee with me she told me about a delicious recipe for potatoes that she made for Sunday dinner.

It's what I call a gourmet side dish and pretty simple to make. I'm sure once you try these, you will enjoy them as much as any other potato. It's about the same sauce as would be used for fettuccine Alfredo.

POTATOES ALFREDO STYLE
5 pounds of potatoes sliced about a quarter of an inch or so.

3 cups half and half heavy cream
1 stick unsalted butter
salt and pepper to taste

3/4 cup. fresh Parmesan cheese (grated)
Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

Lightly butter a baking pan.

After you peel and slice the potatoes, par boil them until they are fork tender. (Don't overcook) If you have a slicer, it naturally is much easier to prepare this dish.

Place the first layer on the bottom of the baking pan. Pour some of the sauce over them. Then another layer of the potatoes and so forth until they are done. Rita used Kosher salt (or other) and seasoned each layer with the salt. She said this potato recipe needs the extra salt.

Top it off with more grated cheese and bake covered for about 30 minutes, then uncovered for about 15 minutes more. She served the potatoes with roast stuffed lamb, but they are delicious with anything.

Fundraiser To Kick Off City's Tourism Season

Discover Quincy Spring Gala May 2 At Quincy Marriott

The first "Discover Quincy Spring Gala" will be held Saturday, May 2 at the Boston Marriott Quincy, 1000 Marriott Drive, from 6:30 to 11 p.m.

The event is being sponsored by the Boston Marriott Quincy. Proceeds from the event will be used to promote tourism in the City of Quincy.

Tourism is an integral component and significant contributor to the City of Quincy's economic development plans and is the third largest industry in the State of Massachusetts. While visitors come to Quincy throughout the year, the tourism season begins with opening day for the Adams National Historic Parks, which is Monday, April 19.

According to local tourism officials, the overwhelming success of the HBO miniseries "John Adams" has had a direct positive impact on Quincy's economy and its popularity. While the miniseries certainly created a "buzz" about the City of Presidents, the series alone did not drive the almost 400,000 visitors that came to Quincy in 2008.

Discover Quincy, the City of Quincy's official tourism office, capitalized on the success of "John Adams" by implementing a well-structured domestic and international marketing approach. But like many other non-profit, public/private partnerships, Discover Quincy has been affected by Quincy's fiscal climate.

"We saw the writing on the wall earlier this year and recognized that state monies and other funding sources that we have relied upon in the past were not going to be available," said Mark Carey, executive director of Discover Quincy. "We needed to get creative and think of new ways to bring in revenue that would enable us to continue to foster the momentum that our marketing efforts have gained."

The result is the first annual Discover Quincy Spring Gala fundraiser. Through the generosity of David Cesario, general manager of the Boston Marriott Quincy, Discover Quincy is able to hold the event at a beautiful venue that is conveniently located.

Attendees will enjoy a silent auction, cocktail reception and seated dinner, followed by dancing to the lively sounds of "Justice", a soul and funk band that gets the crowd on their feet by playing tribute to such legendary acts as The Four Tops, The Temptations, and the Jackson 5, as well as Bell Big Devote and hits of today! Tickets are $65 each and all monies raised will be used to promote tourism in the City of Quincy. Visit www.discoverquincy.com or call (617) 657-0527 for more information or to purchase tickets.

Discover Quincy is a non-profit organization that was formed in 2004 to promote tourism in the City of Quincy. Discover Quincy's offices are located at 1250 Hancock Street, Suite 127N, Quincy, MA, next door to the National Parks Visitors Center. Telephone: (617) 657-0527, email: info@discoverquincy.com, website: www.discoverquincy.com.

Please join us for a wonderful evening and celebrate Quincy at the first annual "Discover Quincy Spring Gala"

Quincy High School Takes Moody's Mega Math Challenge

Most teenagers could sleep in when Daylight Saving Time began March 8.

But for Quincy High School's two teams of Moody's Mega Math Challengers, it was up and at 'em.

From 7 a.m. until 9 p.m., they were hard at work analyzing President Obama's stimulus package.

Why?

How does winning a share of $80,000 sound?

Four hundred sixty-eight teams, each consisting of three to five students, gathered in kitchens, libraries and classrooms—actually anywhere they chose—to apply mathematical analysis to the problem that was a mystery to them until they downloaded it at 7 a.m.

The 2009 M3 Challenge problem, HYPERLINK "http://m3challenge.siam.org/login/login.php""$787 Billion: Will the Stimulus Act Stimulate the U.S. Economy?" called for student teams to mathematically assess the elements of the package that are most likely to produce the greatest improvements in employment.

Teams quantified their findings using mathematical modeling techniques, developed and defended their models, and justified their conclusions. They were required to gauge how quickly elements of the stimulus package are expected to generate results, to ascertain how they will know if the package is "working," and to indicate a confidence level in their predictions.

Additionally, they were asked to discuss whether a second stimulus package would be needed, and if so, how large it should be and how it should be structured.

Finally, they were challenged to propose other, better ways to stimulate the economy and increase U.S. employment. Using any inanimate sources of information, teams had until 9 p.m. to upload their solutions to the Challenge website.

"We discussed and argued about the problem," said Xiao Ting Zheng about her team's efforts. "Many times during the discussion we would get excited and start to scream and laugh. Sometimes, we would get into arguments because we disagreed with one another on some points. But these arguments would soon turn into some productive thinking.

"I enjoyed this experience of intellectual interactions with my friends. Even though the problem was hard, we did try our best to solve it."

Sponsoring the challenge is the Moody's Foundation, the charitable organization of the Moody's Corporation. The competition organizer is SIAM, the Society for Industrial and Applied Mathematics. The goal of this entirely Internet-based challenge is to encourage students to pursue math-related studies and careers. Schools in New England and the mid-Atlantic states, from Maine to Washington DC, are eligible to participate.

The top six teams will present their papers and receive their awards at Moody's corporate headquarters in Manhattan on May 5.

Delahunt Hosts Mortgage Foreclosure Prevention Forum

Rep. William Delahunt will sponsor a "Foreclosure Prevention Workshop" Thursday, April 30 from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St.

Delahunt will join with the Quincy Community Action Program and the staff of Greater Boston Legal Services to help consumers understand how the foreclosure process works and the various loan "work-out" plans being promoted by the FDIC and other agencies.

Delahunt said, "Thousands of homeowners living on the South Shore are at risk of foreclosure due in the proliferation of high risk mortgages and the current downturn in the economy."

Others participating in the workshop will be senior representatives from the Massachusetts Attorney General's Office and the Mass Division of Banks.

For more information, call Delahunt's office at 1-800-794-9911.

Kids Confused, Embolded By Changes In Marijuana Law

ing that "an ounce is a significant amount."

In fact, Lt. Patrick Glynn, the city's Drug Enforcement officer, said an ounce of pot would measure about four fingers in a sandwich bag, and provide enough marijuana for 50 to 60 joints.

"Some kids carry a scale to make sure they have less than an ounce," Glynn said Tuesday, adding the situation is serious but "It's not an epidemic."

"Many of them are bold," Glynn said and will tell an officer, "I have less than an ounce. They believe they're exempt from the law."

DARE officers report to Glynn and have told him that the program's target group, those in 5th and 6th grade, are somewhat baffled.

"The vote has changed everything," said Glynn who said younger students are raising questions. "Why, last year, it was bad for us?" and, "All of a sudden, it is no longer an arrestable offense."

DARE officers outline all the dangers of marijuana as the "gateway drug," such as mood swings, behavior changes, and the diminishing of inhibitions and initiative, but they're still battling the perception that it's harmless.

"It's difficult enough being a child, growing up," Glynn told the councillors who approved Coughlin's ordinance which will now be presented to the full council.

Coughlin submitted the original proposal in January in response to passage of Article 2 in November.

At the time, Coughlin noted he has worked in the probation field for some 30 years and has seen the problems facing children, youths and families affected by substance abuse.

Three weeks later, several dozen opponents of stricter fines picketed City Hall and attended the council meeting.

Coughlin said Monday that he streamlined the language of the ordinance passed Monday so that it mirrors penalties imposed for public drinking of alcohol. He noted that dozens of other cities and towns have instituted similar laws in response to the passage of Article 2.

"We're not doing this in a vacuum," said Coughlin. "The change in the law created an issue."

The ordinance includes increasing the fines for subsequent episodes, the requirement that offenders give their real names, forfeiture of the marijuana or other illegal substance, and notification of parents. Coughlin removed a section which would allow the confiscation of drug paraphernalia.

Friends Seek New Mediation

would affect eight Catholic dioceses --- Boston, Buffalo, Cleveland, New York, New Orleans, Scranton, Springfield, Mass., and Allentown, Pa.

Star of the Sea Church was suppressed as a parish by Sean Cardinal O'Malley in October, 2004, and allowed to reopen as a chapel in July, 2005, for one Sunday Mass a week, sharing a priest with Sacred Heart of North Quincy.

"We would ask O'Malley for the right to conduct weddings, baptisms and funerals," said Glennon the day after Easter Sunday. "We are still waiting for an organ and religious education classes."

"We had a great turnout yesterday, about 400 people. Usually we have around 250. That shows that we are still a vibrant Catholic community."

The Friends have appealed the suppression of their church to the Plenary of the Apostolic Signatura, the Supreme Court of the Vatican, and that appeal had been denied by a panel of cardinals.

They have appealed the denial of their first appeal to the full bench of the court and that appeal has been pending now for 10 months.

"There is no realistic chance for relief, given that the Plenary has not granted any parishioner appeals in the past 40 years," said Glennon Mazrimas. "All efforts by parishioners for a pastoral dialogue with their bishops have failed."

"The Council argues that the Roman Catholic Church in America is now in free fall with 1,000 parishes closed or scheduled to close; thousands more are in jeopardy, and one third of persons raised as Catholics now describe themselves as 'former Catholics.'"

Speaking at a press conference in Wellesley, Mazrimas said that O'Malley has "acknowledged that when you suppress a parish, one-third of the worshippers will go to the welcoming parish, one third will go somewhere else and one third will stop going altogether."

"Our figures show that we lost 40 per cent of our worshippers. Can the Catholic Church simply write off one third of those who participate?"

Ernie Lijoi's 18-Year Career Subject Of 'Street Business' Book

Former Quincy Detective Reveals 'Deep Cover' Secrets

By LAURA GRIFFIN

These days, Ernie Lijoi, Sr. catches 200-pound tarpons and 30- to 40-pound groupers in the waters off the Gulf Coast of Florida and when he's not fishing, he's writing his memoirs.

Such a tranquil life is a far cry from his nearly two decades as a detective with the Quincy Police Department. In those years, he took on a new identity and set the bait for mobsters and drug dealers.

Lijoi worked with local, state and federal agencies to solve some major crimes from the 1970's to the late 1980's. He was "deep undercover" in his early years with the police department.

In fact, Lijoi, actually, became "Eddie Pannoni," and donned all the trappings of a street thug and mobster.

And, yes, he did know of Whitey Bulger and Steve "The Rifleman" Flemmi on Quincy Shore Drive and Bulger's girlfriend in Squantum, but those were not among his major assignments.

Major Targets

During his five years deep undercover, he acted the part of a scruffy bearded hood.

In one instance, he tipped off local police when a 58-foot boat loaded with some 5,000 pounds of drugs went aground on a treacherous below-water sandbar off Quincy's coastline.

Lijoi worked with the city, state and federal teams that captured Mafia figures and a serial killer and located millions of dollars in stolen bonds, drugs and weapons.

In the largest operation in the late 1970's, the project trapped over "100 different people" running a drug network that spanned two continents "from New Hampshire to Columbia."

DEEP UNDERCOVER COP Ernie Lijoi, Sr. (left) adopted the identity of "Eddie Pannoni" (right), an underworld street thug, while working for the Quincy Police Department. Lijoi wrote about those years in a trilogy beginning with "Street Business" which will be in bookstores this month.

The major targets were crime bosses and drug lords, not the small time dealers.

"You don't stop the flow by picking up the little people," Lijoi said, adding there are always plenty of new recruits willing to do the legwork for the small jobs.

Lijoi is spilling the details in a trilogy he is writing with Larry Matthews, reporter for National Public Radio.

The series begins with a 238-page thriller, "Street Business" which describes not only his police work, but the effects of such dangerous work on his family.

"Street Business," available on the internet and in local and national bookstores, fictionalizes some of the events.

Family Sacrifice

This first book focuses on his work and his family.

"My family functioned around my career. This is my way of telling our story and how the families of all police officers live. They wait and worry at home while we work to support justice."

During a telephone interview from Florida, Lijoi said that the names and addresses have been changed in the book to protect the innocent. "If I were to say who they were, they could be killed."

Lijoi asked that we not use the street where the drug house was located in order to protect the current residents.

However, he does expect some of his Quincy colleagues to recognize themselves in the pages.

Quincy Officers

Lijoi's career in Quincy began accidentally when he was a transit cop and nabbed a drug dealer on the Red Line. He turned the case over to Quincy police who were impressed with his background and knowledge.

Former Police Lt. Walter Lynch asked if Lijoi would transfer from the T Police to Quincy for a 30-day temporary assignment. Chief Francis Finn headed the department at the time.

"That 30 days wound up being 18 years," said Lijoi who worked closely with Lynch, former Chief Robert Crowley, then a captain, Sgt. Angus McEachern and the late Capt. David Rowell.

After he was hired, those officers were the only ones who knew of his police status and Crowley received his reports, said Lijoi.

Born and raised in Brooklyn, NY, Lijoi said that his native dialect was a big plus in impressing and being accepted by the local mobsters. "My Brooklyn accent made me very believable."

That accent was just about all that was real about

Lijoi who courted danger from both sides of the law for some five years.

"You don't have your own name, no I.D. of your real name. You are only your street name and street person."

In those days of deep undercover, Lijoi would stay at a Houghs Neck mob-house for days at a time.

"This house was owned by drug dealers and I spent a lot of time there," said Lijoi who'd call home on a pay phone. "I'd tell them I'm calling a bookie."

Red Telephone

When he did head toward his Dedham home, he'd take different routes every time, backtrack, and hide all traces of his destination.

Despite those efforts, the mob role still penetrated his home through a 'red telephone' which rang 24-hours a day with orders from drug dealers or suppliers.

"The deep undercover I only did for about five years," said Lijoi who said he's been on a hit list twice. "You just become too well known. You don't want to get killed."

And the work not only took its toll on Lijoi, but also on his family.

"It was tough on the family," Lijoi said, recalling the time his young sons discovered his work. "They would have a lot of questions about drugs."

The lifestyle was even harder on his wife who helped him prepare his reports and backed up his decisions.

Eventually, the worry was too much.

"She had to go see a psychiatrist," said Lijoi of the pressure of his double identity and the fears for his safety and the safety of his family.

Lijoi was a Quincy police officer from 1977 to the early 1990's. Prior to that he served four years with the Air Force and was honorably discharged. He graduated from Northeastern University with a degree in the Science of Law.

The Lijoi's are now happily retired in Florida.

Lijoi's second book "Shoveling the Tide" has been completed and is scheduled to be released in December.

The final book, "Chasing Snow" is being completed.

Comfort Publishing, Concord, NC are publishing the books.

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

Using Gasoline Demands Respect

Here's a subject that most of us are familiar with while my concern is that our familiarity will exclude respect for its use, the subject being gasoline. I am prompted to write this article having read of an incident involving a teen living in Hanson. As the State Fire Marshal conveys, "...a group of juveniles were in a local sandpit inappropriately and unsafely experimenting with gasoline." As a result, one boy was burned on 45% of his body surface area and is currently being treated at a Boston hospital. The circumstances of the burn injury are being investigated further.

According to the Mass. Burn Injury Reporting System, in 2007, one third of all victims of gasoline-related burns are youths age 15 to 24. Nationally, teens aged 10 to 14 years old are the most likely group to get in trouble with gasoline and be treated for gasoline related burn injuries. The State Fire Marshal believes as I do, that our frequency of use to power engines by gasoline breeds familiarity, which can lessen a healthy respect for it. He therefore suggests that parents should speak with their children about the care required to handle gasoline, the how and when to do so as well. My father did so for me years ago, and the lesson has remained with me all these years. I'm grateful for it.

While we're on the subject, the Marshal conveys that there has been a recent increase in the number of incidents in which motor fuel; gasoline in particular, has been dispensed into unapproved or illegal containers. Consequently I'll share here some of the regulations included in the Commonwealth's Comprehensive Fire Safety Code.

One regulation prohibits the sale or transfer of any container for use in handling or transporting flammable or combustible liquids unless that container meets one of the following requirements: it is built to DOT standards, is approved by a nationally recognized testing laboratory, or approved by the State Fire Marshal.

Another regulation prohibits the dispensing of gasoline into any container not meeting the above requirements. The maximum container size is limited to 7 gallons and the total quantity to 21 gallons per vehicle without a permit. This section also prohibits transportation of containers within the passenger compartment of a vehicle.

When filling an approved gas container, always place it on the ground, insert the pump nozzle and bring it in contact with the inside of the container. This will reduce the risk of static electricity igniting the vapors.

Do not store gasoline within a building used for habitation. I've focused on this issue in a prior article where occupant safety depends on it while it's of major importance to responding firefighters if needed.

Gasoline vapors ignite at a very low temperature. Fumes are heavier than air and can travel some distance to potential ignition sources. Therefore keep anything that can provide heat to ignite gasoline vapors well away from fumes. A spark, a lit cigarette, or a pilot light is enough for fumes to flash. A static spark created when gasoline is IMPROPERLY USED to clean a paintbrush can ignite with devastating consequences. Gasoline is a tool, one frequently used, while it demands respect!

Palmucci To Host Drug Awareness Forum For Parents April 29

Brian Palmucci, candidate for Ward 4 City Council, will sponsor a community-wide drug awareness forum Wednesday, April 29 from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Morrisette Post, located at 81-83 Liberty St.

Palmucci, a former Assistant District Attorney and current state prosecutor, said the goal of the event is to inform parents on how to recognize the signs that their children are using drugs.

"Drug abuse and addiction is a serious problem that deserves our immediate attention," said Palmucci. "If elected to the City Council I will use my law enforcement experience to fight the city's growing drug problem."

"The residents of Ward

4 deserve a City Councilor who will fight drug dealers and stand up for our neighborhoods."

The featured speaker at the forum will be recently retired Detective Lt. John F. McDonough, who will share his experiences from the nearly four decades he spent dealing with the city's drug dealers and addicts.

Also participating in the forum will be parents who will discuss their experiences with their drug addicted children.

Information will be provided regarding the different substance abuse treatment options available and how to go about arranging for treatment of a loved one.

McDonough, who headed the Quincy Police Department's Drug Control Unit before retiring last month, will speak to parents about such topics as how to recognize the behaviors of a teen drug user, or where to turn if drug use is discovered.

McDonough will offer suggestions and advice for parents on how to prevent drug use.

"An informed parent is just a better parent," said McDonough. "There's no secret here. Just be a good parent, and everything else takes care of itself."

All are invited and encouraged to attend the forum. For more information, contact Brian Palmucci at 617-233-3802.

Senate OK's State Pension Reform Bill

The State Senate has approved a bill that will close loopholes in current pension laws for state workers to end abuses and save taxpayers money.

The state's pension system is an important benefit for state workers who chose generally lower paying careers over the private sector. "The average pension for a public employee is $24,000 a year," said Senator Michael Morrissey.

"Of course, there are a few examples of individuals who have exploited loopholes to increase pension payments at a high cost to the Commonwealth and steps have been taken to address those issues."

Here is what the Senate bill does to close the loopholes:

- Redefines "regular compensation" to exclude housing allowances, use of motor vehicles and travel.
- Removes the "one day, one year" provision that allows elected officials to claim an entire year of credible service for working one day in a calendar year.
- Eliminates the ability of municipal officials to receive pension credit for service in an unpaid position.
- Reforms the current disability retirement benefit for individuals who are injured while temporarily filling in for their supervisor and obtaining a higher pension or benefit based on the salary of the person whose job they were filling.
- Removes a provision that allows elected officials to claim a "termination allowance" based on the failure to be nominated or re-elected.

• Reforms dual-service pensions so that an individual cannot combine the compensation from two positions to artificially increase one's pension. An individual who was a member of two or more systems will receive benefits as if retiring separately from each system.

One amendment would prevent any local or state employee as of Jan. 1, 2010, who makes less than $5,000 a year from receiving any pension credit and another, filed by Morrissey, would raise the vesting time for all persons to 10 years.

The bill also directs the Blue Ribbon Commission of Pension Reform to review broader changes and issues within the system and make comprehensive recommendations to the Legislature by Sept. 1.

The measure now goes to the House of Representatives for further action.

--Lt. Dan Minton

On Saturday, April 4, 2009, at approximately 6:10 a.m., Officers James Parisi and Chuck Landry were dispatched to Granite Street on a "911" breaking and entering call in progress.

The caller stated that the suspect was a man with a knife. Enroute to the call, the officers were notified that the suspect was armed with a box cutter and wore a plaid jacket. As both officers approached the house, the dispatcher, who was still on the phone with the caller, stated that the suspect was now outside in front of the house. Seconds later, the two officers arrived on scene and spotted the suspect and as they exited their cruisers, a female pointed and yelled, "That's him! That's him!"

The officers approached the suspect, who was on the sidewalk behind a parked car. The suspect had an unknown object in his hand, which was close to his waistline. Both officers drew their guns and ordered the suspect to drop what was in his hand, but he did not heed their instructions. Officers Landry approached the suspect from the side and repeated his command, but the suspect did not comply. Officer Parisi ordered the suspect to the ground, but the suspect said he wasn't going to do that.

The suspect stepped forward and placed a box cutter and cell phone on the roof of the car in front of him. Still unsure if the suspect had additional weapons, the suspect was again ordered to the ground, but again he refused. The officers then approached the suspect and handcuffed him. As the officers conducted a pat frisk, Officer Landry asked the suspect his name, and his response was, "If they wanna (sic) press charges, they can press charges." No other weapons were found on the suspect.

LT. DAN MINTON

A Job Well Done

Once the situation was under control, Officer Landry interviewed the people standing outside the house while Officer Parisi questioned the suspect. When asked why he was there, the suspect said that he was going to work at Labor Ready on Hancock Street and that he was coming from home, which was Father Bill's Place. The officer questioned the suspect as to why he was clearly found in the wrong direction, which resulted in the suspect stating that he was coming from a friend's house down the street, but could not identify the friend's name or where he/she lived.

The suspect was asked if he knew anyone in the house across the street and he said that he knew a man from working with him at Labor Ready. When asked what the people inside were going to say about him being there, the suspect said, "They would tell you that I broke into their house."

Officer Parisi asked why they would say that and it was at this point that the suspect said he didn't want to incriminate himself, so questioning stopped. Officer Parisi then examined the exterior of the home where the break occurred. He noted that there was a window screen on the side of the house that was sliced and under this window was a blue hard rubber storage bin. The bin was upside down so it could be used as a step up to the window, which was unlocked. A widow adjacent to this one also had the screen cut, but that window was locked from the inside. Outside the widow was a blue backpack that no one in the house knew who owned it.

Officer Parisi interviewed the occupants of the apartment. One female stated that she woke up to use the bathroom and as she returned to her bed, she saw a man in the living room standing near the wall holding his hand over his face. She asked the man who he was several times but he didn't respond. She then saw the box cutter in the man's hand and yelled as she stepped toward her bedroom, "Who are you?" Without answering, or removing his hand from his face, the man stepped toward her.

She began yelling for help as she backed up further. The man looked in the bedroom and this was when one of the males in the apartment chased the suspect out the front door. The female victim was visibly shaken, repeating over and over how scared she was and how she feared being harmed by him. Officer Parisi then interviewed the male who chased the suspect out of the apartment. He said that he was in bed sleeping when he heard the yells for help—that someone was in the apartment. He got up, spotted the suspect, who then ran out the front door, down the hill toward the school.

While the female victim called the police, the male victim searched briefly for the suspect. A total of four witnesses provided similar accounts. When asked if they knew the suspect, one resident said that he knew him from work, but they were not friends and there was no reason why he would be in their house. One female victim said that she met the suspect about three months ago when she saw him in front of the house looking for cans. She said she gave him some cans, but he had not seen him since.

Based on the evidence, Officer Parisi arrested the 40-year old homeless man for "Home Invasion, Assault by Means of a Dangerous Weapon and Malicious Damage." The box cutter and blue backpack were taken as evidence. Back at the station, a criminal record check showed the suspect has a lengthy criminal record and is listed as a Level 2 Sex Offender.

In summary, it was unknown how long the suspect was in the house. The last people to go to bed were two females at 4 a.m. It does not appear as if the suspect attempted to steal or vandalize anything. According to witnesses, he did not appear to be concerned when the female victim spotted him and it was only after another male confronted him that he fled. Nice work!

Beechwood Knoll School Students Go Green

By CHERIE DEWAR

Young children are small and can't do much to help the planet, right?

Quite to the contrary, as proven at Beechwood Knoll Elementary School (BKS). In January, BKS's second grade class began their participation in National Green Week (a week-long initiative), an idea hatched by Victoria Waters, founder of the Green Education Foundation based out of Walpole. The program aims to teach children that their eco-friendly efforts can make a difference in combating the harms waste-fuel can inflict on the planet.

BKS kicked off their program with a tally of how many drink containers were thrown out over a week-long period. Wheeling their Green Machine among the classrooms, the second graders collected a whopping 914 drink containers from the whole school in just one week.

The school explored ways they could reduce that amount, with the goal to reduce that quantity significantly by the end of March. Did they succeed? Indeed!

The final tally taken on March 29 came to 551 drink containers for the whole school. The second grade class bested that by reducing their snack trash weight 87%! Originally 186 containers weighing 16 pounds were collected among the three second grade classrooms, and this was reduced to 61 containers weighing only 2 pounds at the completion of the National Green Week initiative.

Thomas Natola organized the program with fellow second grade teachers Gina Amaral and Debbie DeAngelis.

Using educational DVD's suggested by National Green Week, short "Meet the Greens" cartoons from the PBS website, and daily green questions posed to the whole school generated discussions among teachers and students. One hundred and fifty reusable shopping bags were donated to the school. Students earned a bag to take home after writing down what environmentally friendly action they would take.

These ideas were posted in the hallway and included, "I'll turn off the water when I brush my teeth," and, "I'll use both side of the paper when I color."

The project was financed by Beechwood's Parent Teacher Organization, along with a donation from Quincy's Volunteer Recycling Committee. The second grade's green-up efforts were rewarded with green kits purchased from the National Green Week organizers. Reusable shopping bags filled with a plastic, BPA free water bottle, a t-shirt reading "Together We Can Make A Difference", and two reusable snack containers.

The success of the program and the green kit was Home Inspection Helps Ensure Dream Deals Don't Turn Into Nightmares

(ARA) - You found your dream deal on a foreclosed home, but will that great price tag come with a different kind of higher cost? Buying a repossessed property, short sale or a home offered at a bargain price -- because of its condition -- can mean you're assuming much higher risks.

Repossessed and short sale homes are often abandoned and neglected, leaving them with much more potential for unforeseen structural defects, plumbing, electrical, heating systems, environmental issues and many other problems. Fixing these woes can cost far more than the financial savings from a distressed property purchase. There also may be unknown defects, such as mold or radon, that could affect your family's health and safety.

Still, it is possible to get a dream deal on a distressed home. Before you sign on the dotted line, be sure to have the house thoroughly inspected by a professional, so you can reduce these potential risks as well as financial costs. A home inspector can help you identify potential problems in the home you're considering buying, so you know in advance what you're getting into -- and what you should walk away from.

There are many ways to find a home inspector, including consulting family, friends, your attorney, real estate professional or mortgage professional. You can also find information on inspectors across the country on www.ashi.org, the Web site of The American Society of Home Inspectors, the organization that sets the standards of practice for the inspection industry.

Homebuyers aren't the only ones who can benefit from a home inspection. If you're selling your home, having it inspected before you list it may help sell your home in less time and for more money. Moreover, homeowners can benefit from maintenance inspections, such as an energy inspection, which can help reduce monthly energy costs, and a home safety inspection that can help seniors stay in their homes longer.

If you're thinking of hiring a home inspector, ASHI offers a few tips on how to evaluate candidates:

- * Visit the "Find a Home Inspector" section of ASHI's Web site to find a qualified ASHI inspector in your area. Many inspectors also list their specialties and other background information, such as their experience, on this site.

- * Ask the inspector how he operates. What format will the report be in? Ask for sample reports.

- * Talk with each candidate to see who is the best fit for your needs and comfort, as well as for the property being inspected.

- * Check all references. Don't automatically go with the lowest price. Remember, the old adage is often true -- you get what you pay for.

- * Attend the inspection to ensure you get the best value -- and most information -- for your investment.

A home inspector can be your best ally in ensuring your dream deal doesn't turn into a nightmare. Visit www.ashi.org and take the Virtual Home Inspector Tour to see and hear more about home inspections.

Spring Switcheroo

With April here and winter fast on its way out (and completely gone in some parts of the country), it's time to set up your home for the warmer months. Spring cleaning can be thought of as a three-stage operation: cleaning up winter damage, switching out cold-weather protection for hot-weather guards, and scheduling additional do-it-yourself projects through the next couple of seasons.

Winter storms tend to leave debris and damage on and around a home's exterior and yard. Start with a walkaround inspection of the roof and gutter system, removing loose debris like tree branches and noting areas that need more attention, like torn shingles and damaged gutter sections. Climb down and check out the house siding and foundation for cracks or other damage. Inspect the ground around the house to make sure water isn't pooling against the foundation and that roots from nearby plants aren't trying to take hold next to the masonry.

Once you've noted repairs and cleanup that need to be done, schedule the time you need to complete them. Clearing fallen branches and other stuff from the rooftop and gutters are an early-spring priority, while patching or replacing that torn shingle can probably wait for a hot, sunny day (as long as there is no leak underneath it).

Now is the time to switch out storm windows for screens, and to throw open the sash to allow fresh air inside your home. In the past, spring was a time to switch old linens and curtains for new ones, and it's not a bad tradition to follow -- if only to wash the curtains at least, and get rid of accumulated dust.

You'll also need to switch the air filter in the heating system, and to prep your air-conditioner (whether whole-house or window unit) for use by cleaning or switching its filter and giving it a test run.

Finally, in the garage, swap those cold-weather supplies -- snow shovels, scrapers and ice melt -- for lawn care and garden tools. Lightly oil the edges of metal shovels before storing upright.

HOME TIP: Sharpen and lightly oil the metal parts of garden tools before their first springtime use; to store, hang them vertically on a storage rack or perforated corkboard.

Norfolk County Quarterly Real Estate Activity Report

Norfolk County Registrar of Deeds William P. O'Donnell has issued a report on real estate activity in Norfolk County for the quarter ending March 31.

Total dollar volume of real estate sales in Norfolk County for the quarter period from January to March, 2009 totaled $609 million. A year-to-year comparison to the quarter January to March, 2008, shows this total value off 30.4 percent.

The total number of 2,641 deeds recorded during the 2990 quarter was down 10.7 percent, indicating that the market activity did not decline as sharply as values.

The average sales price of deeds over $1,000 (both residential and commercial properties) fell to $492,726, a decline of 16.8 percent from the corresponding quarter in 2008.

"Although the Norfolk County real estate market continues to reflect the problems that confront the national real estate market, the average price during the just completed quarter was off only a fraction of a percent from the previous quarter - October to December, 2008," O'Donnell said.

Mortgage recording activity, buoyed by the drop in interest rates, showed an increase of 14.4% on a year-to-year basis with 10,003 new mortgages being recorded in the quarter, although total mortgage value for the quarter stood at $5.8 billion, off some 61% from last year's quarter. This decline is most likely the result of fewer large commercial mortgages going to record," O'Donnell said.

"It is important to note," he added, "that this total mortgage value amount does not necessarily represent the true increase in indebtedness as some mortgages may be recorded multiple times against different parcels of land, are refinances simply replacing existing debt, or are recorded to secure equity credit lines which may not be drawn to their capacity."

The Registry of Deeds, 649 High St., Dedham, is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County.

Make Your Home Friendly To Those With Asthma, Allergies

(ARA) - Asthma and allergies strike nearly one in four Americans, almost 60 million people, according

Dollars and sense

by David Uffington

Start Your Own Vegetable Garden

All across the country, families are planting vegetable gardens. For many it's a way to cut the cost of fresh vegetables. Others plan to can the bounty and have fresh food all winter long. No matter where you live, it's not too late to get started on a garden of your own.

Getting started: If you're new to gardening, it's best to start with small seedlings. Ask at your local nursery about which vegetables do better when started as young plants as opposed to seeds.

Space requirements: Not everyone has access to a large growing space in the backyard. Wooden boxes on the patio or balcony can hold tomato plants, bush beans or a few rows of carrots. Investigate community gardens where each person is given a small square of land to work. If the side of your garage is the only place that gets full sun, plant there. (When planting near a house, however, it's best to have a soil test done to be sure that lead from old paint hasn't contaminated the ground. Certain types of vegetables will pull in more to the Asthma and Allergy Foundation of America. Both conditions cause adults to miss work, children to miss lead than others. Better to be safe and check in advance.) Start with a small garden area that won't overwhelm you to tend.

What to plant: Keep it simple and start with just a few different types. Only plant what you know your family will eat. Don't experiment and hope that your children will suddenly develop a taste for okra just because they helped to plant and harvest it. Food that isn't eaten is food (and your time and money) that is wasted. If your family loves green beans and carrots, grow those.

Get advice: If a neighbor has had a successful garden year after year, that's your best source of advice about soil pH, the types of vegetables that grow best and what pests to look out for.

Sharing the harvest: Investigate ahead of time to find soup kitchens in your area that might want your excess vegetables. You might end up with much more than you can consume.

Sell your extras: Depending on your local laws, you might be able to set up a weekend stand at the end of your driveway to sell your vegetables.

school, and are a leading cause of emergency room visits and hospital stays.

Allergies and asthma don't only affect those suffering from the illnesses, but family members and loved ones as well. So whether you have asthma and allergies, live with someone who does or have frequent asthmatic or allergic visitors, how do you make your home a safe environment?

Eco-friendly practices and environmentally sensitive products can not only help minimize the symptoms of allergies and asthma, but also make your home healthier in general for you and your family.

The experts at the asthma & allergy friendly Certification Program offer some tips on how to keep your home healthy and free of allergens and irritants:

Cleaning

People with asthma and allergies often have "triggers" that can set off a reaction in the lungs, according to the American Lung Association. Often those triggers are particles carried in the air. Other common triggers include smoke, perfume and products with heavy fragrances, dust mites, mold, pollen and more. Look for fragrance-free, natural cleaning products that do not contain toxic chemicals.

While more expensive than a traditional vacuum cleaner, a High-efficiency Particulate Air (HEPA) vacuum contains a special filter that traps very fine particles and keeps them from getting back into the air. While HEPA vacuums can help people breathe easier, it is still very difficult to keep pet dander, dust mites and other triggers out of carpeting. So for people with asthma and allergies, carpeted floors are not recommended.

Flooring

Solid surface floors should be at the top of the list for people with asthma and allergies. Hardwood, laminate and tile are all options, but the more natural a flooring product is, the better its health and hygienic qualities tend to be. Marmoleum click, for example, is made of natural linoleum with a cork backing for a warm and comfortable floor that is also eco-friendly. The flooring panels and squares simply click together for an easy, glueless installation so there are no harmful chemicals or coatings necessary.

The anti-static properties of the materials repel dust and dirt making it easy to clean, reducing exposure to allergens and contributing to better indoor air quality. Marmoleum click is the first flooring product to be awarded the asthma & allergy friendly certification mark.

"The asthma & allergy friendly certification mark indicates that a product or environment has been scientifically tested in our global network of state-of-the-art, accredited laboratory facilities and has proven more suitable for people with asthma and related allergic sensitivities," says Dr. John McKeon, CEO of Allergy Standards Limited.

Your home may have cleaner air, but it doesn't need to look sterile. Click comes in 24 colors from neutrals to brights and is suitable for every room in the house. For more information visit themarmoleum-store.com.

Bedding

The average bed is home to millions of dust mites, which feed off dead skin. Breathing in dust mite waste particles can trigger allergic reactions and asthma attacks. Dust mite covers for mattresses and pillows provide a barrier to keep out the microscopic critters. Organic cotton or bamboo bedding is not only stylish and earth friendly but is made without chemicals that can irritate airways.

Other factors

Whether you're trying to make your home friendly for people with asthma and allergies or just generally trying to improve your indoor air quality, keep in mind that the smallest things can make a difference. Stuffed children's toys can hold dust mites and allergens. Bedding, blankets, pillows, furniture coverings and more should be washed weekly in hot water as an allergen control measure. Paints should be nontoxic and zero-VOC to prevent harmful off-gassing.

Tips To Help Women Keep Their Cool

(NAPS) - Making a few lifestyle changes can help millions of women prevent or minimize the effects of hot flashes.

Women may experience hot flashes for several years, with some women feeling just a little warmer than usual on occasion and others experiencing several uncomfortable episodes throughout the day and even night sweats.

Here are a few steps you can take to reduce them:

- Exercise at least 30 minutes a day.
- Dress in layers so it's easy to cool yourself off.
- Try to pinpoint what triggers hot flashes. For some women it's coffee, spicy foods or alcohol.
- Soy might help. According to The North American Menopause Society, 40 to 80 mg of isoflavones daily may help relieve symptoms.
- Be sure you get enough sleep. If hot flashes are really uncomfortable and nothing you do helps, talk to your doctor.

"If hot flashes are severe and interrupting your life and you are not responding to common remedies or lifestyle changes such as diet and exercise, then perhaps it is time to discuss with your physician prescription options such as low-dose estrogen therapies," says Dr. James Simon, clinical professor of obstetrics and gynecology at George Washington University.

Low-dose estrogen therapies are recommended by many experts in the fields of gynecology and estrogen therapy, including The North American Menopause Society and The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists.

"Most physicians recommend that estrogen should be prescribed in the lowest effective dose and for the shortest amount of time to manage a patient's symptom," Dr. Simon adds.

One of the newest ways to deliver estrogen is a fast-drying colorless gel that can be applied to a woman's upper arm or shoulder. One low-dose, prescription-only gel indicated for the treatment of moderate-to-severe flashes is called Elestrin.

BRIDGE TO NOWHERE

The fixed restoration called a "dental bridge" is similar to a highway bridge in that it is supported by two abutments on either side of the gap. In between, a metal framework, known as a "pontic," spans the gap and holds one or more artificial teeth in place. When the pontic can be supported only at one end, a so-called "cantilever bridge" may be brought into play. A typical bridge of this type, the 3-unit cantilever bridge, is made of two abutment crowns that are positioned side by side on the same side of the missing tooth space. The pontic is then connected to the two crowns, which support its extension into the area of the missing tooth.

Your appearance, dental health, and the proper functioning of your mouth are all important reasons for replacing missing teeth. Could you dental situation benefit by having a bridge? We take pride in our ability to provide quality dental care in a relaxed and comfortable environment. Your comfort during dental treatment is our utmost concern. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where our trained professional staff works as a team to make your visits pleasant. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. Rely on us to answer all your questions about treatments and procedures. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. In some cases only one dental crown is used in a cantilever bridge, depending on how much support is needed.

Presidents Defeat Lakers, 3-0

Sorensen Shuts Down Silver Lake

By SEAN BRENNAN

Last week, with an important early-season Patriot League game against Silver Lake High School on tap, and with the possibility of seeing its record fall to 0-3 to start the season, the Quincy Presidents received a professional performance from sophomore hurler Kori Sorensen and pulled off a critical 3-0 league win at Mitchell-McCoy Field.

Sorensen, only a sophomore, shutdown a potent Silver Lake offense; a team that had entered the contest averaging 17 runs a game through its first three games of the spring. The Quincy star finished with a complete game shutout. Sorensen held the Lakers to four hits and struck out 11 batters, walking only one.

Her first win on the mound this year helped to stop a two-game losing streak for the Presidents. Quincy had opened the year with a 4-2 loss to Stoughton and a 4-0 loss to Duxbury.

Quincy's offense gave Sorensen the entire cushion she would need when they jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the bottom of the first inning against the Lakers' all-league pitcher Katie Stanley (two strikeouts, walk, four hits). Senior Lisa Lam opened the game by reaching on a swinging bunt; junior Julia Yee followed with a single up the middle and both runners moved into scoring position on a delayed steal.

Lam would come around to score on a RBI groundout by junior Olivia Berry and Yee scored on a bloop single by junior Kylie Kozlowski.

Stanley would settle down after the first frame. She allowed a leadoff single to open the second inning, but after that, did not allow a Quincy hitter to reach base until the home half of the sixth.

Silver Lake's Elizabeth Murphy (3-for-3, two doubles, single) roped a two-out double in the first inning, but Sorensen struck out the next batter to leave Murphy in scoring position. Sorensen cruised through the second inning (three strikeouts) and battled through the third (walk, K), but it was in the pivotal fourth inning that her star power came to the forefront.

Murphy started the inning off with a single, moving to second on a fielding error. After a strikeout, Sorensen watched as two consecutive Silver Lake hitters reached base via errors. Facing a one-out, bases loaded situation, Sorensen bore down and retired the next two batters on strikeouts. Threat over.

"We haven't seen it all year, it has been missing," said Quincy head coach Mike Sedar when asked about Sorensen's pitching in the fourth inning. "But the answer is it is wonderful. She can spot the ball where she needs to and she picked up real quick on the hitters over there and what they would chase."

"It is incredible that you can call a pitch and she can locate it. You can see in situations like that what a gamer she is on the mound. She is a bulldog."

Sedar was most impressed with the way in which Sorensen shutdown such a potent offense and a team in Silver Lake that he expects to be in the running for Patriot League supremacy come the end of May.

"That is a tough ballclub (Silver Lake). They are well-coached and they have been scoring a lot of runs," added Sedar. "(Stanley) is a good pitcher but we had been hitting the ball well in our two losses and we just couldn't get any runs. We have been getting the hits we just were not getting them at the right time. Today we did."

"Even though we are 1-2, we are swinging the bats. We are up at the plate hacking and making teams make plays. Our bunting has been terrific. And base running has been solid. I am very happy with the win because Silver Lake is a great team. It was a fun game."

Sorensen would wiggle out of another jam in the top of the sixth. Murphy opened the frame by smacking a ball halfway up the left field fence for her second double of the game, but Sorensen retired the next three SL hitters to close the door.

Sorensen would later score her team's third run in the bottom of the six. She reached on a walk, and made it to third on a sacrifice and passed ball. She scored on a suicide squeeze by Berry.

"She was as good as advertised," said SL head coach Mike Brennan about Quincy's star pitcher. "Overpowering, no. Even the kids came back and said she threw about machine speed, but she can place it. She keeps you off balance."

"Besides Elizabeth, no one else could hit her and we have been scoring runs at a fast pace all season. After they scored those two runs in the first that was all Quincy needed. They are a strong team. I was impressed."

Notes: Quincy made it two wins in a row with an 11-6 Patriot League victory over Whitman-Hanson on April 9. Kylie Kozlowski went 4-for-4 with three RBI and Julia Yee finished 3-for-5 with two RBI. The Presidents currently have a 2-2 record (2-1 in league play)... Today (Wednesday), Quincy will host North Quincy at 3:30 p.m. at Mitchell-McCoy Field.

Lady Presidents Capture SSGBL Title

The Quincy Lady Presidents 5th Grade Travel Basketball Team captured the highly competitive South Shore Girls Basketball League championship on Sunday, March 15.

Starting out as the fifth seed out of six playoff teams, Quincy had their work cut out for them. The Lady Presidents took the first game versus Weymouth by a score of 25-18, setting up a showdown with the #1 seed Hanover, and in dramatic fashion, Quincy won by one-point in overtime, sending them into the championship game against #2 seed Plymouth.

In the finals Quincy again brought its "A" game. The Lady Presidents won the league title by a 17-16 final score.

"Every girl on our team was instrumental in our success this season," said Coach Peter Papile and Jay Jerahian. "It takes a complete team effort to be successful and that's what we've had all year."

The championship team included Katryna Veasey, Gabriella Jerahian, Ariana Paulo, Marissa McGuire, Kailin Bell, Kayleen Lennihan, Allison Coleman, Rachel Gillespie, Leonor Guardado, Lexi Richards, Danielle Parry and Nina McDonald.

In addition to the success of the fifth grade team, the Lady Presidents' 8th grade team made it all the way to the semifinals as the #4 seed. The team fell just short of advancing to the finals in an exciting and hard-fought game against #1 seed Abington 45-42.

The 8th grade team included Caitlin Bulger, Callie Cabral, Maryssa Dwyer, Kayla Free, Liz Kelly, Samantha McArdle, Devin McMahon, Jacki Merchant, Sara Ryan and Abby Yotts.

The Lady Presidents Travel Basketball Program is for fifth to eighth grade Quincy girls. The goal of the program is to help develop basketball players through weekly practices, camp style lectures and the inclusion of several University Women's programs in its teaching methods. The program competes in the South Shore Girls Basketball League, the top league in Southern Massachusetts.

North Quincy 4-1 In Patriot League Play

Red Raiders Open Season With Six Wins In Seven Games

Watch out, folks.

The North Quincy Red Raiders have streaked out of the gates to the tune of a 6-1 record to open the 2009 baseball season.

On Monday, the Raiders defeated previously unbeaten Middleboro High School, 2-1 in extra innings. In the eighth inning, NQ's Joe Vialpando led off with a walk and was bunted over to second base by senior Matt Jay. Next up was junior Ryan Louis (three hits). Louis drove the third pitch of his at-bat to the right-center field gap, driving in Vialpando with the winning run.

On the hill, Louis threw seven strong innings, allowing only four hits and striking out four batters. Ben Leahy came on in relief of Louis and picked up the win.

Other Raiders playing well against Middleboro included Matt Rodriguez, John Ainsley (two hits), Joe Edgerly (four defensive assists), and Colin Ryan (eight defensive assists). Behind hot bats and superb pitching (both starting and relief), North Quincy finished last week by taking two-out-of-three games against Patriot League opponents. North defeated Rockland (6-4) and Randolph (19-3) and lost to Hanover (5-3). The team had opened their season two weeks ago by sweeping Brockton High School (8-0, 14-3) and earning its first Patriot League victory with a 4-2 decision over Pembroke High School.

On April 9, the Raiders continued their hot start with a 6-4 league win over Rockland HS. Keith Morale pitched 5 1/3 solid innings and picked up the win for North. Ben Leahy came on in relief of Morreale to secure the victory.

Offensively the team pounded out 13 hits. Matt Rodriguez and John Ainsley had three hits each and Matt Jay and Joe Vialpando, the team's 1-2 hitters, set the table, going a combined 3-for-6 with three runs scored and two RBI.

In the team's home opener, the Raiders undressed Randolph HS on April 8 by a score of 19-3. The team's 19 runs set the NQ single game scoring record.

Eleven different players combined for 16 hits and Matt Jay, Ryan Louis, Danny Russell and Keith Morreale had multi-hit games for the Raiders. John Ainsley, Joe Vialpando and Colin Ryan each had RBIs for North and Matt Rodriguez collected three walks.

On the mound, Joe Edgerly picked up his second win of the season with five innings of solid pitching.

North Quincy suffered their first loss of the 2009 season on April 6. The team held a 2-1 lead going into the sixth inning, but Hanover scored four times and won 5-3.

Ryan Louis pitched well in defeat and he also had two hits and a RBI. Matt Rodriguez and John Ainsley each had RBIs and Joe Edgerly and Colin Ryan also had base hits.

On April 2, the Raiders took to the road to play Pembroke. Starting pitcher Keith Morreale went the distance, pitching seven innings while giving up just two hits and recording nine strikeouts. At the plate, senior Joe Vialpando finished with two hits, including a seventh inning home run, junior John Ainsley had two RBI and senior Matt Jay finished with two hits and three stolen bases.

Defensively against Pembroke, North Quincy's Colin Ryan, Matt Rodriguez and Ryan Louis played well in tough weather conditions.

On March 31, in the second of two games played against Brockton in Brockton, North Quincy rolled to a 14-3 victory. The Raiders finished the contest with ten hits.

Vialpando, Ainsley and Ryan had multiple hit games and juniors Brian Donaghey and Ryan Louis also had timely hits.

On the mound, Joe Edgerly started the game and threw four solid innings. He was followed by relief pitchers Frank Flora, Mike Medeiros and Jim Vialpando, who combined to hurl three scoreless innings.

North Quincy opened the year with an 8-0 win over Brockton. Louis powered the Raiders on the mound (six innings, seven strikeouts) and at the plate (two hits, five RBI). Setting the table for North Quincy were Joe Vialpando and Danny Russell, who scored two runs apiece and combined to steal four bases.

Matt Jay and Colin Ryan each had two hits and Paul Reardon and John Ainsley played anchored the Raiders defensively.

North Quincy will host Quincy High School today (Wednesday) at 6:30 p.m. at Adams Field before hosting Scituate HS on Thursday at 3:30 p.m. (Adams Field).

Seven Teams To Play Best Local Talent Quincy Redstockings AAU Baseball Open Season

The Quincy Redstockings AAU baseball program, which is made up of seven teams, including 9-Under, 10U, 11U (Red), 11U (Blue), 12U, 13U and 14U, recently opened the 2009 season with a slate of games.

The following are results from the 11U (Blue), 14U teams and 13U teams.

11U Redstockings Blue

The Redstockings Blue opened the season with two double-headers against teams visiting from New Hampshire. Quincy played the NE Colonials and Windham.

Against the NE Colonials, Quincy lost the opener, 13-8 and won the second game, 12-9. In the first game, the Colonials broke open a 4-4 tie with nine runs in the fifth and six innings.

Rich Ryan and Brendan McDonald pitched well on the mound and McDonald and Scott McGlone both had big hits.

In game two, Quincy jumped out to an 8-2 led and eventually won 12-9. James Hussey and Scott Mele led the way on the mound and Pat Brambrick, Matt McDonald and Nick Carroll all played well.

The Redstockings dropped in the first game against Windham, 16-1, but rebounded with a 4-1 victory in game two.

Rich Ryan and Brendan

McDonald combined to shut down Windham, limiting them to one unearned run in six innings. Nick Kelly has a clutch two-run hit in the sixth inning.

14U Redstockings

The 14U team opened the spring with two straight victories, all against the Souhegan Valley Saints.

In game one, a 7-6 win, Tom McDonald threw four shutout innings and Andrew Jaehnig and Josh Hayward pitched well in relief. The offense was led by Mike Gallotto and Dave Joyce (two hits each), and Joyce drove in the game-winner in the bottom of the seventh inning.

In the second game, Nick McGaughey pitched three innings and Dan Cobban threw five scoreless innings of relief as Quincy won 11-6 in extra innings.

Andrew Currie (three runs), Josh Hayward (two-run double) and Andrew Jaehnig (two-run single) led the offense.

13U Redstockings

The Quincy Redstockings junior squad also picked up their first victory of the year as they defeated the South Shore Bulldogs, 5-3.

Eric Kelley struck out nine batters and allowed just one hit over five innings and the Redstockings scored all five of their runs in the fourth inning. Kenny Sorenson led off by reaching on an error; Kevin Jackson doubled to centerfield and both scored when Vinny Cameron tripled to right. Andrew Fonte followed with a RBI single and Robbie Cameron and Anthony Fonte closed out the scoring with RBI groundouts.

Jackson pitched the final two innings to earn the save.

In the second game of the doubleheader, Quincy lost 5-4 despite rallying to score one run and putting the tying run on third base. Brian Fahey's RBI single had given Quincy an early 1-0 lead and Kenny Sorenson pitched well, allowing three unearned runs in three innings of work.

In the fourth inning, Quincy's Mike Pugsley made it 3-2 when he drove in Vinny Cameron and in the seventh inning, Eric Kelly scored on a Andrew Fonte's single. Fonte advanced all the way to third but was left stranded.

The Redstockings dropped both games of a doubleheader to the powerful South Shore Hurricanes. Anthony Fonte, John Yacano and TJ Hobin pitched well considering the cold conditions the game was played in. Sorenson, Fahey and Vinny Cameron managed the only hits for Quincy and Matt MacPhail, Scott Higgins and Mike Haley played well defensively.

Quincy Earns First Patriot League Victory Presidents Start Year At 2-2

By SEAN BRENNAN
The Quincy Presidents have opened the 2009 baseball season heading in the right direction.

The team started off the year with a 6-4 non-league victory over Brighton High School (March 31); followed that win by dropping its first Patriot League game, 8-3, to Silver Lake Regional High School on April 8; Quincy picked up its first league win on April 9 versus Whitman-Hanson (6-2) and lost Monday to Hingham. At 2-2 overall and 1-2 in the Patriot League, Quincy has work to do still, but first-year head coach Tim Daley likes what he sees so far from his Presidents.

"We have been playing OK," said Daley. "If we can eliminate some of the big innings, pitching-wise, we should be in good shape. But in our losses this year we have given up chunks of runs at a time."

"If we can continue to have solid pitching performances and produce some clutch hits when needed, we should be competitive in every game the rest of the way."

Quincy, which dropped a league game to Hingham on Monday, picked up their first Patriot League victory with a 6-2 decision over Whitman-Hanson on April 9. Sophomore hurler Lucas McDonough earned the win on the hill for Quincy. McDonough went the distance (seven innings), striking out 11 and allowing two earned runs.

Junior second baseman David Muollo finished the game 2-for-2 with a run, and junior catcher Leroy Wallace reached base three times and scored a run.

"Lucas pitched really well and the offense got the hits when we needed them most," said Daley. "It was a nice win and was a nice way to rebound after losing earlier in the week to Silver Lake."

In the game against Silver Lake, an 8-3 loss, junior pitcher Kevin Keith finished with eight strikeouts. The Presidents held a 3-1 advantage going into the home half of the fifth inning, but the Lakers produced a five-run fifth to take a 6-3 lead. Silver Lake would later tack on two additional runs.

"Kevin finished with those eight strikeouts and we held a 3-1 lead late into the game," added Daley. "But Silver Lake is a good team and they got to us in the fifth inning. We need to find a way to stop those big offensive innings by the opposition. In both of our losses, we have given up that one big inning."

Quincy is scheduled to play against North Quincy High School (6-1 overall) today (Wednesday) at 6:30 p.m. at Adams Field. The jayvee game will be held at 3:30 p.m. at Adams Field and the freshmen teams will square off at 3:30 p.m. on Upper Merrymount Field.

The Presidents finish the week with a home game on Friday at 3:30 p.m. versus Pembroke High School enough team defense to hold on for the four-point win.

Fifth grade point guard Sara Ryan led Central with 14 points. Central's Callie Cabral and Liz Kelly were also key players. Cabral scored 10 points and Kelly scored 10 points. Other players who scored included eighth graders Sara Ryan, Shannon Callahan, Kelsey Fischer, Britney Meehan, Danielle Mullaney, Emma Murphy, Christine Kelliher, Briana Mullaney and Jane Minton.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Professional relationships grow stronger. But you might still need to ease some problems with someone in your personal life. One way could be to try to be less rigid in your views.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You might be too close to that perplexing personal situation to even attempt to make a rational decision about it right now. Stepping back could help you gain a wider perspective.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Being asked to choose between the positions of two friends is an unfair imposition on you. Best to reject the demand and insist they try harder to work things out on their own.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A change of mind about a workplace decision might be called for once you hear more arguments, pro and con. A personal event suddenly takes an unexpected (but pleasant!) turn.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Romance once again looms large for single Leos and Leonas, with Cupid favoring Taurus and Libra to inspire those warm and fuzzy Leonine feelings. Expect another workplace change.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A surprise gift -- and, happily, with no strings attached -- could come just when you need it to avoid a delay in getting your project done. Expect education to dominate the week.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Someone close to you might ask for your support as she or he faces a demanding personal challenge. Offer it, by all means. But be careful you don't neglect your own needs at this time.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) An unexpected development could put your relationship with a partner or spouse to an emotionally demanding test. But your determination to get to the truth should save the day.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A recent agreement appears to be coming apart over the surfacing of unexpected complications. You might need to have expert advice on how to resolve the situation.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your keen business sense helps you get to the truth about a suspicious business deal. Expect to have many colleagues rally to support your efforts in this important matter.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Someone who once moved in and out of your life over the years might now want to come back in on a more permanent basis. Give yourself a lot of time to weigh your decision.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Showing frustration over a delayed workplace decision might get someone's attention, but not necessarily make him or her move any sooner. Best advice would be to be patient and wait it out.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are drawn to excitement and enjoy fast-tempo music, with the more brass, the better.

Sean Cardinal Patrick O'Malley Visits St. John The Baptist Parish

The Archbishop, Sean Cardinal Patrick O'Malley, OFM Cap., recently visited St. John the Baptist parish for a vesper service at the church.

The service was followed by a dinner with about 20 or so priests that have been ordained within the last five years.

The Cardinal enjoyed his informal dinner with his priests in the lower rectory. The Cardinal noted with admiration the church sanctuary at St. John's which was recently rededicated by and in honor of, the Rev. William McCarthy, in November 2007.

Fr. McCarthy, former church pastor, served the parish faithfully for more than 18 years.

St. John's was assigned a priest from last year's ordinations, the Rev. Mark D. Barr. Fr. Barr's home parish is St. Patrick's in Natick and he has an undergraduate degree in computer science from Worcester Poly Tech as well as his masters of divinity from St. John's Seminary in Brighton.

A THOUGHT
FOR THE WEEK

"Thanks."
This is not a long word hard to pronounce, but it is a word that some people find hard to say. Also it is an inspiring little word that can bring the sunshine out on a dark day if we are willing to have it so. Thanks before meals. Thanksgivng in our prayers. Thanks to those who have done so much for us. Thanks for our families. Thanks for our friends.

What a tragedy that the grace of gratitude is not as common as it ought to be. Kind words of appreciation and encouragement to each other by husband and wife could "make their day." A child brightens a weary mother's day with acknowledgement of her value by a word, a hug or a kiss.

All of us are the recipients of countless deeds of kindness on the part of those with whom we rub shoulders with every day, and yet all they may receive from us are picky criticisms, when a word well-spoken would completely change the service and the server.

May we take this opportunity to say a "Thank You" to all our readers who have commented on the "Thoughts" they have here. Your comments have been and always will be most appreciated.

Civil Service process in the selection process for fire chief," Smyth told The Sun Tuesday. "I want to see this administration follow the Civil Service process and the collective bargaining agreement that has always been followed in past administrations which is following the law and if you're informed that you're violating the law, to correct what you've done. And they failed to do that."

"The reason I am fighting this," Smyth continued, "is that I am trying to protect the integrity of the Civil Service process for the entire department."

The dispute began in May, 2008, when Pettinelli notified the city of his intent to retire as of July 15 and Barron was installed "to a position then referred to by the City as 'acting chief' and the search for a permanent chief was on."

There were four names on the Civil Service list --- Deputies George McGunagle, Jeffrey Starr and Smyth and Capt. Paul Griffith --- and the Mayor was required to select from the first three. Smyth and McGunagle were tied at the top.

On Sept. 19, the State Human Resources Division notified the City: "Please be advised, no employee may be performing the duties of Fire Chief on an 'acting' or provisional basis when a current and eligible list exists. Currently there is an eligible list of four names for the title of Fire Chief, Quincy Fire Department."

Subsequently, McGunagle declined the appointment, citing salary deficiency. The Civil Service list was down to three and still in existence.

The Human Resources Division once again reminded the city that "no employee may be performing the duties of 'acting' or 'provisional' Fire Chief as long as there was an active eligible list for the position of Fire Chief."

It was then that the procedure got murky.

Smyth said Starr was offered the post of Fire Chief. Koch said he wasn't, quoting him as saying he would turn it down if it were offered. Smyth produced a letter signed by Starr declining the position.

The City said Starr was never "selected" for appointment, only asked if he would accept it. Smyth argued that Starr was "selected" when he was asked if he would accept the post.

Whatever, Starr's refusal to accept the job left the city with only two names on the Civil Service list, a position known as a "short list," which meant a new exam for a new list. Smyth, Barron and a fire captain took the exam in March. The results are expected around June 1.

"The City," said the Commission's ruling, "does not contest that, effective July 15, 2008, and continuing until Oct. 31, 2008, it installed and paid Deputy Chief Barron as 'Acting Chief' of the Fire Department."

"This was in violation of the Civil Service law. No employee may be performing the duties of Fire Chief on an acting or provisional basis when a current and active eligible list exists."

"At that time, there was an eligible list of four names for the title of Fire Chief of the Quincy Fire Department. There is no provision in the Civil Service law for an 'acting' position."

Smyth claimed that, as Senior Staff Deputy, he should have been the one to fill in as acting chief as he had once before.

The Commission went on to a further suggestion for the city:

"Upon the establishment of an eligibility list, we urge the city to embark on a transparent selection process to ensure a sense of fair play among all eligible candidates and the public."

"For positions that carry far less responsibility than Fire Chief, the Commission has taken note of such exemplary screening and selecting methods in other Civil Service communities that should be considered here, including, but not limited to:

- Use of an outside review panel of current and/or retired Fire Chiefs to conduct initial interviews and make recommendations and observations;

- Public final interviews that are broadcast on the local cable access channel in which each candidate is asked a similar set of questions by the Mayor and other members of his interview panel.

Councillors, Firefighters Seek Changes In Medical Response

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Firefighters suit up, hit the sirens and man the fire engines in response to every medical emergency in the city at a high cost to taxpayers and to the fire department's $18.5 million budget, according to city councillors and Ernie Arienti, president of the firefighters' union.

Those medical emergencies, ranging from a broken ankle to a heart attack, far outnumber fire calls as detailed in department reports provided by Acting Chief Joseph Barron.

In 2008, firefighters responded to 5,050 medical calls and 766 fires. In fact, medical calls accounted for 50% of the department's 9,374 runs last year. Statistics have been similar in almost every year since 2003.

While firefighters cover the first call, private ambulances follow right on their heels and collect payments for treating and transporting the injured, according to testimony at recent council committee meetings.

Councillors and Arienti believe it's time to explore alternatives that will either reduce the number of medical calls or create revenue to enhance the department's budget.

Discussions focused on both goals at last week's Finance Committee meeting and the March 30 Public

Koch: Cuts Still A Certainty Budget Savings To Date Top $5.7 Million

Savings from a wage freeze and new health insurance program negotiated between Mayor Thomas Koch and city workers will save at least $5.7 million in the upcoming fiscal year but that will not eliminate the need for substantial budget cuts, officials said.

All unions on the city side of government and most in the School Department accepted the wage freeze as one step to curtail cuts and in the face of at least $6.8 million in state aid cuts.

Talks are currently ongoing with teachers, officials said. To date, the one-year wage freeze has saved more than $1.7 million in the upcoming budget.

"I am proud of what we have been able to accomplish by sitting at the table together and coming up with solutions to this crisis," Koch said. "Major cuts are

Groundbreaking Today For McGrath Highway Phase Of Quincy Center Concourse

Groundbreaking for the McGrath Highway phase of the Quincy Center Concourse will be held today (Thursday) at 1:30 p.m. to kick off construction of the long-awaited road seen as vital to revitalizing Quincy Center, announces mayor Tom Koch.

Preliminary work began this week at the intersection of Southern Artery (Route 3A) and McGrath Highway. There are no detours, but traffic will be reduced to one lane in each direction on portions of McGrath Highway throughout the duration of the project. There will be no restrictions on Southern Artery.

"I am proud that we are finally able to get going on this project, which is critical as a transportation project to ease traffic downtown and to attract the kind of private investment that will once again make Quincy Center a place of pride for our city," Koch said. "I am thankful to all the people who have worked tirelessly to get this project going."

The full phase entails the complete reconstruction of McGrath Highway between Southern Artery and Washington Street, including widened sidewalks, new traffic signals, bike lanes, new trees and plantings and a median strip. The first portion of the scheduled 18-month project will relocate utilities underground.

The project will move up McGrath Highway in phases to minimize traffic disruptions.

Police and the Quincy Traffic Department will monitor the project daily, and will make changes as needed to ensure traffic flows as smoothly as possible, officials said.

Residents with questions or concerns about the project can call 617-376-1902 for more information.

The $4.3 million project, awarded to J. Derenzo Co., will mark one of the first tangible signs of construction for the long-anticipated roadway and one of the first major gears in a $1 billion plan to redevelop Quincy Center.

The project is being paid for by a $2 million state Public Works and Economic Development grant and through the city's existing District Improvement Financing program.

The McGrath Highway reconstruction will set the stage for the key portion of the road, where it crosses Hancock Street and creates the full East-West connection through Quincy Center first envisioned more than 30 years ago. After crossing Hancock Street, the road will connect with the existing Paul Harold Bridge and Burgin Parkway.

The Hancock Street portion of the project will also move forward this spring with scheduled demolition work to make way for the roadwork.

Wind Ordinance Before Council

Mayor Thomas Koch and his Wind Energy Ordinance have filed the first legislation that will make it possible for Quincy to locate and regulate wind turbines in the city.

The Mayor's committee worked on the wind-power ordinance to be added to the City's zoning code for several months, and it was formally presented to the City Council at its meeting on Tuesday night. A public hearing will be scheduled in the near future.

"This legislation is an important first step toward harnessing the potential of wind power in Quincy, and I am thankful to all of the committee members who put in countless hours working on this ordinance," Koch said. "This is the first step, but it is an important one."

The ordinance sets out rules for the construction of any turbine in Quincy, and prohibits them in all residential districts. It makes the Planning Board the primary permit authority to administer rules about location, size, sound, and other potential issues surrounding wind power.

Firefighters' Union Files Grievance On Ladder 2 Manning

Ladder 2 is back in regular service at the Wollaston fire station but the equipment is still controversial.

Acting Chief Joseph Barron restored full ladder service at Wollaston last week after firefighters and city councillors criticized his decision to pull the truck, periodically, to save overtime.

Now, Ernie Arienti, president of the firefighters' union, has filed a grievance, charging that Barron put the ladder back in service without adequate manpower in violation of the union contract.

"We have minimum manning requirements on certain pieces of equipment," Arienti said, adding that four men are required on Ladder 2, due to the complexity of the equipment.

Barron ordered that Ladder 2 be staffed with three firefighters when the department's manpower falls below 38.

The department's other two ladders do operate with three firefighters, but Ladder 2 presents added difficulties.

In late February, Barron placed Ladder 2 on temporary service or a "brown-out" in an effort to preserve overtime funds through the fiscal year ending June 30.

Under his original plan, Ladder 2 would function only when overtime was not required.

During a March 30 Public Safety Committee meeting, Councillor Douglas Gutro, Ward 5 and Councillor Kevin Coughlin, Ward 3, criticized Barron for shutting down Ladder 2, even temporarily.

They, also, asked why he had not notified the councillors of his decision on Ladder 2.

According to the contract, Barron will first review the grievance. If he rejects the claim, the mayor will review the grievance.

The final decision rests with an arbitration panel which could take up to a year.

Some High Paws For The Quincy Animal Shelter

This column's a real dog.

But it's the cat's meow, too.

I mean this story has legs and it's quite a tail — er, tale.

Actually, this week's space salutes the hard-working, under-the-radar group of dedicated volunteers who for the past 10 years have helped place approximately 5,000 homeless dogs and cats from the Quincy Animal Shelter on Broad Street into caring homes. Before there was a shelter, local stray dogs and cats had little or no hope for a second chance.

A decade later, that's all changed thanks to the volunteers who not only care for shelter's residents but also help raise over $100,000 a year to support their labor of love.

Without city, state or federal funding, the shelter relies on bake sales, car washes, holiday dances and other fundraising opportunities to support its efforts.

When the shelter first opened its door, two local vets began volunteering their services. And the volunteers came and so did the animals.

"Our first adoptions were gratifying," says Shelter Director Sandra Morse. "We learned, we watched how other shelters did things and some of us took courses and even got paying jobs in the animals care field just so we could do our volunteer jobs better. We were dedicated and we worked hard and loved it."

Because of that commitment, animals that may have been euthanized before the shelter opened in August 1999 had a new "leash on life." Nearly 300 animals were adopted that first year. The number has swelled to approximately 500 (400 cats and 100 dogs) annually over the past six years.

"Ten years ago there was no adoption program in Quincy but people could come in and pay a small fee and get a dog," Morse recalled in an interview from the shelter. "There was no hope for cats. But when we opened, we had a base of about 30 volunteers who cared for the animals seven days a week."

Today, there are 100 volunteers and no salaries associated with the shelter. Volunteers commit to a minimum of two hours a week; some put in as many as 25 hours a week.

"We have grown over the last 10 years with the help of the animal control officers, Don Conboy and Bruce DiBella," Morse says. "We are a no-kill shelter. We exercise the same care that you would with your own pet. If the animal were injured or chronically ill or a risk to the public with a behavioral problem that couldn't be fixed, then those animals are euthanized. Luckily that's only about one percent of our population and we're very proud of that."

The shelter can safely house 13 dogs and about 25 cats. There is also a foster care program which houses an additional 100 animals — mostly kittens — at any given time.

Morse says people considering pet adoption should be prepared for the emotional and financial commitment.

"That's different things to different people. It doesn't necessarily cost a lot of money to have an animal but it really depends on what you're adopting and what your own circumstances are. We like to say that because we are a no-kill shelter, we have rescued animals that may have had a fate far worse than this. We want to make sure people are ready and committed to take the animal home and give it a great home and not impulse shop. You just have to be committed to giving a good home to an animal."

Finding good homes has been even more challenging with the economy mired in recession.

"A lot of people because of the economy are being forced to relinquish their pets for one reason or another," Morse says. "People are being forced to give up pets because of housing issues, because they can't afford to feed an animal, or because they can't afford the vet care. It's very sad. We've had people drop their pet off here and then they go across the street to Father Bill's Place. It's very heart-breaking."

But Morse remains upbeat because people are still coming in to adopt. "What we're happy about is that we haven't seen a drop because an animal is another mouth to feed."

Of course some adoptions stand out more than others. Like Snuffy.

"We took in a very small black fluffy dog which literally had three paws in the grave," Morse recalls. "He was a Maltipoos and his tongue was hanging out of his mouth. We knew he was old. A vet said he had a heart condition and a kidney condition. But he was a happy dog. He didn't look like much... but it would have been cruel to keep a dog that old in a shelter."

Morse took the dog home for about four weeks but the dog didn't stop barking. "A lot of people thought the kindest thing to do would be to euthanize him because the chances of finding him a home were slim and leaving him at the shelter would have been cruel."

Then, as it often does at the shelter, fate intervened.

Morse brought the dog to an adoption day and a family came in who had heard about Snuffy. They adopted him and gave the dog the best 14 months of his life.

Snuffy recently passed away.

"I always say with the older animals, they're not here for a long time, they're just here for a good time. He had the best 14 months because he was clearly not well cared for prior to that. They got him groomed, he had his own wardrobe — all of his clothes were embroidered. They are just wonderful people and they were very sad that he died but they were all so very happy that they had him."

"Things like this happen a lot," Morse says. "Sometimes just when we're going to give up hope, somebody walks in and says 'I'll take that.'"

Morse also addressed a few misconceptions about shelters. For one, the shelter receives plenty of purebred animals. The animals are not sick nor do they lack good behavior.

"We've had fabulous animals come into this shelter and we always have a really good variety," she says.

Morse also talked about the reputation of pit-bulls.

"This city produces a lot of pit-bulls. The ones we get into the shelter are nice dogs. They are family pets. They do hold a higher level of responsibility but they are wonderful dogs."

The most important thing Morse wants residents to know is simply that the shelter exists.

"We want people to know we are here. We've been here for 10 years and we still have people coming in saying 'we didn't know you were here; how long have you been here?'"

"We want people to know we service the city of Quincy. We take in animals from Quincy residents and we are here for the people, too. We do help people when their pets are lost, if they are having problems with a pet they already have. We refer people. We are involved with a low-cost spay/neuter clinic so there are a lot of services that people just aren't aware of. We would like to have people just come down and visit and tell their friends and when they're ready to consider adopting an animal."

The shelter located at 56 Broad St. is open Tuesdays and Thursdays from 6 to 8 p.m. and Saturdays 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. The adoption fee for dogs is $90 to $250, depending on age, breed and medical history of the dog. For adult cats, the fee is $100; kittens are $125 each or $200 for two.

Every animal receives the appropriate vaccinations and, if old enough, is spayed or neutered before finding her or his new family. Younger animals are adopted with a pre-paid spay/neuter certificate.

For more information about the adoption process and other services the shelter provides, visit the shelter's website at www.quincyanimalshelter.org.

Below are profiles of some shelter residents who need good homes.

CHIEF: 4-year-old neutered male cat. He is a super friendly and affectionate cat who demands attention. He is suitable in a home as a single cat; someone who doesn't work many long hours. He may get along with another cat or with a dog but that's unsure. He is nice, he has a lot of personality. He's been in the shelter for almost a year.

DUNCAN: 5-year-old neutered male; very friendly. He was surrendered to the shelter by someone who couldn't afford to care for him. Very playful and affectionate. "He's fresh," Morse says. "He gets along with other cats but he is definitely a trouble maker but gets along with them just fine." He's been a shelter resident since last December.

DAISY and PRINCESS: 7-year-old siblings, surrendered because their owner became ill and could not care for them.

DUNCAN

PRINCESS

Residents for two and a half months. Prefer to find them a home together because they are very affectionate, very loving. Princess — the smaller of the two — has a medical condition which will probably shorten her life but doesn't require any medical treatment at this time.

FELICITY: a one-year-old spayed female kitty. The mother of four kittens that were left at the shelter. She's a really friendly kitty, curious, and has a lot of kitten left in her. She would be a good family cat, very good with children.

FELICITY

GARTH: a one-year-old neutered male, a beautiful orange tiger kitty. He was a stray cat. Like most orange tigers, he is a very lovable and charming boy. He is very loyal and very affectionate. He's been at the shelter for two weeks.

GARTH

KITTY: 10-year-old female who came to the shelter after her owner died about three and a half months ago. Kitty is special because she is a breast cancer survivor. The vet removed a mass and she's doing very well. She's an older kitty, and a little bit on the frightened side but once she gets in a home, she'll warm up. She would be great for an older person or a single person in a quiet home.

KITTY

BELLE: five year-old spayed female who was given up because she didn't get along with another cat in the household. Completely healthy and most of the time she is affectionate but she definitely plays by her own rules. She's not a lap cat — wants to be on her own who likes to be with you but on her terms. Would do well in a quiet house; should not be placed with children. A resident since last October.

ASHLEY: two-year-old female cat who was left outside the shelter in a carrier two weeks ago. She appears to be healthy and she'll be available for adoption soon. Like all of the animals, she will be up-to-date on her shots; she'll be spayed and microchipped. She's extremely playful.

ASHLEY

SNOWY: 6-year-old poodle mix who was given up by her owner. Super friendly little dog. He is shy at times but warms up right away. He's the type of dog who would be great for an older person; he's pretty easy going given his age. He had some medical issues when he arrived at the shelter — mostly eye and ear infections — but they are being resolved so he should fine and available for adoption in a week or so.

JENNIFER: 2-year-old pit bull, found in North Quincy, completely bald. She was suffering from a very treatable skin infection. Her skin has grown back and she is a very friendly dog. Not sure how well she would get along with other dogs. She's very affectionate, knows some obedience and does not like cats and most other dogs. She needs to go to a home with older children and no pets. She loves people and is very active — she'll need someone who will get outside and play with her, and take her for a good walk or jog. She's been a resident for about five months.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1927 postcard view of the old Quincy Adams railroad depot that was at the corner of Liberty and Water Streets in South Quincy. The Water Street grade crossing can be seen on the right. The depot was on the outbound or west side of the tracks. Built in 1870 of Quincy granite, it had a slate roof and an eight-foot canopy on all four sides. The top floor served as a boarding house. This depot was the main shipping and receiving point for the South Quincy granite manufacturing industry. With an adjacent freight yard and a large crane it served dozens of stone cutting businesses in the Quincy Adams area for over 60 years. But, up until the 1930s, after years of citizens' complaints of its danger, Water Street remained the last railroad grade crossing in Quincy. This was partly because the depot was in the way of a new bridge that would have had to be built over the tracks. Then, in 1936, the railroad finally agreed to eliminate the grade crossing. The depot was demolished and the bridge that is there today was built. And now the railroad's freight business is long gone and this depot site is in the northbound lanes of the Burgin Parkway. Quincy's Yesterdays

Dinner Held For Robert E. Barry

By FRANK MCCAULEY

Former City Manager Edward T. "Red" Lewis was the keynote speaker at a retirement dinner for Water Superintendent Robert E. Barry at the Morrisette American Legion Post, West Quincy.

Mr. Barry retired after 47 years with the Quincy Public Works Department. Former DPW Commissioner Charles R. Herbert was master of ceremonies.

Head table guests included Senator Arthur H. Tobin, DPW Commissioner James "Pete" Ricciuti and the Rev. Lawrence Pratt of St. John's Church.

Owen Eaton, 79 Whiton Ave., was appointed by Mayor Walter J. Hannon as acting superintendent to replace Mr. Barry.

Mr. Eaton has been with the Public Works Department since 1954.

NO ESTIMATE ON PRIMARY TURNOUT

Quincy voters will go to the polls on Tuesday, April 25 to vote in the state Presidential preference election, but city officials aren't even guessing about the turnout.

"We have no idea what the turnout will be like," said City Clerk John M. Gillis, who has made a habit, in the past, of estimating the total vote within five percent.

"This one is too tough to guess," Gillis said, "especially since we have no idea what the 18-20-year olds are going to do."

Those voting Republican will be asked to choose from among President Richard M. Nixon, Representatives Paul McCloskey and John Ashbrook as their Presidential favorite.

Democratic hopefuls on the ballot will include Senators Edward Muskie, George McGovern and Hubert Humphrey, city mayors Sam Yorty of Los Angeles and John Lindsay of New York City, Gov. George Wallace of Alabama and a number of other elected officials around the country.

QUINCYISMS

The Quincy Sunbeams column noted that School Committee Member James F. McCormick, Jr., expected to run for Norfolk County Treasurer. Former Mayor Thomas S. Burgin was given a surprise 70th birthday party by his associates at the Burgin and Plancy Insurance Agency, Quincy Square. Two present Quincy City Councilors, William Delahunt of Ward Five and J. Vincent Smyth of Ward Six, were planning to run for state representative in the First Norfolk District, which included Wards Three, Four, Five and Six. Thanks Sun For John Hancock Plunge Coverage

On behalf of Leo Kelly, chairman and members of the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission (QBCC), I would like to thank you for the wonderful media coverage The Quincy Sun gave to the third annual John Hancock Birthday Plunge. Without your assistance in publishing articles about this event, the turnout would not have been as great as it was.

As you know, all funds raised go to the various programs helping our neighbors in need at Interfaith Social Services.

QBCC members are most grateful for all your help in getting the word out not only about the Plunge, but about all the programs at QBCC holds throughout the year.

Your Dad was such a wonderful friend to the QBCC and helped this commission through all our past projects by giving us such wonderful press coverage.

He is sorely missed and this city and this country will never see the likes of him again. He was one in a million and we were so fortunate to have him here in Quincy.

A Big Thank You To The Y

I'd like to take this opportunity to thank "All" of the staff and members of the South Shore YMCA!

Thank you for your kindness, caring and motivating personalities. It is my opinion that if everyone, everywhere in the world shared the attitudes that are abundantly shared at the South Shore YMCA, the world would be a better place to live!

I've been a member of the "Y" since November 2009. My family and I value our membership and experience here! It is like a home away from home for me. My typical day begins with me taking my two daughters to school and then off to the "Y" I go! There are days that I spend more time at the "Y" than anywhere else! You can "always" count on me socializing with staff, members, visitors and even with daycare students. Always welcoming, greeting and motivating as well as being motivated by each group.

Everyday at the "Y" is a new and beautiful experience. On April 1, 2009 my two daughters (ages 12 and 13) participated in our first "Strong Kids Campaign Phonathon." It was a very valuable and learning experience for us! We had a wonderful time! I felt compelled to share my experience with others.

Maybe you have thought, "What can I do at the 'Y'?" There are many valuable and wonderful volunteer opportunities (regardless of your physical limitations, as I am legally disabled.)

The "Y" is helping to restore my life in more than one way!

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

- On April 23, 1564, according to tradition, the great English dramatist and poet William Shakespeare is born in Stratford-on-Avon. It is impossible to be certain of the exact day, but church records show that Shakespeare was baptized on April 26, and three days was a customary amount of time to wait before baptizing a newborn.
- On April 26, 1865, John Wilkes Booth, who assassinated President Abraham Lincoln 12 days earlier, is killed when Union soldiers track him down to a Virginia farm. The original plan involved a simultaneous assassination of Lincoln, Vice President Andrew Johnson and Secretary of State William Seward.
- On April 22, 1889, at precisely high noon, thousands of would-be settlers make a mad dash into the newly opened Oklahoma Territory to claim cheap land. All told, from 50,000 to 60,000 settlers entered the territory that day. Towns like Norman, Oklahoma City, Kingfisher and Guthrie sprang into being almost overnight.
- On April 24, 1916, on Easter Monday in Dublin, the Irish Republican Brotherhood, a secret organization of Irish nationalists led by Patrick Pearse, launches the so-called Easter Rebellion, an armed uprising against British rule. Rioters attacked British provincial government headquarters across Dublin and seized the Irish capital's General Post Office.

- On April 21, 1956, "Heartbreak Hotel" hits the top of the Billboard charts. The song was Elvis' first No. 1 hit. In his lifetime, he earned 94 gold singles and more than 40 gold LPs.
- On April 20, 1980, the Castro regime announces that all Cubans wishing to emigrate to the U.S. are free to board boats at the port of Mariel west of Havana, launching the Mariel Boatlift. In all, 125,000 Cubans fled to U.S. shores in about 1,700 boats, creating large waves of refugees that overwhelmed the U.S. Coast guard.
- On April 25, 1995, actress Ginger Rogers dies at the age of 83. Best known for the 10 films she made with dance partner Fred Astaire, Rogers also appeared in a wide variety of comic and dramatic roles and won an Oscar for Best Actress in the 1940 drama "Kitty Foyle."

Valentine's Love A Gift That Keeps On Giving

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Valentine's Day is long over, but love is a gift that keeps on giving and, for Maryrose Mirick, love is contagious and, sometimes, so surprising.

For Mirick, her love story inspired local jeweler Steven Leigh to give her a diamond-studded wedding ring set to replace the rings she'd given away at Christmas.

The latest story began with The Quincy Sun's Valentine issue. In her story, Mirick said great love is manifested in so many different ways, not necessarily through chocolates and flowers.

Mirick told how she's had more than 25 years of happy living because of a special gift of love: Her sister gave her a kidney in the early 1980's.

After the transplant operation, she and her husband became parents of two daughters. Mirick, also went to college and taught in Quincy.

Mirick said that, last Christmas, she'd given her two daughters her wedding rings because she wanted to share her joy.

"My husband Wayne of 35 years was fine with it," Mirick said at the time.

Her story caught Leigh's attention. He said he'd read Mirick's Valentine story and knew Maryrose through her work with the Quincy business community.

When she came into his shop at 1415 Hancock St., Quincy Center, he recalled the story.

Leigh decided to give her a new ring set with band and engagement ring.

At the Sun's request, Leigh offered an estimate of several thousand dollars and, then, explained his philosophy of starting each day with the hope "that you want to do at least one good deed."

Downtown Redevelopment Focus May 4

Quincy Center Program Topic April 30 At Historical Society

Quincy Historical Society is presenting two programs focusing on Quincy Center scheduled Thursday, April 30 and Monday, May 4, at the Adams Academy, 8 Adams St.

At the Society's monthly meeting April 30, at 7:30 p.m., Historical Society Executive Director Edward Fitzgerald will present an illustrated look at the history of Quincy Center. Dr. Fitzgerald will discuss the development of and changes to Quincy Center from its beginnings. He will focus on the developments in the late 19th and 20th centuries that transformed the center from a village into a true urban environment.

The presentation will also look at the course of the Center over the last 50 years and will provide an opportunity for some nostalgic glimpses of Quincy's past.

On Monday, May 4, at 6:30 p.m., the Historical Society will host a community meeting on the current project to redevelop Quincy Center.

Representatives of the city and Street-Works, the firm leading the redevelopment, will discuss the project.

The Street-Works representatives will make an illustrated presentation about their vision, concept, and plans thus far, and there will be a scale-model of the proposed redevelopment on display.

The presentation will be followed by a questions and comments period.

The public is welcome to attend either or both events. The programs are free of charge.

Mountains Of Maine Slide Show Monday

Quincy resident Steve Pinkham will present a free slide show and tell stories about the mountains of Maine Monday, April 27 at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

Hikers, climbers, skiers and other mountain-lovers will enjoy Pinkham's illustrated talk featuring his collection of turn-of-the-century postcards.

Only a handful of Maine's mountains were named by the Wabanaki tribes, such as Katahdin and Kineo. Most of those with Native American names got them from nearby rivers and lakes, which the Wabanakis named as they were the part of their routes they used to migrate and hunt.

Many of Maine's hills and mountains were named descriptively, while others were named for the early trappers, hunters, and pioneers or in memory of well-known people. Those attending the program will hear tragic stories, comic stories and tall tales used in naming the hills and mountains of Maine.

An avid outdoorsman and historian, Pinkham began researching the stories of Maine's mountains in histories, manuscripts and articles, often having to piece the stories together from a variety of sources. He has gathered the stories in a new book, Mountains of Maine: Intriguing Stories Behind Their Names, published by Down East Books. He has backpacked the entire section of the Appalachian Trail in New England, has climbed the 100 highest mountains in New England and climbed over 150 mountains and hills in Maine.

For more information, call 617-376-1301.

Friends Of Library Book Sale May 1-3

The Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library will hold a book sale Friday and Saturday, May 1 and May 2, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., and Sunday, May 3, from 1:30 to 4 p.m., at the main library, 40 Washington St., Quincy

Quincy High School's Emily Hajjar Wins Regional Student Council Election

Quincy High School's Junior Class President Emily Hajjar was recently elected vice president of the South East Association of Student Councils of Massachusetts.

With a campaign slogan of "Nothing Short of Excellence," the 4-foot 8-inch junior was the winner among four strong candidates at this year's South East Regional Spring Conference held at Attleboro High School.

The conference brings together hundreds of student leaders from high schools across Southeastern Massachusetts in order to attend workshops on educational excellence and leadership development.

"I've learned that leadership can not be measured by how long your legs are," Emily stated in her speech before hundreds of students and teachers. "Leadership is measured within every single one of us, and it is up to ourselves if we want to share it with others."

As a student leader at Quincy High School and in her community, Emily has demonstrated the qualities of servant leadership, and students from across the southeast of the state realized this in casting their vote for her.

As her class president, Emily has been active in planning school functions, community events and fundraisers. She represents her school at Quincy School Committee meetings, teaches dance, is a member of the drama club and is a member of the National Honor Society. This spring she has been planning a blood drive with the American Red Cross.

Emily will now serve as the vice president of the South East Association of Student Councils, and will meet regularly with student leaders from across the state organizing events to raise student awareness of issues facing young people today.

Quincy High School sent 14 students to this year's spring conference. In addition to Emily's election, students were also greeted by the Mayor of Attleboro, Kevin Dumas, who was elected in 2003 at the age of 27, advised students on civic responsibility.

"Get involved in your local community," Dumas said. "Find an issue that matters to you, find a cause, and stay involved."

Emily Hajjar and the student leaders of Quincy High take those words to heart.

Bellotti Trims Services In Fiscal Emergency

The Norfolk County Sheriff's office has phased out a number of public safety programs and Sheriff Michael Bellotti blames a fiscal emergency.

"I hate to bring them to an end but this fiscal emergency leaves us no choice," said Bellotti. "Literally tens of thousands of people have benefited from these programs over the last decade."

Most of the programs are aimed at protecting youngsters and senior citizens.

Bellotti said a sharp decrease in the operating budget for the Norfolk County Correctional Center left him no choice but to cut community programs. A safe and secure center will never be compromised, he said.

Some of the programs phased out or assigned to another agency include:

- "Are You OK?" in which officer place daily phone calls to elderly people who live alone to check on their well-being. More than 680 people have been served since 2001.

Bellotti said he is trying to find another agency to take over the popular program.

- Triad, which links seniors with public safety and social services in their communities and has distributed more than 70,000 "Files of Life" that alert paramedics to the medications a person uses.

- Community Service programs, which used inmate labor to work for cities and towns because officers who supervised them while they were out had to be re-deployed.

- Youth programs, including summer youth camps and the day and after school programs in Braintree.

"These programs taught kids how to work together to avoid conflict and achieve goals that they may have considered unreachable," said Bellotti.

He said his office has been severely impacted by the slumping economy since it relies on an archaic formula that depends largely on revenue from the real estate deeds excise tax.

As a result of the slumping real estate market, deeds excise tax revenue has decreased drastically.

Bellotti and other sheriffs have been advocating the transfer of their offices onto the state budget to make the funding more predictable. The expenses of seven other sheriffs are covered by the state.

Square Names To Honor Slain Vietnam Soldiers Vietnam POW Speaker At Armed Services Memorial Service

By TOM HENSHAW

Retired Navy Capt. Richard Stratton, who spent six years and two months in a Vietnamese prisoner of war camp, will be the guest speaker at the Vietnam Combat Veterans Combined Armed Forces memorial service Thursday, April 30.

The services will be held at 3 p.m. at the Vietnam Veterans' Clock Tower in Marina Bay but first the VCV-CAF will honor two soldiers from Quincy who died as a result of the war by naming intersections in their hometown for them.

Sp4 Peter J. Gerry was only 18 years old and a medic when he was killed in action July 28, 1969, the 39th from Quincy to die. The junction of East Squantum Street and Bayfield Road will be named the Peter J. Gerry Square at 10 a.m.

Sp4 David J. Pugliesi was 20 years of age and a infantryman when he was paralyzed March 3, 1969, by an enemy bullet and died of his wounds in 1987. The corner of Massachusetts Avenue and Grafton Street will be David J. Pugliesi Square at 11 a.m.

"A lot of squares around the city have been named for World War I and World War

RICHARD A. STRATTON

11 veterans," said Larry Norton, president of the VCV-CAF. "It's up to us to fight for this to the bitter end."

Dick Stratton was forced to eject from his A-4 Skyhawk over North Vietnam Jan. 5, 1967 and spent the next 2,250 days as a prisoner of war. He was freed March 4, 1973, and awarded a Silver Star medal for his conduct during his captivity.

A native of Quincy, Stratton graduated from Georgetown University and received a masters degree from Stanford. He obtained his wings as a Naval aviator in 1957.

He spent 30 years in military service, including 22 combat missions in Vietnam, accumulating more than 3,000 hours in tailhook jet aircraft and 300 aircraft carrier landings.

After his retirement in 1986, he practiced as a clinical social worker specializing in psychological trauma and addiction. He and Alice, his wife of 50 years, live in Atlantic Beach, Fla.

Peter Gerry, the son of James and Irene Gerry of Wollaston, had been in Vietnam only three months when he was killed while on patrol. It had been only a year since he had left North Quincy High School in his junior year to join the Army.

David Pugliesi, son of Salvatore and Elsie Pugliesi, was leading his troop through the jungle when he took a shot to the neck that severed his spinal cord, paralyzing both legs and one arm for the remaining 18 years of his life.

Despite the handicap that kept him in a wheelchair, he worked in a dental lab and even co-owned the QuinTree Drive-In Theater in Braintree.

His name was added to the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Wall in Washington listing those whose died in Vietnam two years after his death.

In the event of rain the VCVCAF ceremony will be held in the North Quincy High School gym at 3 p.m.

Roofers' Local 33 Endorses Davis In Ward 4 Council Race

The United Union of Roofers, Waterproofers and Allied Workers Local 33 announced their endorsement of Jay Davis Ward 4 city councillor City of Quincy.

The union also set the record straight regarding an erroneous endorsement announcement from Brian Palmucci, another candidate for Ward 4 councillor. "Roofers' Local 33 supports Jay Davis and not Brian Palmucci for Ward 4 City Councillor, although an announcement made by the Palmucci campaign last week stated the opposite.

"Roofers' Local 33 did mistakenly send a contribution check to Palmucci's campaign and this act was misconstrued as an official endorsement. Having become aware of the error, Roofers' Local 33 asked the campaign to return the check and Palmucci withdrew the endorsement announcement.

"We support Jay Davis for Quincy City Council. Jay has been an advocate for working families his entire career and has always fought for us, even in the difficult times we are now up against," said Paul Bickford, Business Manager for Roofers' Local 33. "Facing such economic uncertainty, we must make sure we elect the candidate who puts our interests and the interests of all working families first. Jay Davis is that candidate and we will be working hard to ensure his re-election."

The United Union of Roofers, Waterproofers and Allied Workers Local 33 is a labor union representing 800 workers from Massachusetts.

"I am enormously proud to have received the endorsement of the working men and women of the Roofers' Union Local 33," Davis said. "In both my public and private life, I have always strived to promote working family values. If re-elected, I will continue to fight to ensure that all workers earn fair wages with benefits packages that respect the workers' quality of life. It is more important now than ever before that working families are not left behind."

Applicant Says Proposed Dance School Misinterpreted

McNamee To Hold May 6 Meeting On Baby Dolls Studio

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee will hold a community meeting at 7 p.m., Wednesday, May 6, to discuss the proposed use of 37 Billings Rd. by the Boston Baby Dolls dance studio.

The meeting will be held in the cafeteria at North Quincy High School and the applicant, Alex Newman, is expected to address residents, and local business owners, and answer questions.

McNamee has charged that the proposed business will negatively impact the fragile Norfolk Downs business area by "creating a Combat Zone in an immigrant neighborhood."

"Essentially, this is a strippers' academy," McNamee said Monday, charging that the applicant has reversed direction over the past seven months in order to win approval by the Zoning Board of Appeals.

The Appeals Board will revisit the issue on Tuesday, May 19 at 7:15 p.m. in council chambers at City Hall.

McNamee said the owner originally provided a "totally different" focus when he, originally, presented plans for a vacant Billings Street studio. "There was a greater emphasis on exotic dancing."

The Zoning Board of Appeals must find that the new use is "not substantially more detrimental" to the neighborhood than the former use.

BRIAN MCNAMEE

mer use.

Since November when the company first applied for a permit, its focus has changed, according to McNamee. He said this week that the company no longer touts a major commitment to teaching burlesque and exotic dancing, but now focuses on the more pedestrian, and non-controversial, dancing classes of tap, ballet and Irish Step.

McNamee called the switch, "a strange metamorphosis."

The proposed dance studio would fill space formerly leased by Body Fit, a fitness studio, on Billings Road, Norfolk Downs where there are some large vacant rentals available side by side with several dozen thriving retailers.

The business area has long-standing retail businesses ranging from a jeweler's shop, a well known seafood establishment, a florist, a cleaners, Irish pub, barbershop and hairdresser.

hardware and pizza restaurant mixed with the more recent entrepreneurs in Asian restaurants, hair and nail salons, as well as legal and business offices.

The area's Hancock Street neighbors include a tattoo parlor and body-piercing shop which McNamee said weren't approved "while I was councillor."

In addition, the area boasts the 85-car municipal Vine Street parking lot and Newman said the handy parking and T transportation were among the attractions of Billings Street.

"We're opening a dance school," said Newman, stating the company is The Billings Street Dance Studio which will offer classes in ballet, Irish Step, swing dancing and Middle Eastern dancing.

Newman and his partner, Abigail Weiner, both of Dorchester, will operate the business.

Newman regrets that his new business has been misinterpreted. "What has happened here (is that) everything I touch is associated with burlesque. This is a new undertaking for us."

In an effort to raise money for the Quincy operation, Newman is advertising a fundraiser on the web. Stars at the fundraiser will include a real belly dancer complete with snake as well as a dancer who calls herself, "The Slutcracker Teaser."

"We're not going away, but we are running out of money and we're throwing a party to restore our war chest to see this thing through."

Newman claims he's already spent $10,000 in his

Psychiatric Evaluation In Wollaston Slaying

A 38-year-old pregnant Wollaston mother is undergoing psychiatric evaluation at Worcester State Hospital today following charges she killed her 9-year-old daughter and tried to kill herself.

Judge Diane Moriarty ordered the tests at Fang Chi-Xue's bedside in Boston Medical Center where she is recovering from slashed wrists. Her condition was not disclosed.

Fang will be charged with first degree murder of her daughter, Wen Xue, and attempted murder by strangulation of her second daughter, 14, at a hearing May 6 in Quincy District Court.

Dave Iaub, spokesman for Norfolk District Attorney William Keating, said it was not yet decided whether Fang would be charged with the death of her unborn child too.

"That is undetermined pending the results of the toxicology," he said. The viability of the fetus is important since Fang was 7 1/2 months pregnant.

The first policeman on the Woodbine Street scene, Danny Church, found Fang and Wen on a bed covered with blood from knife wounds. The youngster was dead, the mother barely alive.

Fang and her husband, Zhuoxing Xue, 36, with their daughters, immigrated from China in 2007. Legal permanent residents, he is a cook in a restaurant, she a stay-at-home mom.

The 14-year-old who survived the attempted strangulation told police her mother feared that her husband had fathered a child by another woman.

Conservation Commissioners Order B.J.'s Project Town Brook

Conservation Commissioners approved plans for B.J.'s Retail Warehouse at 200 Crown Colony Drive provided the developer observe 32 conditions, mainly protecting Town Brook during construction, and on a permanent basis.

If the plan wins a similar approval from city councillors, B.J.'s will be located on the 7.4 acre lot which was the former location of the Patriot Ledger printing press.

City councillors, who must approve a special permit for the project, continued their public hearing on the application Tuesday after The Quincy Sun went to press.

The property owner, QBJ Land Development LLC, will lease the property to B.J.'s for 20 years. The lease includes an 84,680 sq. ft. building with 387 parking spots.

Under the current Special Permit application, the store will operate seven days a week from 8 a.m. to 11 p.m.

Both Conservation Commissioner and councillors have repeatedly sought safeguards from the developers for Town Brook which is considered a critical smelt spawning habitat.

"The reach of Town Brook north of the proposed project is critical to smelt spawning habitat," according to a 2008 letter from Paul Diodati, Director, Division of Marine Fisheries.

Not only are the smelt habitats important, but Town

Brook must also be protected for flood control.

"We're trying to control flooding downstream," said Commissioner John Brennan.

Much of Town Brook runs underground through man-made tunnels designed to allow construction near its banks.

Among the few places, the brook flows above ground are from the Lowe's Warehouse site to Braintree, off Pond Street and an area adjacent to Petco and Morgan Memorial.

At this time of year, the brook is running dry, sporting patches of mud within its riverbed but it has been a source of flooding in the past.

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

Pull Over For Emergency Vehicles

Here's a topic worth reviewing. With cell phone use so prevalent while individuals drive, the distraction can impede emergency vehicle response and on road safety. Congestion on the roadways impacts the even greater need for adherence to the rules of the road as they pertain to emergency vehicle response. Meanwhile we hope that the empathy and consideration of roadway travelers will prevail while others are in need of emergency care when emergency vehicles must arrive at an incident promptly and safely.

A deputy chief approached me, asking whether I'd be willing to write something on the proper response for the public when they are approached in their vehicle by an emergency vehicle. Like myself, the deputy has been with this Fire Department for 31 years, and he has apparently noticed an increased failure of the public to respond properly to oncoming emergency vehicles. So I submit here, for all of us, a little RMV-101 review of what the law requires of the public when approached by an emergency vehicle.

Mass. General Law Chapter 89, Section 7A states: "Upon the approach of any fire apparatus, police vehicle, ambulance or disaster vehicle which is going to a fire or responding to a call, alarm or emergency situation, every person driving a vehicle on a way shall immediately drive said vehicle as far as possible toward the right-hand curb or side of said way and shall keep the same at a standstill until such fire apparatus, police vehicle ambulance or disaster vehicle has passed."

There's a thought process in the fire service that we're not doing anyone any good if we cannot arrive at a scene safely ourselves, prepared to take control of an emergency situation. Getting to a scene in a timely and safe manner is a priority. With the apparent increase in the amount of traffic on the roads today, doing so has become a greater challenge.

Included in that law, is that portion which states: "No person shall drive a vehicle within 300 feet of any fire apparatus going to a fire or responding to an alarm..." While following behind a piece of apparatus, you don't know where it is going or when it will stop. The officer takes deliberate care in placing the apparatus strategically at a scene. Personnel are disembarking while focusing on sizing up the situation and obtaining needed equipment. That law is in effect and that space is designated to assure their safety at that scene. Once again, if the personnel cannot approach that scene safely, the whole purpose of our response, to help others, is threatened.

Kindly adhere to the letter of the law when approached by an emergency vehicle and following that vehicle once it passes. It is our earnest intention to respond and offer quality care and attention at an incident and time can often be a determining factor in success or failure. We need your cooperation in allowing us to do our job safely and quickly as well. Pull over and allow the vehicles to pass by safely. Adhere to that designated distance. Someone's life may depend on your cooperation!

Meanwhile drive safely, and I hope this review is helpful.

Project Bread Names Quincy Among Top 'Generous Cities'

Project Bread, sponsors of the annual Walk for Hunger, has nominated Quincy as one of the top 10 "most generous cities" in the fight against hunger.

Residents of the city contributed nearly $65,000 in last year's Walk and hope to increase that number Sunday, May 3, when the perambulators hit the streets in 2009.

"I love the exhilaration of walking all 20 miles and knowing I am putting food on the tables of the most needy citizens," said Kirstin Badowski of Quincy, who has been walking the walk for five years.

In all, Project Bread gave $309,550 in 2008 to 71 area food programs and $417,622 to these and other hunger prevention programs in southeastern Massachusetts.

"The need is even greater than ever and this year every dollar, every mile, and every volunteer hour counts," said Ellen Parker, executive director of Project Bread.

"Registration is now open to participate and we urge our Walkers to understand that no contribution is too small.

"The magic of the Walk is that everyone's contribution adds up to a significant amount of help for people struggling throughout the year ahead."

Councillors, Firefighters Seek Changes In Medical Response

Safety Committee meeting. "It's not fair to the taxpayer; it's not fair to the fire department," said Arienti who then described the wear and tear on department vehicles, the cost of equipment and manpower shortages.

"We're down to bare bones," Arienti said of the department's firefighters who now number 139 and who have periodically, lost access to Rescue 1 and Ladder 2 this year.

Ambulance Fees

While the department is struggling and scaling down equipment, private ambulance providers are cashing in, according to Arienti and councillors.

"They make all the money in the transfers," Arienti said.

"There is a lot of money that is out there that we are not getting," Councillor John Keenan, chairman of the Finance Committee, said during a review of the fire department services.

Keenan referred to private ambulance fees, as did Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond who called an ambulance runs, "a lucrative area." Raymond suggested setting "a set fee per call."

Arienti said this week that a study committee composed of administrative councillors, firefighters and residents should examine the issues and recommend alternative solutions.

Alternatives could include paramedic teams, according to Keenan who said firefighters could be trained for ambulance response and insurance companies charged for each call.

Keenan described paramedic teams operating in other municipalities where insurance companies are billed for city services.

City Council President Jay Davis asked if billing individuals and insurance companies would require additional staff and a new payroll. He also asked how the city would handle those with no insurance.

"It would certainly be worthy of a feasibility study," said Councillor Joseph Finn of Keenan's proposal for a paramedic program.

"We need to get a committee together to do a study on this," Arienti said this week, adding, "Taking over the ambulance service may hurt or may help the department."

Councillors, also, considered other fee or fine initiatives during the Finance Committee's review of the department's false alarm data.

Acting Chief Joseph Barron presented department statistics and said that despite the budget restrictions, "Our response time is within three minutes."

Firefighters respond that quickly to fires, medical calls and a significant number of false alarms due to faulty detectors, according to Barron.

False Alarms

In 2008, false alarms accounted for 1,757 of 17% of the department's 9,374 runs and that percentage has been fairly similar in the past 10 years, according to Barron.

Barron described some apartment building owners and homeowners as repeatedly operating faulty alarm systems to the point of "negligence."

When firefighters respond to false alarms, fire engines and firefighters are at risk and not available for other calls, the chief said.

"The (fire) trucks aren't still a certainty, but make no mistake, these efforts will go a long way toward maintaining critical services in the city."

Quincy's enrollment in the state Group Insurance Commission is anticipated to save at least $4 million in health care costs, bringing the first-ever reduction in a budget line that has soared over the last several years.

The Koch administration is now writing the budget for the fiscal year that begins in July, and is "exploring every option" for reductions and restructuring, Koch said.

The full breadth of cuts is still being determined as budget wrangling continues at the state level but officials believe several million dollars will need to be slashed.

"These are extraordinary times, and we will be making extraordinarily difficult decisions," Koch said. "But our focus remains on protecting the core City services that our residents expect and deserve."

Markoff was also charged with armed robbery and kidnapping April 10 in the Boston's Westin Copley Hotel in the Back Bay of a prostitute who also advertised her services on Craigslist.

He was ordered held on $250,000 bail on the charges.

Quincy Police participated in the taking of the Highpoint Development but Capt. John Dougan declined to comment on the department's role in the investigation, referring callers to the Boston Police Department for information.

Brisman was found shot to death in a hallway on the 20th floor of the Marriott Copley Place and a security camera caught a clean-cut young white man strolling casually through the hallway carrying a BlackBerry.

Strobe photos of the man were made by the Boston Police Department. He was wearing a dark jacket, a white shirt and dark pants. He was about 5'10" tall, 160 lbs, with short brown hair and a goatee. He was wearing a dark jacket, a white shirt and dark pants.

A Job Well Done

On Monday, April 13, at approximately 4:30 p.m., Officer Bruce Trieu was walking the beat in Quincy Square when he was approached by a citizen in the area of Hancock Street and Cliveden Street, who pointed to the bus stop in front of Angelina's pizza and stated that there is a large male screaming at a female.

LT. DAN MINTON

Officer Trieu walked to the area, where another citizen stated, "There is a drunk guy by the bus stop in front of Angelina's pizza calling people n*^&%$". As Officer Trieu neared, Quincy Police dispatch gave out a call that a female was calling for help at the same location. She said that a man was screaming at her. The officer located the female, who was visibly upset. She provided a description of the suspect, adding that he was walking toward Granite Street and after leaving her, started harassing someone else.

As Officer Trieu tried to catch up to the suspect, dispatch came over the air stating that they have received four 911 calls for a fight on Granite Street near Hancock Street.

Officer Trieu ran toward the intersection and found a large crowd gathering on the corner, with people pointing down Granite Street. One witness said, "Officer, the guy in the leather jacket is chasing the guy in green. The guy in green is trying to get away to avoid a fight". The officer turned the corner and immediately recognized the suspect as someone who he had placed into protective custody for intoxication just a few days earlier. The suspect was chasing the victim in the green shirt. Officer Trieu ran over and yelled at the suspect to stop, which he did, but then walked towards the Officer in a very agitated state and a very aggressive manner.

The Officer ordered the suspect to stop, turn around and put his hands behind his back. The suspect slowed, then screamed obscenities and waved his fists in the air in a threatening manner.

Concerned for his safety, Officer Trieu removed his baton from the holster which stopped the suspect. Officer's Matt Patton and Mike Duran arrived on scene and assisted in handcuffing the suspect, who struggled, screaming at the top of his lungs and spitting in the Officer's faces. The suspect was clearly inebriated and had a half empty bottle of whiskey in his pocket.

Officer Trieu then interviewed the victim with the green T-shirt and learned that the suspect, unknown to him, started chasing and threatening him for no reason. He stated he was not hit and did not want to pursue any charges. The officer then questioned the female victim caller, who said that she did not know the suspect. She said, "He just came out of nowhere and started screaming at me - I'm going to cut you up and stab you" several times, then followed her as she was trying to walk away. When she realized he was following her and kept saying, "I'm going to stab you", she ran into a store and called "911."

She said that once she went into the business, the suspect found a new victim and started to chase him. This victim said that she was not hurt and does not want to press charges.

The suspect, a 48-year-old homeless person, well known to the Quincy Police, was charged with "Disorderly Conduct" and transported to the station. Officer Duran transported the suspect, who continuously kicked the door of the cruiser and spit everywhere in the cruiser.

The panel between the prisoner compartment and the front was covered with spit. The suspect was additionally charged with "Wanton Destruction of Property over $250.00."

Nice Work!

WARNING: Last week, around 7:30 P.M., two men about 40 years old went to the door of a Norton Road senior citizen and told a story on how recycling saves money for the city. They then asked for $15.00 to $20.00 to get the recycling program started in Quincy. This of course was a scam. Report any attempts to solicit money to the police!

PATTY JOHNSTON left a 25-year career in the oil/HVAC industry to open Piatti's Gift Shop at Quincy Medical Center. The shop is open seven days a week and offers a wide array of merchandise from lottery tickets to one-of-a-kind jewelry and pottery.

Piatti's Gift Shop Opens At QMC

At a time when most people would be a bit skittish about embarking on new entrepreneurial enterprises, Quincy resident Patty Johnston decided to take the plunge, changing careers to open a new gift shop at Quincy Medical Center (QMC) called Piatti's Gifts.

Piatti's, which opened for business last month, held its grand opening April 15, kicked off by a ribbon cutting ceremony with Quincy Mayor Thomas Koch, QMC President and CEO Gary Gibbons, MD, and Dean Rizzo, Executive Director of Quincy 2000 Collaborative.

The shop is located near QMC's main entrance and lobby. Its inventory runs the gamut from every day items like lottery tickets, candy, cards and lovely flower arrangements to the more unexpected, such as one-of-a-kind jewelry by Bellasoro and unique handcrafted pottery created by Surfside Studio.

"I named the shop Piatti's as a play on my name and the Italian word for dishes, it's kind of a different and fun name and that's how I want my customers to experience the shop," says Johnston, who knows the hospital well having delivered one of her two children, Roger and Kellie, there.

When Johnston heard that the QMC's former gift shop had closed last winter, she decided the time was right for her to make the change from her 25-year career in the oil and HVAC industry to open the new shop.

"It was time. This is something I've always wanted to do, so I decided I would seize the opportunity," she says. "I've had a chance to talk with a lot of staff and hear what they would like to see available at the shop."

"So far, I have had a great response from everyone who comes in. People really seem to like the variety of the merchandise."

Piatti's Gift Shop is open Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 7 p.m., Saturdays, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Sundays, 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. For more information about the shop, call 617-376-5509.

Quincy Medical Center is a 196-bed acute care community-teaching hospital, providing the highest quality, most personalized and comprehensive medical and surgical services to patients throughout the South Shore. A private, nonprofit hospital, QMC has played a vital role in the community since 1890, serving the needs of its diverse patient population without exception. QMC is a clinical and academic affiliate of Boston University School of Medicine and Boston Medical Center.

HAMMER TOES

When the middle joint in the toe is contracted, it results in a hammer toe. Tightened tendons and ligaments cause the toe's joints to curl downwards. The top of the toe becomes irritated due to rubbing against shoes. The big toe is the only one that remains safe from this potential malady. Some hammer toes can be straightened manually; some cannot move. Stress can be transferred to the ball of the foot, encouraging the development of corns and calluses. Hammer toes originate from a muscle imbalance or as a result of arthritis. There are devices to hold down the hammer toe, and gel caps and shields that eliminate friction. Your foot doctor can recommend an appropriate course of action.

When your feet are suffering from hammer toes, heel pain, bunions, fungal infections, toenail conditions, or hereditary problems, the first step to better foot health is a good podiatrist. If your foot problem concerns pronation, we invite you to consult with us about HyProCure™. I am one of only two podiatrists in Massachusetts who has the advanced training necessary to perform this pain-saving, minimally invasive procedure that requires no casting and has patients back in their regular shoes in just one week. Call our office at QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER for an appointment at 781-986-3668. Office hours are also available at 999 North Main St., in the Randolph Medical Office Building, and Milton Medical Building in Suite 221.

P.S. When choosing footwear, be sure that the toe area is high and broad enough to accommodate the hammer toes.

Safe Gutter Cleaning

Last week, we learned about clearing debris from the rooftop and noting damage to be taken care of. This week, let's go into more detail about the gutter system -- a critical component of a healthy roof and a healthy house.

Gutter dams -- buildups of leaves, twigs, nests and other debris in one or more spots along a gutter run -- can cause a lot of damage to the gutter, and left unchecked, can cause problems in other parts of the house. For example, water spilling over the top of a gutter or through a torn gutter seam can cause leaks or cracks in the foundation directly beneath that spot, in a much shorter time that one can imagine.

So inspecting and cleaning the gutter system twice a year -- spring and fall -- is important. You can do some of this inspection from the rooftop, but for a more thorough look, set up a ladder (with a helper on the ground to brace the ladder and to take notes for you) and move along the run.

To clean the gutters, wear sturdy work gloves and carry a couple of tools in your belt -- particularly a long screwdriver or sturdy rod to break up stubborn dams. Once these debris piles are loosened up with a long tool (which also scares off any critters that might be nesting in said debris pile), grab the debris and throw them down to the ground.

Once all these dams are cleared away, take the garden hose up with you, set it at the highest end of the run, and have your helper turn the water on full force. The water will wash remaining leaves and debris to the top of the downspout, where they will pile up on the downspout screen -- from which you can remove them. The water flow also will reveal leaks in the gutter system that can be patched up after the cleaning is complete.

Most leaks appear at the seams where sections of the gutter run meet up. (This is also where most dams tend to build up, as there is a little lip at the seam on which debris can get caught.) Loose seams can be reconnected fairly quickly by drilling a new hole through the upper side of the gutter sections where they overlap, and inserting a screw and washer (with the head inside the gutter and the screw protruding outside it), tightening with a wingnut.

Gutter sections with rips or holes in the middle, rather than the seams, should be replaced if possible. If a hole is not too big, however, it can be patched using a gutter patch kit.

HOME TIP: Newer gutter systems sometimes come with, or have available, patching or replacement kits. Check with the gutter manufacturer or at a home-improvement store.

Home Need A Design Stimulus Plan?

ARA) - These days bail-outs are common, but not many Americans have considered it for their home design. Does lifeless and cluttered design leave your home in need of a makeover?

Lifestyle and design expert Susie Coelho is out to change all of that with a sweeping Home Design Stimulus Plan that offers immediate and effective relief for homeowners to boost their surroundings, both inside and out, without busting their budgets.

"Homeowners have been clamoring for widespread reform both inside and outside of the home," says Coelho, who has provided guidance and support to homeowners for years with her best-selling books and HGTV makeover shows Surprise Gardener and Outer Spaces. "This plan will refresh any home design."

The five key components to Coelho's Home Design Stimulus Plan are as follows:

1. Provide immediate relief to family and living rooms with the removal of excess furniture.

Provide relief to living and family rooms that have been over-taxed by excess furniture and accessories. Space is the basis for contemporary design and this look can be achieved by trimming down. Stimulate and breathe new life into rooms by cutting back on anything that has become a liability instead of an asset. Remove that extra wing back chair, the torn ottoman, those pillows that swallow up the sofa, and maybe even that old carpet so that you can actually see some floor.

2. Cut back on spending with the addition of only inexpensive or handmade decorative pieces.

Fool guests by creating pieces of art for little or no money. Look for branches that can be put in a vase, a painting from a garage sale or flea market, a beautiful fabric piece, or even a great piece of wallpaper that can be framed. Find large pieces that make big statements. Light the art from the bottom with a small spotlight that can be tucked behind the piece. Let the art be the star of the room.

3. Infuse natural light into the home for an immediate morale (and energy efficient) boost.

Bring natural light into the home simply and affordably, and watch spirits increase as the energy bills decrease. Windows are a piece of art and can be used to showcase an outdoor tree or plant and create that seamless look between the indoors and the outdoors - but they must be clean. According to a recent survey, almost half of homeowners (48 percent) would rather clean the toilet or shower than their outdoor windows. For many that may be because of the time and effort that goes into the chore, but it can be simple and the results can be dramatic. I recommend using a new quick, easy and affordable solution for a streak-free shine in half the time - the Windex Outdoor All-in-One Glass Cleaning Tool.

4. Give outdoor areas some incentives by taking the best of interior design outside.

Bring change to your home by styling the outdoor spaces using simple indoor techniques. Add an outdoor rug to soften the patio floor; bring in a side table as a focal point or even an outdoor leather ottoman. Elevate the planter to the status it merits by placing it on a table instead of the ground. Add some decorative pillows to make the outdoor furniture more inviting. If in the market for furniture, choose those pieces that have the flexibility to be used either indoors or out.

5. Bailout your backyard!

No backyard challenge is insurmountable with these helpful hints for bringing quick relief to the outdoor areas. No place to plant? Go vertical in your garden with trellises, walls, arbors and planters. Use ivy, ficus, bougainvillea, night blooming jasmine, gardenias, and other fragrant species to stimulate the senses. Small spaces? Give the illusion of space by using a mirror to reflect and open up areas, adding an entirely new dimension.

With these easy tips, the indoor and outdoor spaces will look fabulous in no time. Next on the to-do list: find an excuse for a party to show off the beautifully refreshed home.

Four Ways To Add 'Wow!' To Your Kitchen

(ARA) - As you start to build your new home, or remodel an older house into the comfortable and elegant retreat you've been dreaming about, one of the main rooms to consider will be the look, feel and use of your kitchen.

Let's face it. No matter where you try to entertain in your home, guests always end up in the kitchen. The kitchen is the heart and soul of any home and the main congregating point for families and friends. Whether you are empty nesters or parents with children running through the house, the kitchen is your home's center for entertaining, gathering, communicating and cooking.

When designing your dream kitchen, here are some ideas you can work in to create the "wow" factor:

1. Plan around your cooking style.

How you and other cooks in your household use the work triangle -- the area between the sink, the stove and your refrigerator -- will help you determine the ideal layout. If you entertain a lot, consider adding an extra sink for food preparation, on a side counter or a center island. This will allow you more flexibility as you whirl around concocting marvelous meals and snacks -- especially if you have more than one chef in the kitchen.

2. Design your cabinets with function and style and make a statement with your finishes.

Custom cabinetry is a perfect way to show off your style and implement a custom design while maximizing your kitchen's space for socializing, cooking, and storage. Cabinets by Graber crafts and builds wood custom cabinets using only the finest hardwoods available, matching wood grains on all pieces for consistency and color. The company will personally measure your space to make sure the final product fits exactly the way you want it to -- customized to within 1/16 of an inch -- taking responsibility off you and your contractor.

Wood cabinets and countertops from Cabinets by Graber also can include architectural wood carvings for all styles, creating the details you need for the "wow" factor in your kitchen. Visit www.cabinetsbygraber.com for ideas on how to make your new or remodeled kitchen a beautiful room.

3. Include space for the luxury appliances.

What would your dream kitchen be without that indoor grill, built-in espresso machine or wine cooler tucked into an alcove? As you plan your kitchen, remember that custom cabinet makers can design around your appliance needs. Keep in mind traffic patterns through the kitchen space and the frequency you will use such appliances.

4. Light it up

If you have a gorgeous kitchen, you need to illuminate it so everyone can admire the work, style and craftsmanship. Consider installing recessed canned lights or a simple chandelier or pendant lamp over the island. Built-in cabinet lighting and under cabinet lighting adds drama to the space and highlights areas like your countertops or special dishes.

Safe Mowing Is No Accident

(NAPS) - Reading a lawn mower's manual probably isn't at the top of the average consumer's priority lists -- but it should be.

Unsafe operation of lawn mowers leads to thousands of accidents each year, many resulting in serious or fatal injuries to adults and even young children. Yet most of these accidents can be prevented.

"If you turn on a mower without knowing how to operate it properly, you're sacrificing your safety and the safety of those around you," said Rod Benson, engineering services manager for Exmark, a mower manufacturer.

Mower safety guidelines are in owner's manuals and at exmark.com/safetytips.htm. Here are a few of the key safety considerations:

1) Before mowing, clear the area of rocks, sticks, toys or other debris that can easily be picked up by mower blades and thrown through the discharge chute, causing injury.

2. Leave all power safety features in place such as guards, shields, deflectors and warning decals to protect operators and others nearby.

3. Do not mow when children are near. It takes only a fraction of a second for a child to run into a mower's path. Prevent injury by supervising children and pets inside the home while someone is mowing.

4. Extra care should be taken on hills, which can cause a loss of traction. Movements should be deliberate and steady, with no sudden changes in speed or direction. Hills with slopes greater than 15 degrees should always be avoided.

5. Use only a walk-behind mower or hand-trimmer near retaining walls, drop-offs or water. A riding mower wheel could slip over the edge, or the ground could give way, causing the mower to roll over.

Dollars and sense

by David Uffington

Your Credit Score

With lending dollars tight, it's more important than ever to make sure your credit scores are as high as they can be.

A newly updated book, "Your Credit Score, Your Money and What's at Stake" (FT Press) walks you through everything you need to know about the three-digit number that shapes your financial future. Written by Liz Pulliam Weston, personal finance columnist for MSN Money, "Your Credit Score" is a valuable reference.

Here are some facts the book points out:

- It is punishing the way a credit score can drop over something small. The drop in your credit number seems mammoth in comparison to a "little" error, such as making a late payment. Worse, the better your credit, the more a small glitch will count against you.

- If you use a large percentage of available credit on one card, it will count against you. One solution is to move the debt between multiple cards, thus giving you a smaller balance on each card.

- Having bad credit costs you money over the long haul. Each time you apply for a loan, you won't qualify for good interest rates. Your insurance premiums will go up, as it's thought (by insurers) that those with low scores will file more claims.

- It's important to check your credit report on a regular basis and go over it carefully. You're entitled to one free report per year (in certain states it's two per year.) Dispute inaccurate information, including the spelling of your name, wrong addresses or Social Security numbers, and inquiries you didn't authorize.

- If you don't use an old card, don't close the account. It can hurt your credit score because it appears that your credit history is newer than it really is.

- Most helpful is the book's chapter on coping with a credit crisis. Whether it's a mountain of debt or a job loss, the chapter outlines the steps to take to get back on your feet.

The book also covers in detail what to do when you're a victim of identity theft and how to prevent it, how to raise your credit score in only a few months, fighting back against lenders who want to change your credit limits or your interest rates, and how your credit score is determined.

David Uffington regrets that he cannot personally answer reader questions, but will incorporate them into his column whenever possible. Write to him in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475, or send e-mail to columnreply@gmail.com.

4-Run Sixth Puts NQ Over the Top

Red Raiders Upend Presidents, 6-5

By SEAN BRENNAN

Sammi Bonanni and the North Quincy Red Raiders had to sweat out a seventh inning rally by the Quincy Presidents, but in the end, North escaped with a huge 6-5 upset win at Mitchell-McCoy Field on April 15.

North, which broke open a 2-2 game with a four-run sixth inning against Quincy ace pitcher Kori Sorensen, picked up its second win of the season with clutch hitting and solid defense. But it was the workman-like performance by Bonanni on the hill that propelled the Red Raiders to victory. Bonanni (seven innings, six strikeouts, four hits) battled Sorensen pitch-for-pitch and besides the seventh inning hiccup, she kept the potent Presidents lineup in check.

"It was excellent," said NQ head coach Kerry Ginty about her team's performance against Quincy. "We weren't afraid of her (Sorensen). We had practiced a ton on just getting our hands through the ball and working against speed and it really paid off.

"Our team defense is our strength and we played really well today. We have been playing real well all season and it came together in this game."

Ginty was also impressed with the way her junior hurler handled the pressure of closing out Quincy and going up against a great pitcher like Sorensen.

"It was a little hairy (the bottom of the seventh), but I think it was just nerves," added Ginty about the pitching performance of Bonanni. "It was the first time we had been in a situation like that all year. But she stepped up. She has been solid for us all year; she is a fighter and she loves the competition."

"She knows she can throw strikes because of the team defense behind her. It was a big win and hopefully it gives us some confidence moving forward. Our record does not indicate how good of a team we have so it was good to get the monkey off our backs."

The scoring began early in the game as Quincy jumped out to a 1-0 first inning lead. Leadoff hitter Elisa Lam tripled and scored on a RBI groundout by Julia Yee, but Bonanni settled down and retired Sorensen on a groundout, walked Olivia Berry and closed the inning out with a strikeout of Kylie Kozlowski.

The Raiders evened the game at 1-1 the very next inning. With two outs, senior Brittany Folkins reached base and came around to score on a two-out base hit from Bonanni.

Over the next four innings both Sorensen and Bonanni held the opposing offenses in check. At the end of five innings, the teams were deadlocked at 2-2.

North Quincy's four-run sixth inning rally started when senior Siobhan Carnell reached on an error. Senior Kathleen Lynch singled Carmell to second and Amanda Kelly reached base on another Quincy error, scoring Carmell with the team's third run. Folkins broke the inning open with a two-run RBI double (she was thrown out at third on a bang-bang play). After Bonanni reached on the third Quincy error of the frame, she was forced out at second base for the second out of the inning, but North pulled their lead to 4-2 in the bottom of the sixth on a two-run triple from freshman Emma Wilson. Looking to extend a 10-inning Quincy rally, Bonanni, after walking Sorensen to open the bottom of the frame, struck out Berry and Kozlowski and got freshman Nicole Parry to pop-out to end the game. With the game tied 4-4, North pulled a 5-4 lead from a 4-4 tie in the seventh inning. The Red Raiders' lead was extended to 6-4 in the eighth on a solo home run by Bonanni. In the bottom of the ninth, Bonanni got a 6-5 victory, ending a season that saw her pitch in 11 games, with a 2-1 record and a 3.00 ERA.

THE PRESIDENTS' NICOLE PARRY (#13) is called out at first base in the third inning of last week's softball game against NQ at Mitchell-McCoy Field. NQ's Catherine O'Connell stretches to make the play.

out that set off a serious North Quincy celebration.

"We played lousy and deserved what we got tonight, every bit of it," said frustrated Quincy head coach Mike Sedar. "We didn't play defense, we didn't hit. We didn't deserve to win."

For North Quincy and especially the Red Raiders senior class, the victory over their city rivals and a team in Quincy that is considered one of the best in the Patriot League, was hard earned and worthy of celebration.

"We pulled together after starting the season a little shaky," said senior captain Brittany Folkins who played exceptional defense at shortstop all game. "We had a great practice leading up to this game, working on our hitting and infield defense. This win means a lot to us. They are a great team but they came in like they were going to beat us, but we showed them that we are also a very good team."

Round two between North Quincy and Quincy is scheduled for May 19 at Mitchell-McCoy Field.

Notes: North Quincy upped its overall record to 3-3 with an 8-3 win over Scituate last Friday. Senior Catherine O'Connell and freshman Emma Ainsley both finished 4-for-4 with two RBI... Quincy rebounded with a league win over Pembroke last Friday. The team's record is currently 4-3 overall.

Presidents Top Red Raiders, 4-2

Quincy's Kevin Keith Dazzles On The Hill

By SEAN BRENNAN

The Quincy Presidents took to the diamond at Adams Field last Wednesday night looking to slow down the red-hot North Quincy Red Raiders and behind the lights-out pitching of junior Kevin Keith, the Presidents handed the Raiders only their second loss of the season, 4-2.

Keith was masterful. He limited North Quincy to just three hits, striking out eleven batters. He took a no-hit bid to within seven outs of completion, finally allowing a two-out fifth inning hit to NQ senior Matt Jay. But even after Keith lost the no-hitter, he finished the game strong and helped Quincy pick up its third win of the spring and the team's second Patriot League win of the year (Quincy was shutout last Friday, 10-0, by Pembroke High School and the team record now stands at 3-3 overall, 2-3 in Patriot League action).

"Even after he lost the no-hitter he's so focused and he competes at a high-level,

BASEBALL Quincy - 4 North Quincy - 2

I wasn't worried about that rattling him," said Quincy coach Tim Daley about Keith's performance on the mound. "What's even more impressive is that's a very good hitting team. They are very disciplined and he did a good job containing him."

The Presidents jumped out to an early 1-0 first inning lead against Red Raider junior Keith Morreale (3 1/3 innings, four runs) as Quincy junior Colin McCarthy singled to lead-off the game. McCarthy would reach third base and came around to score the game's first run on a delayed steal.

With Keith dealing, Quincy extended its lead to 2-0 in the second and to 4-0 by the end of four frames. In the second inning, sophomore Lucas McDonough walked, stole second base and came all-the-way-around to score on a RBI single off the bat of junior David Muollo. Two innings later, in the fourth, Quincy drove Morreale from the game. Seniors Sean Gray and Greg Gaffney reached base via walks (four of the six batters who drew walks against Morreale scored) and McCarthy delivered both runners home with a clutch two-run single.

NQ senior Ben Leahy (two hits, seven strikeouts) came in as relief for Morreale and shutdown Quincy the rest of the way, but by that point the damage was done.

The Red Raiders finally got on the scoreboard in the bottom of the fourth inning. Keith, facing Jay, struck him out but the pitch scooted to the backstop. Jay, hustling all the way down the first-base line, drew an errant throw that ended up in foul territory. The error advanced Jay into scoring position and he would go to third on a groundout and later scored North's first run on another groundout. The score at the end of four innings was 4-1 Quincy.

The Raiders, playing as the home team, stepped to the dish in the seventh trail-seven games for no reason. The Raiders can rake and score runs at a rapid pace and even with Keith pitching the Raiders did not give in.

Junior John Ainsley led off the seventh with his team's second hit (single). He would later score the game's final run on a pinch-hit infield single off the bat of senior Lamonte Toombs. With the tying run on base, Keith bore down and struck out the final two batters of the game to give Quincy a huge early-season win.

Notes: Quincy followed the North Quincy game with a 10-0 loss to Pembroke High School. Entering school vacation week, the Presidents have a 3-3 record... The Red Raiders bounced back from the loss to Quincy with two wins. The first was an impressive

8-7 walk-off victory over Patriot League opponent Scituate High School on April 16. Brian Donaghey bases-loaded single drove in the winning run. Joe Edgerly pitched six outstanding innings and Ben Leahy picked up the win in relief. Matt Rodriguez, Devin Hudson, Matt Jay and Danny Russell picked up big hits against Scituate. North pushed its record to 8-2 with an 8-2 victory over Weymouth High School on April 19. Junior Ryan Louis pitched six innings, striking out nine batters. At the plate, Louis had two hits, two RBI and three runs scored. Rodriguez (double, two runs) and Toombs (two RBI) carried the North Quincy offense. Both NQ and Quincy will be playing in the annual NQHS Baseball Tournament this week. The two city teams were scheduled to play Tuesday at 7 p.m. at Adams Field (weather permitting). If that game was rained-out, the makeup date is set for Thursday at 7 p.m. (Adams Field), with the second day of the tournament set for Friday.

Nine-and-Under Quincy Redstockings Open Season

The 9Under Quincy Redstockings opened their 2009 baseball season over the weekend at Quarry Hills with doubleheaders against the Seadogs and Navigators, both talented local 10Under teams.

On Saturday, behind 15 strikeouts from four different pitchers, Quincy defeated the Seadogs 4-3 in Game 1. With Quincy holding a slim 4-3 lead entering the top of the sixth inning, Mark Monahan came in as relief and struck out the side to earn the save.

Kevin McDonald (three innings, five Ks) earned the win and the combo of Matt

Eagles and Gregg Selbert produced the game-winning run in the home half of the fourth inning.

In Game 2, Quincy jumped out to an 8-0 lead, but the Seadogs battled back to tie the game at 8-8 in the fifth. The two teams ended regulation tied, and after one scoreless extra inning, the contest ended in an 8-8 tie.

Matt Tomlinson (three stolen bases) and AJ Currie (triple, two RBI) paced the Quincy offense.

On Sunday, the Redstockings played the NE Navigators of Pembroke. In Game 1, the Navigators scored five first innings runs, but Quincy battled back to take a 6-5 lead. But the Navigators proved to be too much and outslugged Quincy to the tune of a 21-11 victory.

In Game 2, behind strong pitching and defense, Quincy bounced back to win 7-3. John McDonald earned the win on the hill and Matt Fox (two runs, two stolen bases) and Justin Sullivan (two stolen bases) led the offense.

The 9U team (2-1 overall) will open division play on April 26 against the Rhode Island Reds.

Quincy Residents Continue To Shine On Diamond

With the college baseball season fast approaching conference playoff time, several Quincy residents continue to make significant contributions to their respective teams.

Michael LeBel

Last week Quincy High School's Michael LeBel led the University of Rhode Island's offensive attack, as the team swept a three-game series over St. Bonaventure. LeBel finished the series with six hits, including two home runs and a triple, seven RBI, five runs scored and three stolen bases, including a steal of home. For the season (37 games), LeBel, only a freshman, ranks second on the team in batting average (.358), runs scored (26), home runs (six), RBI (31), stolen bases (10) and slugging percentage (.582).

John Folino

UConn senior hurler John Folino continues to anchor the Huskies pitching staff. Last Friday, Folino extended his winning streak to four games as UConn defeated Georgetown. On the season, Folino's record is 5-2 overall. He has a 3.08 ERA and averages a strikeout per inning.

Toni Conley

UMass freshman Toni Conley has displayed an iron man-like endurance, catching in 30 out of 32 games for the Minutemen. He is batting .305 and is second on the team with a .436 on-base percentage.

Dean Sandomato

Quincy's Dean Sandomato has been a key contributor to the Bentley College bulipen this season. He has a 2-1 record and an ERA of 2.08. Sandomato has limited opponents to a .227 batting average.

Other Quincy residents making late season contributions to their teams include Steve Sullivan (pitcher Westfield State), Scott Warwick (relief pitcher Fairfield University), Eric Moreschi (relief pitcher Mass Maritime) and Conor Cavanaugh and Brian McQuinn, both playing at Lasall College.

Runs Record To 5-0

North Quincy Tennis Defeats Quincy, 3-2

Tips for Building Healthier Habits

(ARA) - Between juggling work, soccer practice, ballet and household chores, taking the time to build healthier habits can be a seemingly daunting task for moms. But a new survey reveals a startling misconception. Despite the fact that it's generally agreed upon that it takes just three to six weeks to form a new habit, the overwhelming majority of respondents think it takes six months or longer.

"I want to educate moms and their families about how easy it can be to form new, healthy habits," says Bob Greene, founder of the Best Life program. "For example, the simple act of swapping a sugared beverage for water is an easy change that can shave calories and add up to big results over time. Replace one typical 12 ounce sugared beverage daily with water and cut 3,650 teaspoons of sugar a year from your diet -- that's 38 pounds of sugar a year."

To help empower families to take it one step at a time, Bob Greene and Nestle Pure Life brand bottled water joined forces to launch the Pure Life / Best Life Challenge at www.purelifebestlife.com to help make families small changes in

Following are a few simple steps that families can take to acquire new healthy habits.

Drink Right.

* Put a water bottle in your kid's bag before they head off to practice or a game.

* If your family drinks whole milk now, switch gradually, first to 2 percent and then to 1 percent.

* Before your workout, drink 8 ounces of water.

Eat Right:

* Plan your meal menus in advance so you know what's coming.

* Set a kitchen curfew and close your kitchen after dinner.

Get Green.

* Keep your recycling bin in a prominent place to keep it top of mind throughout the week.

* Stop catalogs you don't read and don't want.

* Recycle or compost any yard waste and clippings.

Get Active.

* Make your goals quantifiable (e.g., walk 1 mile three times this week).

* Schedule some off days or easy days into your regular workout routine.

* Exercise with a partner or a neighborhood group.

Now through Sept. 30, families can check out other tips and small steps to achieving a healthier lifestyle by taking the Pure Life / Best Life Challenge.

For more information and to take the first small step toward building a healthier lifestyle for you and your family, log on to www.purelifebestlife.com.

Recognized For Commitment To Quality Testing

Granite Medical Accredited
For Its Nuclear Laboratory

The nuclear cardiology laboratory at Granite Medical in Quincy has been granted accreditation by the Intersocial Commission for the Accreditation of Nuclear Medicine Laboratories (ICANL).

Granite Medical's laboratory is one of a select few nuclear cardiology laboratories in the United States, Canada or Puerto Rico to be recognized by the ICANL for its commitment to high patient quality and its provision of quality diagnostic testing.

Cardiovascular disease is a leading cause of death in the United States. In the nuclear cardiology laboratory, both heart function and blood flow are measured, helping physicians to detect the presence of cardiovascular disease. This test may also provide important information regarding the occurrence of future heart attacks.

A complex imaging technique, nuclear cardiology testing relies on the experience of both the physician and the technologist. Their interpretive and technical abilities determine the diagnostic accuracy of the examination. The Intersocial Commission for the Accreditation of Nuclear Medicine

Laboratories (ICANL) has developed an accreditation program that evaluates the quality of these and other critical elements of a nuclear cardiology laboratory.

Participation in the accreditation process is voluntary. Accreditation status signifies the facility has been reviewed by an independent agency that recognizes the laboratory's commitment to quality testing for the diagnosis of heart disease.

age, should keep their tetanus immunizations up to date. They have to be obtained every 10 years. Only one-third of the adult population of the United States and Canada is adequately protected against tetanus.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE:

Every spring I have to have my housebound. I have used antihistamines, nasal sprays -- including steroid nasal sprays -- cleansing my nose with salt-water flushes and many, many other medicines, but I do not get any relief. My primary care doctor suggests I see an allergist for allergy shots. Do they really work? Would you advise them? -- H.M.

ANSWER: Allergy shots, also known as hyposensitization, work for most. An allergist first has to determine exactly what a patient is allergic to and then has a serum compounded that contains the allergic materials. The shots are then given in a series of weekly and in increasingly concentrated doses until a maintenance dose is reached, and that dose is then injected monthly.

The shots stop mast cells from emptying themselves of chemicals that spur allergy symptoms like sneezing, itching and running nose when allergic material lands on them.

I would advise anyone with severe allergy symptoms that do not respond to medicines to have allergy shots.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE:

I take a fish-oil supplement daily. Can you tell me if these tablets contain mercury, as some fish do? -- P.C.

ANSWER: Take your fish-oil supplement without fear. Such supplements contain negligible, if any, amounts of mercury. They won't make you sick. They could make you well.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

DENTISTRY
for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

DENTIST AS PERSONAL TRAINER

If you exercise regularly and adhere to a healthy diet, your dentist can be as valuable to you as your personal trainer and nutritionist. That is, the dentist can play a significant role in helping patients lead longer, healthier lives. According to at least one study, oral health may be a marker for longevity. The study participants were divided into three groups: those with good natural teeth, those who wore dentures, and those with poor dental health. After ten years, it was found that people with good teeth (whether natural or artificial) were more independent and functioned at a higher level than their peers with poor teeth. They also lived longer and enjoyed better social relationships and happier moods. We provide dental services for every type of dental problem. Proper brushing and flossing, a healthy diet, regular professional cleanings, checkups, and x-rays, can all help ensure many years of oral health. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we offer dental care for the entire family with an emphasis on preventive care. Let us show you how to properly care for your teeth. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. During the course of the 10-year study of people between ages 70 and 75 mentioned above, only 33% of the people with good teeth died during the study while 48% of the people with poor teeth died.

DON MCCARTHY
Managing DirectorA THOUGHT
FOR THE WEEK

We have all heard the saying: "Today is the first day of the rest of your life." As long as we have life, each and every one of us must live within the confines of time - day-by-day. It is a precious possession. We can use it or we can waste it. At this very minute a life is being changed somewhere by someone or something, for better or for worse. A hope is being born, a dream being shattered. Pleas are being heard, accepted and rejected. Things happen every day.

This very minute, a part of today, will soon be gone. It can never be replaced. It can be used to advantage to bring happiness or it can be shunned aside to cause regret and faded hopes in the tomorrows to come. Yesterday is gone. There may or may not be a tomorrow. But we do have TODAY. A decision to write a letter, make a phone call, play a visit, or whatever - can mean a lot to you and others on this - The first day of the rest of our life...

ARIES (March 21 to April 19)
You're doing better on the flexibility issue, but you still need to loosen up a bit to show you can be less judgmental and more understanding about certain sensitive matters.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20)
Your personal aspect continues to dominate this week. But try to make time to deal with important career-linked matters as well. A change of plans might occur by the weekend.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20)
Excuses are not really needed for much of the confusion occurring this week. However, explanations from all parties could help in working things out to everyone's satisfaction.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22)
That surprising (but pleasant) recent turn of events continues to develop positive aspects. But be prepared for a bit of a jolt on another issue that needs attention.

LEO (July 23 to August 22)
Creating a fuss might bring you that attention you want. But are you prepared for all the explaining you'd have to do? Better to use more subtle ways to make your bid.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22)
With education continuing to be a strong factor this week, this could be the time to start learning some new skills that can later be applied to a bid for a potential career move.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22)
You might do well to reconsider some of your current time priorities before you get so deeply involved in one project that you neglect meeting a deadline on another.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21)
With an important decision looming, you need to be careful about the information you're getting. Half-truths are essentially useless. Get the full story before you act.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21)
Find out what everyone's role is expected to be before accepting that workplace proposal. Getting all the facts now could prevent serious problems later on.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19)
A flexible position on a workplace matter could be the best course to follow during the next several days. A personal issue also benefits from an open-minded approach.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18)
Involving too many people in your workplace problem can backfire. Remember: Allegiances can shift. Ask trusted colleagues for advice, but don't ask them to take sides.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20)
Before submitting your suggestions, take more time to sharpen the points you want to make. The clearer the presentation, the more chance it has to get through when submitted.

BORN THIS WEEK:
Your clear sense of who you are gives you confidence when you need to tackle difficult situations.

To Promote The Spirit Of The Neighborhood Contest For Mayor Of Houghs Neck Underway

The Houghs Neck Community Council invites Houghs Neck residents to start a campaign, host events and coffee hours, sell Houghs Neck merchandise and raise money in a bid to be named the 2009 Mayor of Houghs Neck.

The contest, inspired by similar contests in South Boston and Dorchester, is in its second year and Past HNCC President Margaret Laforest said she sees it as a great idea for the neighborhood.

"By hosting this contest, we hope to promote the spirit of the Neck and raise money for programs sponsored by the Houghs Neck Community Council, and the Houghs Neck Community Council Scholarship Fund," said Laforest. "We hope to make this an annual tradition."

This year's contest winner, which will be the candidate that raises the most "campaign money" between now and Sept. 12, will succeed Ralph Jacobs, who topped the 2008 ticket and currently holds the title of Houghs Neck's First Mayor.

Interested candidates should email hncbulletin@yahoo.com or call Laforest at 617-471-1806 or may contact the other committee members including Brian Laroche, Julie McCloskey or Christine Toler.

Josiah Quincy House Garden Cleanup May 2

Historic New England and the Wollaston Garden Club will partner for Cleaner, Greener Quincy Saturday, May 2 from 9 to 11:30 a.m. for a garden clean-up at the Josiah Quincy House, 20 Muirhead St., Quincy.

Members of the community are welcome to join in and help clean up the gardens and grounds surrounding the historic 1770 home.

Volunteers are needed to rake, weed, till the soil, and do general clean-up. Volunteers should bring work gloves and simple garden tools if possible.

The Josiah Quincy House was built in 1770 by Colonel Josiah Quincy, the first in a long line of Josiah Quincys who owned the property. The city of Quincy is named for this prominent family, which included three mayors of Boston and a president of Harvard.

Much of the historical information pertaining to the house and family were documented in the early 1880s by Eliza Susan Quincy. She kept journals, inventoried the contents of the house, commissioned photographs of the interior, and persuaded relatives to return heirlooms so that the house could become a repository of Quincy family history.

The house will be open for free tours during the clean up on May 2 from 9 to 11:30 a.m.

Other open hours this year include Sunday, June 14 and Saturday, Aug. 22, from 1 to 4 p.m., with tours on the hour and the last tour starting at 3 p.m.

Admission is free for residents. Tours on June 14 and Aug. 22 are $5 for all other guests.

Historic New England is the oldest, largest, and most comprehensive regional heritage organization in the nation. The organization owns and operates 36 historic homes and landscapes spanning five states.

The seminar, entitled

But Some Traffic Snarls Ahead

Concourse Groundbreaking Signals Start Of Quincy Center Renewal

By LAURA GRIFFIN

There'll be pain before gain, but Quincy Center's billion dollar renewal is not too far in the future, according to Mayor Thomas Koch who spoke at last week's ground-breaking for Phase 3 of the Quincy Center Concourse.

Senator Michael Morrissey joined Koch and city leaders at the ceremony held in the center median of McGrath Highway.

Koch called the Concourse a major step toward reinvigorating the city's economic base, but, also, warned that there will be some traffic inconveniences in the months ahead.

"We would not have a developer without the Concourse," Koch said, referring to StreetWorks Development LLC of White Plains, NY.

StreetWorks partner Richard Heapes recently said the firm would not have considered investing hundreds of millions of dollars in Quincy Center if the Concourse project were not

Councillors Ask Koch: Public Screening Process For Fire Chief Candidates

By LAURA GRIFFIN

The Civil Service Commission will publish a list of fire chief candidates in the next few months and City Councillors want a public screening process for Quincy's fire chief hopefuls in place before that list is ready.

With that goal, the City Council officially asked Mayor Thomas Koch to revamp the selection process for city's next fire chief specifically, by choosing a screening panel of other fire chiefs, and by conducting public and televised interviews of candidates.

Councillor Joseph Harrington prepared the motion approved by the council at their April 21 meeting.

Basic Advice, Information Health Department, City On Alert For Swine Flu

By TOM HENSHAW

The Quincy Health Department and, hopefully, all of the city, was on the alert today for the swine flu, which had killed 149 in Mexico and was creeping slowly across the United States.

Fortunately, said Public Health Commissioner Drew Scheele, "the cases are all much milder in the United States." Two suspected cases being tested in Lowell are unconfirmed, he said.

If you suspect you have it, Scheele has simple, basic advice:

- Wash your hands
- Stay home in a room by yourself.
- If you have trouble breathing, go to the hospital.

As a precautionary measure, the State Department of Health and Human Services has declared a public

Fountain Installation Begins, Park Nearly Complete

Mayor Thomas Koch announced Tuesday that the granite fountain creating the centerpiece of the long-planned formal garden at Merrymount Park is now being installed, leaving only weeks until Charles Francis Adams' original vision for the park is fully realized.

The fountain, donated by the Quincy Partnership, is among the final pieces to a park project that has been years in the making, and includes new treescape, flowers, a walkway, and relocation of several memorials that will create "a brilliant new gem in what is already the jewel of Quincy's parkland," according to Koch, who reinvigorated the project shortly after taking office.

"Finally, we will be living up to the vision that Charles Francis Adams and Frederick Law Olmstead had for a beautiful, tree-lined passive park for the entire community to enjoy," Koch said.

"This has been a true community effort to get to this point, and there are many people who deserve great thanks for their work."

State Representative Ronald Mariano was critical to securing $100,000 in state grants for the project, local contractors donated granite columns, Ed Monti designed the 11-foot diameter fountain, and PJ Kennedy and Sons donated thousands of dollars in plumbing work.

Council Honors Leo Kelly

City Councillors honored Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly with a standing ovation at the April 21 council meeting in recognition of Kelly's recent Lifetime Achievement Award and his decades of service to the city.

Kelly received the Achievement Award during Community Development Week when he was recognized for supporting the Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) program since its inception in 1975.

Mayor Thomas Koch and planning Director Dennis Harrington presented the plaque to Kelly during CDBG ceremonies. The plaque describes Kelly's "unwavering support of the Community Development Block Grant Program since its inception 1975."

The plaque, also, notes "Kelly's support of loans and grants that 'improve the quality of life for our neighbors.'"

Committee Acts To Block T Billboards

The Ordinance Committee voted Monday to support a Home Rule Petition aimed at blocking the installation of MBTA billboards at T stations in the city.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi proposed the state petition after noting that Quincy is undergoing an "historic redevelopment of the downtown area," while threatened with the "construction of these rather hideous billboards."

Prior to the committee vote, City Solicitor James Timmins described a legal agreement between the city and the T which specifically prohibits the T from erecting billboards or any structure in the air space above transit stations.

However, Timmins noted that the agreement was reached in the 1960's and may be challenged by the T. He supported the committee's petition which will be filed with the state legislature.

Midnight 8-1 Vote Opens Door For B.J.'s

By LAURA GRIFFIN

City councillors last week cleared the way for B.J.'s Wholesale Club to open an 84,000 square foot outlet in South Quincy by approving the Special Permit requested by developer, QBJ Land Development, LLC, an affiliate of Coastal Partners of Beverly Farms.

Councillors voted 8-1 in favor of the permit at midnight April 21 after debating mitigation, traffic, and signage issues for over three hours.

Once constructed, B.J.'s retail store will operate on the 7.5-acre site of the Patriot Ledger's former printing plant at 200 Crown Colony located at the entrance to the office park.

Developer Michael DiGuiseppe of Coastal Partners, Beverly Farms, estimated a $20 million investment by all parties in the project when he proposed the plans last August.

At that time, DiGuiseppe's timetable called for groundbreaking in November.

Groundbreaking may now be scheduled in mid-June after DiGuiseppe's firm finalizes a purchase-and-sale agreement of the property with Gatehouse Media, the Ledger's parent company.

DiGuiseppe estimated that 8,000 residents hold membership in the B.J.'s, a Natick-based membership warehouse club which operates 180 outlets in 16 states and markets large purchases of food, housewares, and yard goods.

B.J.'s outlets are considered 'big box' stores, offering little in the way of architectural design or landscaping but the Quincy store is expected to be an exception. The building will be 30% smaller than B.J.'s other 184,000 square foot outlets and sport trees along the perimeters and within its 367-car parking lot.

Search For Auditor Hits New Roadblocks

City councillors learned last week they must re-open their search for a new auditor, revise the minimum qualifications established by the council last Fall, and re-advertise the position.

"We have been without an auditor for almost a year," said Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi who sought legal advice after learning that none of the four finalists for the position met the minimum qualifications.

Raymondi asked Kevin Madden, First Assistant City Solicitor, if City Council could appoint one of the candidates and then amend the job requirements.

Madden said, "No."

According to Madden, the council must first amend the job requirements and then appoint a new auditor.

"This is why I asked for executive session," said City Council President Jay Davis who chaired the Auditor Search Committee with members Councillor Michael McFarland and Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee.

CITY COUNCILLORS COMMENDED Hank Bradley who recently retired as director of Quincy Veterans' Services after serving for 19 years. Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin (foreground, far right) presented the commendation to Bradley after councillors praised his long and conscientious service to the city's veterans. Councillors Doug Gutro, Ward 5, and Leo Kelly, Ward 1, recalled personal experiences of Bradley's compassion, aid, and understanding for soldiers and veterans and their families. Bradley was the 2001 Quincy Sun Citizen of the Year.

C-Mart, Zoning, Wind Facilities On Council's May Schedule

City councillors have a full schedule for May, beginning with Monday's public hearing at 6:30 p.m. on an application by C-Mart Supermarkets II for an Asian supermarket on Hayward Street, North Quincy.

Councillors will vote as the Special Permit Granting Authority on the controversial application which has drawn hundreds of residents and business owners to previous council meetings.

Two hearings on Mayor

Thomas Koch's proposed ordinance governing wind facilities are scheduled Monday, May 11, beginning with the public hearing at 6:30 p.m. and the Ordinance Committee meeting at 7 p.m.

State legislators are scheduled to address City Council on Monday, May 18, at 7:30 p.m. and report on the Commonwealth's finances with specific details on state funding for Quincy.

Earlier that evening, councillors will hold public hearings on downtown projects and Site Plan Review standards.

Quincy College's request for independence was scheduled for discussion on Tuesday, May 26, but that may be postponed.

Councillors are waiting for an appraisal of the college. Councillors were informed last week that no appraiser had been appointed as of April 20.

Will 2009 Be A Quiet Election Year?

Let's see... the trees are blooming, the birds are singing and lawn mowers everywhere are starting to rev for the first time this spring.

That can only mean one thing:

Nomination papers for this year's city election will soon be released by the Quincy Board of Registrars. Candidates for mayor, councillor at-large, ward councillor and school committee may pick up papers starting next Tuesday, May 5.

Right now, it appears there will be some foot traffic into City Hall to get those papers... but probably not a stampede.

"Unless there's a mayor's race, it will be a quiet election year," says City Clerk Joseph Shea. "There may not be any open seats and open seats bring candidates. But we'll be ready to go either way."

Mayor Tom Koch, who will officially launch his bid for a second term in May, could face only token opposition or have a free ride come November. However, there's growing speculation that former Mayor William Phelan will mount a challenge to win back the mayor's seat that he lost in 2007 to Koch. A Koch-Phelan rematch would create a big time political buzz throughout the city.

KOCH

down, is being challenged by Martin Aikins and Margaret Laforest. Both Aikins and Laforest are first-time candidates and announced their campaigns earlier this year.

Kelly, if he runs, would be seeking a 10th two-year term as Ward 1 councillor. He is thinking very seriously about running for re-election.

Aikens is chairman of the Zoning Board of Appeals and is a business agent for Local 103. Laforest is a community activist and former president of the Houghs Neck Community Council.

There's also speculation that former Quincy Police Officer Joseph Keegan, now an attorney with a law office in Quincy Center, could jump in the Ward 1 field. Keegan lost to Kelly by 268 votes in the final election of 2003. Kelly polled 1,901 votes to Keegan's 1,633.

Keegan, a resident of Merrymount, also made an unsuccessful bid for school committee in 2005, finishing sixth in the preliminary election.

If there are more than two candidates in the Ward 1 field, that would set up a preliminary election on Tuesday, Sept. 22. The preliminary would pare the number of candidates down to two for the general election Tuesday, Nov. 3.

DAVIS

Elsewhere on the council, Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis is being challenged by Brian Palmucci.

Davis, a local attorney and current city council president, will be seeking his fourth term this fall. He was unopposed his first three terms.

Palmucci, making his first run for councillor, is a prosecutor for the state Department of Correction. He served on the Pembroke School Committee before moving to Quincy. He was president of the Ward 4 Neighborhood Association before resigning to run for the council.

In Ward 6, there's been speculation that Brian McNamee could face a challenge from former Quincy Police Chief Robert Crowley. McNamee, who works as the chief financial officer for the South Essex Sewer District in Salem, would be eyeing a third term while this would be Crowley's campaign debut.

Crowley took papers out to file a campaign committee but has not returned them, according to city election officials.

Perhaps the race that will see the most action is for the three seats on the school committee. Those seats are presently held by Anne Mahoney, Nick Puleo and Ron Mariano.

Mahoney will be seeking her second four-year term. She scored an impressive political debut in 2005 when she topped the ballot. Also elected that year were Kevin Mulvey and James Timmins.

MAHONEY

Mariano was elected at a joint convention of the school committee and city council to fill Mulvey's unexpired term. Mulvey stepped down from his seat to become the human resources director of the Quincy Public School system.

Mariano had been an elected member of the School Committee before filling Mulvey's vacant seat. He was first elected to the school committee in 1989 and was re-elected in 1993, 1997 and 2001. But he did not seek re-election in 2005.

If Mariano doesn't run for a full four-year term this fall, observers see more candidates entering the school race. But if he becomes a candidate, that could mean an even quieter year.

Puleo is filling the seat vacated by Timmins after he became city solicitor in the Koch administration. Puleo, who finished fourth (the first runner-up) in the 2007 school committee race, is expected to make a run for a four-term term.

Whether or not there is an open school committee seat, there are at least three other candidates seeking election to the school committee.

Karl Roos announced his candidacy in January. A Wollaston resident, Roos works in the pharmaceutical industry. He was a candidate to fill the school committee vacancy

ROOS

LOCKWOOD

created when Timmins resigned to become city solicitor but lost to Nick Puleo by a 10-4 vote of the City Council and School Board. He also withdrew his name before the vote at the joint convention which elected Mariano to Mulvey's unexpired term.

Another declared candidate is Rebecca McWilliams, of 24 Newcomb St., who is a licensed architect. She announced her candidacy in February. McWilliams is a graduate of Roger Williams University and is currently enrolled in the Suffolk Law evening division.

The third school committee challenger to officially announce is Matt Lockwood Mullaney of Glendale Road. He declared his candidacy on Tuesday. He is a graduate of Harvard and MIT and is employed as a market manager for Harvard Pilgrim Health Care.

Nomination papers, with at least 50 valid signatures, must be filed by 5 p.m. on Tuesday, Aug. 18. A statement of candidacy also needs to be filed with the City Clerk by that time.

If there is a preliminary election for any race, ballot position would be drawn on Friday, Aug. 21 at 10 a.m.

The election calendar has been set and nomination papers will soon be released. While it may be quiet now, there's still plenty of time to make some election year noise.

WONDERING WHAT'S IN the campaign war chests of some of the current city officials who will likely face opposition this year?

Here's a quick look at the cash balances as of the last campaign reports which were filed by Jan. 20. Figures do not include any fundraising or expenditures since that time.

- Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly: $13,965.
- Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis: $23,535
- Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee: $1,964.
- School Committeewoman Anne Mahoney: $2,561.
- School Committeeman Nick Puleo: $144.
- School Committeeman Ron Mariano: $348,473. (That amount includes campaign finances relative to Mariano's position as a state representative.) The next reporting deadline for all candidates is Monday, Sept. 14 at 5 p.m.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On April 27, 1865, days after the end of the Civil War, the worst maritime disaster in American history occurs when the steamboat Sultana, carrying 2,100 passengers, explodes and sinks in the Mississippi River, killing all but 400 of those aboard.

• On April 30, 1927, the Federal Industrial Institution for Women, the first women's federal prison, opens in Alderson, W.Va. All women serving federal sentences of more than a year were to be brought there, with the vast majority imprisoned for drug and alcohol charges imposed during the Prohibition era.

• On May 1, 1931, President Herbert Hoover officially dedicates New York City's Empire State Building. The entire 102-story building went up in just over a year, under budget (at $40 million) and well ahead of schedule. During certain periods of building, the frame grew an astonishing four-and-a-half stories a week.

• On April 29, 1944, the last "Our Gang" film, "Dancing Romeo," is released. The first film, featuring a band of mischievous youngsters, was produced in 1922. In all, more than 100 "Our Gang" films were made. Later, they were shown as TV comedies under the name "The Little Rascals."

• On April 28, 1958, "The Witch Doctor" hits the No. 1 spot on Billboard's pop charts. The song used the unusual technique of recording the singer's voice at a different speed than the music. Songwriter and singer Ross Bagdasarian (who recorded under the name David Seville) topped the charts again at the end of the year with "The Chipmunk Song," sung by his chipper cartoon band creation, the Chipmunks.

• On May 3, 1960, the musical comedy "The Fantasticks" opens in an off-Broadway playhouse in New York's Greenwich Village. The show, about a young man and woman whose ostensibly feuding parents are actually scheming to bring the couple together, became the longest-running musical of all time and is still running today.

• On May 2, 1972, Steven Spielberg begins filming "Jaws." The production, which used three mechanical sharks to great effect, enthralled audiences and grossed $458 million in its theatrical release.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1930's postcard view of the interior of Elsie's Restaurant that was at the corner of Beach Street and Quincy Shore Drive. Elsie Spooner opened this Wollaston Beach landmark just after Prohibition ended. The building was originally used as a provisions and grocery store. For many years, Elsie's was a favorite spot for dining and dancing. Baked stuff lobster was the specialty. It also had a popular men's bar that was frequented by the young sailors from the Squantum Naval Air Station. This postcard was a gift from Mary Johnson of Wollaston who worked as a waitress here. There reportedly was another postcard showing the bar, does anyone have one? Ward 4 Candidate Brian Palmucci Responds To Article On Union Endorsement

I would like to thank The Sun for giving me this opportunity to address the false allegations that were recently published in this newspaper against me and my campaign for the Ward Four City Council seat.

Honesty and integrity are important qualities in a leader, and I will not stand idly by while my credibility is attacked. Let me start from the beginning.

On February 23, I was proud to receive an endorsement letter from The Roofers & Waterproofers Local Union No. 33. The letter clearly and unequivocally stated that Local 33 had, "with great pleasure," endorsed my candidacy for City Council, and included a contribution to the Committee to Elect Brian Palmucci.

"The prime factor in Local No. 33's endorsement is your commitment to the issues of organized labor and all working men and women," wrote Paul Bickford, the business manager of the union. "We look forward to working with you in the creation of jobs and any other areas that will better the community."

My campaign proudly announced the endorsement

Clarification

An article in last week's Quincy Sun regarding an endorsement in the Ward 4 city council race contained some erroneous information.

The article inaccurately stated that Ward 4 council candidate Brian Palmucci misconstrued a campaign donation made by the Roofers and Waterproofers Local Union No. 33 as a campaign endorsement.

The Union, in fact, did endorse Palmucci for Ward 4 city councillor in a letter dated Feb. 23. The letter written on the union's official letterhead was signed by Paul Bickford, the union's business manager.

Also, the statement inaccurately stating Local 33 mistakenly sent a contribution check to Palmucci's campaign and this act was misconstrued as an official endorsement should have been attributed to Mike Foley of the Union, not a direct quote by Paul Bickford.

Thirdly, according to the Palmucci campaign, it never sent a statement to The Sun withdrawing the previously published endorsement announcement.

The news story inaccurately stated the "Palmucci campaign withdrew the endorsement announcement."

The Sun regrets the errors.

The Roofers have rescinded its endorsement of Palmucci and instead have endorsed incumbent councillor Jay Davis.

to the public, along with the endorsement of another union, in a statement published in The Sun on April 2. That's when this matter took a very strange twist. Within days of making the endorsement public, I received another letter from Local 33. This letter stated that the Union had, without explanation, rescinded its endorsement and decided to instead support my opponent.

I found the Union's reversal curious and stunning. But I was even more shocked to read an article in The Sun April 23 accusing me of misrepresenting the Union's endorsement entirely. The article accused me of making "an erroneous endorsement announcement." It also alleged that I had "misconstrued" the receipt of a campaign contribution from Local 33 as "an official endorsement."

According to The Sun, the statement was written by a member of Local 33 and submitted to the newspaper by my opponent. I was never given the chance to comment on this statement before it was published; not by Local 33, not by my opponent, and not by this newspaper. So let me take this opportunity to set the record straight.

Local 33 officially endorsed my candidacy on February 23. It was only after the endorsement was made public a month later that the Union, without any explanation, changed their tune and decided to support someone else. I do not know why the Union decided to reverse its earlier decision. Any speculation on my part would be just that, speculation. All I can say is that I find the timing of their decision - immediately after my public announcement - to be curious.

My campaign has since provided a copy of the endorsement letter to The Sun, and I would like to commend the newspaper for eventually setting the record straight and correcting the untrue accusations made against my campaign.

I am disappointed that some have felt the need to make these false statements about my campaign. But regardless of this episode, if elected to the City Council this fall, I pledge to work with all the unions, including Local 33, to help bring about change for the better in Ward Four and throughout our city.

The residents of Ward Four deserve a serious campaign about the important issues facing our city, not baseless accusations.

Poll: Dukakis-Jackson Would Defeat Bush

By FRANK MCCAULEY

A Michael Dukakis-Jesse Jackson ticket would defeat a Republican ticket headed by George H.W. Bush 47 percent to 42 percent according to a Time Magazine poll.

A ticket of Dukakis and Senator Albert Gore, Jr., would defeat George Bush 49 percent to 39 percent, the poll suggested.

The poll of 1,075 voters conducted recently, showed the Massachusetts governor was favored by 50 percent to 39 percent over Vice-President Bush. (Editor's note: A ticket of Vice-President George H.W. Bush and Senator Dan Quayle would defeat Governor Michael Dukakis and Senator Lloyd Bentsen in the November 1988 election.)

PLANS FOR DOG POUND MAY BE DISCARDED

Plans to replace the city's dilapidated dog pound may be scrapped if the city can develop a program employing private kennels, according to Mayor Francis X. McCauley.

McCauley said the use of contract kennel services might provide an answer since the cost of building a new animal shelter has greatly exceeded the city's expectations.

The low bid filed recently for construction of a 4,500-square foot animal facility was $818,000, some $143,000 more than the city's updated estimate of $675,000. (Editor's note: The private kennel approach was scrapped and the city constructed the animal shelter at a cost of $275,000.)

Matt Lockwood Mullaney Candidate For School Committee

Matt Lockwood Mullaney announces his candidacy for a seat on the Quincy School Committee.

"Quincy deserves schools fit for Presidents," he said. "I believe my success managing strategy and planning in another complex area, healthcare, will bring a fresh perspective to the work of the school committee."

Lockwood Mullaney is market manager for Harvard Pilgrim's Massachusetts business, and previously oversaw significant growth in the non-profit's New Hampshire and Maine markets. "Healthcare and education are similar-lots of competing interests and never enough money. But schools have some key advantages. We have teachers who work with students all day, every day and really know their needs. We can also make early investments in reading or math and know we'll see the benefits in middle and high school."

Lockwood Mullaney lives near Quincy Center with his wife Jenny and two children, Evie and Emmett.

MATT LOCKWOOD MULLANEY

"Obviously, I care about school performance because I have young kids, and I am concerned. Our test scores are not where we'd like them to be compared to other districts and many parents are anxious. Every parent wants to provide the best for their kids, and I want to help them succeed as a member of the school committee."

He attended public schools in his hometown of Boise, Idaho and came to the Boston area for college at Harvard and returned for his MBA at MIT. He moved to Quincy five years ago for its access to downtown Boston and the South Shore, good housing stock, and remarkable history.

"Quincy is a middle class town, like where I grew up. The difference is the history. I live less than a mile from Peace field, home of two Presidents. Are we living up to that legacy? That's why my campaign is called Schools fit for Presidents and my campaign site is www.quincysflp.com"

Lockwood Mullaney has been active in the schools, interviewing seniors for Harvard admissions, organizing job shadowing for 11th graders at Harvard Pilgrim, and arranging a mini-grant for science education at Bernazzani (thanks to support from the Harvard Pilgrim Foundation).

"I joined other volunteers recently in reading Dr. Seuss at Lincoln-Hancock and I was impressed by the diversity of the students and the energy and enthusiasm of teachers and administrators. I don't think there are any easy answers to improve performance. My goal as a school committee member is to play a constructive role in defining what we mean by a quality education and figuring out how we get there," he said.

"Ultimately, schools influence the economic and social health of the city. If the schools are great, more people will want to move to Quincy and we'll have a more vibrant community. That will also help our home values recover, and put money in the pockets of local business owners. Good schools make the city stronger, and the other way around," he added.

Concourse Groundbreaking Signals Start Of Center Renewal underway.

At last week's ceremony, Koch cited the foresight of past mayors, starting with Mayor James McIntyre (1965-1971) through his own predecessor, "Bill Phelan who laid the groundwork for today."

"This used to be Canal Street," said Koch, recalling that Canal Street was upgraded to the four-lane McGrath Highway with the sole intention of joining it to Burgin Parkway for a cross-town roadway.

City officials and several dozen observers joined Koch on the center strip of McGrath Highway for the ceremony as sand blew about and traffic slowed into one lane at the signal for Southern Artery.

"We ask people to be patient," Koch said, warning of the upcoming traffic disruptions as Phase 3 is expected to last about three months, and traffic on McGrath Highway will be reduced to single lanes as each section is undertaken.

"This is the beginning of our downtown renewal," said Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly, praising the project as did Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi who, also, referred to the anticipated traffic problems and noted that "people may be somewhat inconvenienced."

Human Rights Commission To Meet In Germantown and to obtain suggestions from the communities about additional activities and services we may be able to provide," said Ann Yeomans, the chair.

The agenda will include a discussion of the mission and goals of the Commission, a definition of hate crimes and Commission activities such as the Career Fair, Thursday, May 21, from 2 to 6 p.m. at the Quincy Marriott Hotel and Camp IF.

QUINCY POLICE CRIME Prevention Unit recently held a seminar in English and Cantonese to discuss the issue of domestic violence. Lieutenant Charles Santoro and Police Interpreter Hi Thai presented the information.

Quincy Police Hold English/Cantonese Seminar On Domestic Violence

The North Quincy Community Center recently hosted over 75 local residents for a domestic violence seminar sponsored by the Quincy Police Department.

The presentation was in English and translated into Cantonese by the Quincy Police Interpreter Hi Thai.

Lieutenant Dan Minton talked about the police response, the related laws, the options and services offerred. He also informed the audience that anyone can report family problems to the police - preferably before the situation becomes violent and that the caller can remain anonymous.

Lt. Minton reviewed the arrest process and the help available to the victim(s) as well as the defendant.

Lieutenant Charles Santoro then discussed the domestic violence cycle and the impact on the family.

He provided scenarios to help describe the wide range of physical and psychological abuse.

He talked about how abusers blame alcohol use and rationalize their actions.

The seminar was followed up by a question and answer period. For additional information or inquiries, contact Lt. Minton at 617-745-5719.

Joseph Morris Serving Aboard USS Wasp

Joseph Morris played varsity hockey and lacrosse at North Quincy High School for four years before graduating in 2007 and attending Quincy College and Massasoit College.

Now, he's Seaman Second Class Morris serving in the United States Navy aboard the USS Wasp which is the lead ship of the Navy's first class amphibious assault ships.

According to Robert Morris, the Wasp is reaching ports all over the world with his son assigned to the engineering department.

Seaman Morris was, also, a lifeguard with Quincy's Recreation Department.

After joining the Navy, he graduated both from Machinist Mate School and the Mechanical Engineering School at the Great Lakes Training Facility, IL.

JOSEPH MORRIS

Seaman Morris is the son of Robert and Joanne Morris and brother of Meredith L. Morris, all of Quincy.

The Mayor's Office announced Tuesday that the Health Department is slated to move into new offices at the former Myles Standish School next week, marking the first phase of completion for what will be the City's first Senior Center.

Mayor Thomas Koch said a dedication for the new Senior Center would be held later this spring. The Health Department will occupy two rooms in the former school building and the rest of the facility will be set-aside for seniors.

The Health Department's move is necessary because its current office in the Quincy Fair Mall will be torn down to make way for the Quincy Center Concourse. The City has been paying rent to use the building and will save money by utilizing a city-owned building.

"We have made tremendous progress in a short period of time, and we are doing so without affecting the bottom line of the City's budget," Koch said. "Our seniors have long deserved a place to call their own, and I am proud they will finally have one."

The project will cost no additional money to taxpayers as roughly $1 million in renovations to the building will be funded through an existing capital improvement bond that was budgeted and borrowed to pay for a new garage at the Department of Public Works more than two years ago.

The planned garage did not meet the DPW's needs and was of insufficient quality, leading the administration to devote that money to creating a first-class Senior Center that had been promised for decades, Koch added.

The building at Myles Standish was in more serious disrepair than the City originally envisioned, and substantial work to remove asbestos, replace the plumbing and heating systems, replace windows and update handicapped access was necessary. In addition, a major sewer project was necessary. Money for that project is also not being borne by taxpayers, as it comes from construction permit fees.

The new facility will provide a venue several times larger-and less expensive-than previous plans to house the center at the Park Department.

"In these extraordinary times, we must ensure that

COA In Need Of Bath Seats

If you have one to donate, call the COA at 617-376-1245.

every dollar is properly spent, and this was a perfect solution to meet our needs in a very cost-efficient way," Koch said.

Currently, Elder Services programs are held at various community centers and other locations across the city, which can lead to scheduling, accessibility and logistical problems. In addition to hosting the department's current services, a citywide Senior Center will boast a number of programs, this according to Director of Elder Services Tom Clasby.

Among them will be a computer lab, fitness programs, game rooms, arts and crafts, library programs, movies, a music room and expanded meal programs, Clasby said.

The location of the new Senior Center is directly next door to a large senior housing complex and near a renovated Wollaston Beach and a state-walking path, and officials believe it will make a great spot for a walking club. The school is directly on an MBTA bus route, and Clasby expects his department's "excellent" transportation service to fit well into the Senior Center operations.

Ayers, Tobin Against Sales Tax Increase

By TOM HENSHAW

At least two of Quincy's three representatives in the State House voted "no" to an increase in the sales tax Monday, each for the same reason.

"There's a lot of pain out there," said Rep. Stephen Tobin. "People are hurting financially. It's a bad time to tax our way out of a recession."

"My constituents are hurting," said Rep. Bruce Ayers. "Now is not the time to increase their financial burden. It is time to enact serious reform."

Rep. Ron Mariano was not available for comment. The bill, promoted by

BRUCE AYERS

House Speaker Robert DeLeo, was approved by a veto-proof vote of 108 to 51 to increase the state sales tax from 5 per cent to 6.25 per cent

Such a move, adherents claim, would add $900 million to the state's treasury.

STEVE TOBIN

"I don't buy that," said Tobin. "It's not going to raise $900 million. It's self-defeating. The harder you make it for people to buy the less people buy."

The size of the vote makes Gov. Deval Patrick's threat to veto the bill meaningless since DeLeo has more than the two-thirds vote needed to override the governor's veto.

Patrick has said he would like to see a curb on abuses of state pensions and a tightening of the state ethics code, then the institution of a 19 cents a gallon tax hike on gasoline.

"There's a lot of frustration with economics out there," said Tobin. "People want to know how things got so bad and why the bad guys get handouts and the little people can't get bailed out."

"I don't know where the revenue from a sales tax would go. The programs I care for would still be cut. The increase would not solve the problems. We would have massive cuts anyway."

Library Sex Assault Suspect Arrested

A 27-year-old Brockton man was arrested Tuesday morning as a suspect in the groping of two women and threats to a third in the Thomas Crane Public Library over the weekend.

Paul Mwaura was charged with two counts of indecent assault and battery on a person over 14 years of age.

He was taken into custody at his home by Quincy Detectives Karyn Barkas and Paul Piper at 11 a.m. and was due for arraignment in Quincy District Court late Tuesday afternoon.

Police Captain John Dougan said "diligent police work and a surveillance tape" brought Mwaura to the attention of authorities.

The Brockton man is alleged to have grabbed a woman, identified by the Patriot Ledger as Perla Mcivor, as she was returning a book to the library.

Earlier, the same man accosted a teenaged girl in a second floor bathroom and asked her for sex for money. When she rebuffed him, he grabbed her.

A third woman told police a man in the library asked her age and when she failed to respond to him, he shouted at her that he was going to kill her.

Across Spear Street from the library as Quincy High School was letting out, another man leaped out of the bushes and exposed himself to a group of teen aged girls.

Thomas Lombard, 50, of Edwin Street, North Quincy, was arrested by community police officers at the scene charged with open and gross lewdness, a felony.

Propane, Charcoal Grills And Balconies

I have to bring this subject up again, propane and charcoal grills on balconies.

The worst financial loss due to fire in recent history occurred when a fire began on a balcony. A grill did not cause it, but a grill fire could just as easily have caused the resulting damage. The fire extended vertically upward along the combustible exterior of the building entering the building at a higher elevation causing considerable damage throughout.

The loss was well over a million dollars while the building was then posted uninhabitable, leaving tenants seeking alternate living arrangements for well over a year.

Is the convenience of a grill on a balcony worth that price? Property loss, possessions lost, a building left uninhabitable and risk to occupants and firefighters. Should a grill catch fire on a balcony, it can be fed by the natural availability of air surrounding it and the vertical access to the outside of

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

a building where heat and flames will naturally extend.

A fire in a propane grill can have disastrous effects at grade level alone, while this potential for damage to life and property increases substantially with the inaccessibility of a building balcony. Danger to occupants and firefighters a like increases considerably when fire infringes upon a propane cylinder above grade level where extinguishment efforts are naturally hampered by access limitations and height.

The Quincy Fire Department recommends a grill be used at ground level, at least 10 feet away from both sources of ignition and potential combustibles such as wood siding, deck railings, etc. We prefer they not be left unattended while in use as well. Considering the close proximity of some houses within this community, be mindful of wind conditions and smoke migration.

Meanwhile, it's been a long and harsh winter and many grills have been stored in those conditions outside. Tired equipment can be more susceptible to malfunction so it is imperative to heed the facts about proper storage and the use of these grills.

Propane is 1 1/2 to 2 times heavier than air. Consequently the State code requires that a propane cylinder be stored a minimum distance of 3 feet away from building openings that are below the level of cylinder storage, for instance basement windows, dryer vents, etc. The intent being, should the cylinder or hose leak, it minimizes the chances of propane gas migrating into the basement of a house where the potential ignition of a furnace or water heater exists. Cylinder storage should be located 5 feet away from any potential exterior sources of ignition as well.

It is not our intent to discourage grill use or our residents' best efforts with them. However, we're looking to have them stored and used appropriately. They have no place used or stored on balconies. Please help us in our continued effort to remove them; if you have one on a balcony, please remove it.

Thank you.

"I think they did a very good job of designing B.J.'s and addressing traffic issues, but I don't think B.J.'s is the highest and best use for the entrance to the city's premier office park," said Councillor John Keenan who was the lone vote opposing the Special Permit.

Despite the sometimes heated debates, little was changed in the requirements for B.J.'s as approved by the Planning Board in March.

$350,000 Mitigation

Councillors accepted $350,000 in new mitigation funds, split 5-4 on sidewalk sales of automobiles, and balked at stricter regulations on signage and traffic improvements.

QBJ agreed to provide $200,000 in mitigation funds for traffic improvements at the Liberty Street intersection and, last week, doubled the company's social mitigation funds from $70,000 to $150,000.

Councillors accepted the new funds by a vote 6-3 after Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin read the list of agencies and schools which would benefit from the windfall.

Councillor John Keenan, unsuccessfully, sought restrictions on a planned pylon sign on the property after equating the sign to the controversial billboards the city is opposing in West Quincy and on T property.

"It's the entrance to the city," said Keenan, who reminded councillors, "We're looking to battle the MBTA (over billboards)."

Attorney Ed Fleming who represented the developer opposed any restrictions, stating the sign would face the highway and be subject to future review by the Planning Board and Zoning Board of Appeals.

Traffic

Traffic Engineer Jack

Gillon outlined his doubts about potential traffic problems and pedestrian safety at the site and supported a formal review of traffic, 12 months after B.J.'s opening, as well as a stipulation that the company cover any new costs.

"If there are spectacular accidents, you have a problem that has to be rectified," Gillon said, adding, "If it's unfounded, we're going to know it in a year."

"I don't want the citizens of Quincy to pay for something, not to mention the accidents they may have..." said Gillon who, also, described the need for safer pedestrian access.

"The Planning Board went into this ad nauseum," said City Council president Jay Davis, adding the developers "...do not expect pedestrian traffic" because the majority of shoppers will be travelling by cars and buying large items.

cillor Joseph Finn.

The City Council has been without an independent auditor since Rick Fitzpatrick resigned in July 31, 2008 to take a position with Norfolk County Agricultural School.

In November, Finn rebuked both Mayor Thomas Koch and the council itself for delaying action on the audit position.

Koch appointed Susan O'Connor as Acting Auditor.

Councillors, also, questioned what type of funding will be available for the position which has paid between $85,000 and $105,000 in the last five years.

Public Screening Process Sought

Finn recommended that all members read the Civil Service Commission's decision rendered April 6 and said his motion simply highlights the recommendations of that decision.

In fact, Finn's motion quotes the Commission's directive that "the City embark on a transparent selection process to ensure a sense of fair play among all eligible candidates for fire chief and the public..."

Finn's motion also, quotes the commission's advisory for a better selection process through the following:

1. Use of an outside review panel of current and or retired fire chiefs.

2. Public final interviews that are broadcast on the local cable access channel in which each candidate is asked a similar set of questions (sic) by the mayor and other members of his interview panel."

After considering the council's petition, Koch issued the following statement through his Director of Policy, Christopher Walker,

"The mayor appreciates the council's perspective and will take it under advisement."

The former Fire Chief Timothy Pettinelli notified Koch on May 21, 2008 that he would retire on July 15.

Following Pettinelli's retirement, Koch considered several candidates who turned down the position and then called for a new Civil Service Examination, seeking new candidates.

Deputy Gary Smyth challenged Koch's handling of the search and filed a complaint with the Civil Service Commission in December.

The Commission's decision supported Koch's decision to call for a new examination, but questioned the process and Koch's process for appointing an acting chief at that time.

Koch has since called for a new Civil Service list for eligible candidates.

Fountain Installation Begins, Park Nearly Complete

Students from the Center for Technical Education completed the first phase of iron fencing around the park, and Koch said he hopes students will continue to be involved in the project moving forward.

Other money from the project came from City's park improvement bond, which is paid by a hotel room tax by visitors to Quincy.

"We have great athletic facilities at Merrymount Park and this project is a perfect example of creating that balances with passive recreation," said Park Commissioner Kristen Powers.

Charles Francis Adams II donated Merrymount Park to the City in 1885. During that time, Adams asked his good friend and legendary landscape architect Frederick Law Olmstead to help develop the land.

This original vision for a passive park, at the heart of the city was shelved for more than 50 years, until two of Olmstead's associates compiled a report echoing that vision in 1937. That report by Herbert Kellaway provided the ultimate framework for the current project, which was first envisioned more than a decade ago.

A dedication ceremony will be scheduled later this spring.

Search For Auditor Hits New Roadblocks

Davis said there were 10 to 12 applicants and "very few met the requirements."

At last week's meeting, Davis asked councillors to interview the current applicants despite the problems with qualifications and Mc-Namee supported the move.

However, the council rejected that plan by a 7-2 vote and agreed that the job qualifications will have to be revisited at their next meeting. The opening will, also, be re-advertised.

"I want to make certain it's done right," said Coun-

A Job Well Done

On Sunday, April 19, at approximately 4 a.m., Officers Mike Powers, Jim Goldrick and Mike Flaherty were dispatched to 391 Washington St. on a call of two males breaking into the former Sangiolo's Package Store.

Dispatch remained on the phone with the caller, who said the males were wearing baseball hats. The witness said that the males fled from the store with a Bud Light sign and ran towards Southern Artery.

As Officer Powers headed to the intersection of Southern Artery and Washington Street, he heard Officer Goldrick confirm that there was a window broken but it did not appear that anyone gained entry. He reported that a sign was removed from inside the window, but was on the ground. The officer also took into evidence a large piece of asphalt, believed to have been used to break the glass.

Officer Powers checked the area and found two males running down Murdock Avenue toward Southern Artery. The officer then stopped both males in the parking lot of Tom O'Brien Hyundai and confirmed that they matched the description provided by the witness. Officer Mike King and Officer Flaherty responded to the scene of the stop. When asked where they were coming from, the suspects said, "West Quincy." Both had a strong odor of alcoholic beverage and were sweating profusely.

Officer Powers asked them why they were running and both denied this, so the Officer followed up by asking why they were out of breath if they weren't running. One suspect offered that they had a 5 a.m. curfew and had to be home, but that was challenged by the Officers.

Suspect #1 then said that they were out of breath because "we were actually fighting each other here in the parking lot over a girl." The officer told them that they were lying because he had just witnessed them running on Murdock Avenue and stopped them in the lot. The Officer also noted that both suspects had blood on their hands but none on their faces.

When asked about the blood on their hands, suspect #1 said that suspect #2 was hit in the head with a beer bottle by an unknown assailant and then blacked out due to fear. The suspect did not have a wound or swelling on his head. Both suspects were checked for warrants but were not wanted.

Based on the witness's account and description, the locale of the break and the short distance away where the suspects were stopped, the fact that they were running from the scene of the crime, fresh injuries consistent with handling broken glass and their fabrications, the two suspects, both 19 years old and from Quincy, were charged with "Defacing or Vandalizing Real Property."

ASIAN SCAM: According to Detective Lieutenant John Steele, Asian business owners across the state are being targeted with this scam; a caller, speaking in Mandarin with a Taiwanese accent, demands $20,000.00 or harm will come to their family. The caller ultimately seeks to have the money wired to China, where it will never be recovered.

Anyone receiving this type of phone extortion should take the following actions; After hanging up the phone, dial *57, which automatically instructs the telephone company to make notation of the telephone number the call came from and secondly, contact Quincy Police Detective Dave Pacino at 617 745 5768.

Be Proud Of Quincy Public Schools

My daughter Nealia is about to graduate from Northeastern University with a B.A. in architecture. Next year, she is enrolled in the school's Master's Program.

Time has flown by in her academic career. One moment, it is first day at the Djerf pre-school, then it's college graduation.

Over the years, she has benefitted from years inside the Quincy Public Schools. Squantum Elementary, Atlantic Middle and North Quincy High School where she graduated in 2004.

Over a number of summers, she was also enrolled in summer enrichment programs. All in all, her experience in the classroom was second to none.

Quincy provides high quality public education with dedicated teachers who inspire children to grow.

The parents of school-age children can be proud of their public schools. It produces good results.

I am very proud of my daughter's academic achievements and of a public school system which made it all possible.

Asks Mayor Koch
To Look At South West Quincy Needs

It was good to see Mayor Koch here in West Quincy where he helped open and dedicate the lovely five unit apartment house for the homeless in Brewer's Corner, and at the same time celebrate Quincy's Community Development Block Grant Program.

The apartments are beautifully designed and architect's plan maximizes every available space. The former Methodist church, built by Swedish immigrants, is an excellent use of this old church by providing lovely apartments for folks who need a place of their own and get a fresh start in life.

While in West Quincy, I hope our Mayor had an opportunity to view the streets and sidewalks in Ward Four. Granite and Center Streets for example - are two main arteries used by heavy construction trucks, leading to and from Quincy Center and in South Quincy. These streets have not seen improvements for decades.

While bicycling, I noticed that there seem to be more potholes and crumbling sidewalks in West Quincy than in any other parts of the City. (I may be wrong as I have not biked in all parts of Quincy) Yet, West and South Quincy has one of the largest developments in the City, the Crown Colony, but as soon as you leave Crown Colony, there is a neighborhood begging for improvements.

West Quincy is one of the largest wards in the city, and it is the oldest and therefore the most historic one. It hosts the first Commercial Rail Road in US, the first iron blast furnace, the first Roman Catholic Church in Massachusetts, the site of the first Synagogue and not to forget the world renowned Granite Industry.

Now, with the stimulus money coming from Washington to cities and towns which are in dire need of streetscape improvements, I am certain that this administration is working hard to capture these funds, and focus on neighborhoods as well as the downtown development. The downtown development will also benefit if neighborhoods are cared for and get on the list of "shovel ready" improvements.

Next, let us look at South West Quincy, and its needs. These needs, I am sure are well documented and perhaps "shovel ready" in the City Planning Department.

Encourages Support For Wind Ordinance

As a coastal community, Quincy is blessed with good wind resources. These resources, along with federal and state support for renewable energy projects, have led to a number of proposals for wind energy facilities in the city.

To help ensure that good projects are built and bad ones prevented, it is important that the city establishes defined standards for development and regulates the impacts of wind energy facilities as soon as possible.

I encourage our councilors to pass the wind ordinance filed this week, and I encourage residents to attend the public meeting on May 11 at 6:30 pm in the City Council Chambers.

Affordable Housing Efforts Recognized

Federal Government Praises Quincy For Community Renewal

Mayor Thomas P. Koch and Planning Director Dennis E. Harrington received accolades from Kristine G. Foye, New England deputy regional director of the United States Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), during Quincy's celebration of national Community Development Week April 13-17.

Highlights of the week-long celebration included the grand opening of an affordable housing project sponsored by Quincy Community Action Programs, and the unveiling of the City's Language Assistance Plan. Sponsored by the Quincy Fair Housing Committee.

The affordable housing project, called "Housing First for Families", has created five new units of housing for very low-income homeless and "at-risk" families. Section 8 vouchers were awarded by the Mass. Department of Housing and Community Development and will allow tenants to pay just thirty percent of their gross monthly income toward rent. Tenants will receive case management services designed to connect them to resources that will foster successful tenancies, and help them achieve self-sufficiency.

The grand opening was celebrated April 14, on-site at 388 Granite St. The speaking portion of the program was held inside the Granite Street Café, located adjacent to the project.

"I want to add my congratulations to the city of Quincy and its local partners like Quincy Community Action Programs for their innovative use of CDBG funds for efforts like the Housing First initiative," said Cong. William D. Delahunt.

"The CDBG Program continues to be a centerpiece of community renewal in the country because it offers tremendous flexibility, local control and allows the cities to undertake projects that would be impossible to otherwise fund in the current fiscal environment."

"We at 'HUD' share Quincy's goal of helping individuals and families move beyond the cycle of homelessness," said Foye. "I am pleased to be able to congratulate the City...on another great project."

"Housing First' is an affordable housing model that has proven to be more effective than emergency or transitional shelter," said Mayor Thomas P. Koch. "The City of Quincy is a proud sponsor of this project in collaboration with the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and Quincy Community Action Programs. We are committed to providing a better quality of life for all of our residents."

"A project like this takes a lot of collaboration and partnership, and we at 'HUD' think Quincy leads the way and is a model in developing creative ways to partner between the City, community, and non-profits to make their housing programs work, and we're very proud to be a partner in that," said Foye.

The other main event during the weeklong celebration was the public unveiling of the City's Language Assistance Plan for individuals with "limited English proficiency" or "LEP". The City of Quincy will provide Federally-mandated program access to LEP individuals by contracting with an over-the-phone language interpretation provider.

most importantly, included opportunities for every Quincy resident to experience the benefits of community development block grant programs first hand."
